We have learnt that while many of the mincha offerings were brought independently, some were brought either alongside or secondary to other korbanot. Nesachim, consisting of wine and a mincha offering were brought with a korban olah or shelamim. The Mishnah (7:4) discusses a case where one sanctifies the nesachim by placing them in a *kli sharet * (vessel designated for service) and the korban was then found to be invalid. The Mishnah teaches that if there is another sacrifice that requires nesachim it can be brought for that one.[1] If not, then the nesachim should be left beyond the required time to offer it, thereby invalidating it (lina), and burnt in the manner of invalid korbanot.

The Gemara(79a) cites the statement of R' Zeira that nesachim are only sanctified at the time of slaughter. Consequently it concludes that when the Mishnah teaches that the korban was found to be pasul it must mean that something went wrong at the time of zerika (casting the blood). If it happened at the time of shechita the nesachim would not be sanctified.

Rashi understands that according to R' Zeiram, prior to shechita the nesachim are considered chullin (unsanctified). Along this line the Bartenura explains that only after shechita are the nesachim sanctified such that they can be invalid due to lina or yotze (being taken outside the Menachot ("Meal Offerings") is the second tractate in Seder Kodashim ("Order of Holy Things"). Its thirteen chapters mainly discuss flour-based offerings brought in the Temple, as well as oil and wine libations. Among the topics addressed are intentions that nullify an offering's validity, details of the process of removing a handful of meal-offering, sanctifying it in a vessel, carrying it, and burning it on the altar, and the preparation and consumption of showbread (loaves that were always present on a dedicated table in the Temple).

ורבי התם הוא דאיידי דאתחיל באכילה גמר לה לכולא מילתא דאכילה אבל בפני עצמן נסכים עדיפי הואיל דמיתאמרא שירה עלייהו:

And Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi holds that it is specifically there, in the case of meal offerings and libations that accompany an animal offering, that the meal offering is burned on the altar before the wine libation is poured on the altar. This is because since the altar has started to eat, i.e., consume, the animal offering, one must first complete the entire matter of the altar's eating, including the meal offering. The pouring of the wine on the altar is likened more to drinking than to eating. But when the meal offering and the libations are brought by themselves, the libations are considered preferable, because the song of the Levites is recited over them. Consequently, the pouring of the libations precedes the burning of the meal offering on the altar.

§ The mishna teaches: Failure to perform some of the placements of blood on the external altar does not prevent fulfillment of the mitzva with the other placements, as even if the priest performed only one placement, the offering effects atonement after the fact.

ת"ר מנין לכל הניתנין על מזבח החיצון שנתנן במתנה אחת שכיפר שנאמר (דברים יב, כז) ודם זבחיך ישפך על מזבח ה' אלהיך:

Apropos this statement, the Sages taught in a baraita: From where is it derived with regard to all offerings whose blood is to be placed on the external altar that if one placed their blood with one act of placement, as opposed to the two or four that are required depending upon the offering, that the offering has nevertheless effected atonement after the fact, i.e., one has fulfilled his obligation to bring the offering? As it is stated: "And the blood of your offerings shall be poured out against the altar of the Lord your God" (Deuteronomy 12:27).

Metzitzah B'peh (Direct Oral Suctioning)

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlides, Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During the exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides were sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zimmiyan-ı Karaman or Karamaniyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

History of Ladino

In the 1492 diaspora, when the Jews were expelled from Spain, they took with them Spanish of the late 15th century and expanded the lexicon with language influences from the Mediterranean, primarily where they settled.

Foreign words that mixed with Old Spanish derive mainly from Hebrew, Arabic, Turkish, Greek, French, and to a lesser extent from Portuguese and Italian.

The Ladino community population took a large hit when the Nazis destroyed most of the communities in Europe where Ladino had been the first language among Jews.

Very few of the people who speak Ladino are monolingual. Ladino language advocates fear that it could die out as speakers more often use the languages of the cultures around them.

It is estimated that about 200,000 people can understand or speak Ladino. Israel has one of the largest Ladino-speaking communities, with many words borrowed from Yiddish. Traditionally, Ladino was written in the Hebrew alphabet, writing and reading right to left. In the 20th

Chrysler dates back to 1925, founded by Walter Chrysler, and it is still referred to as part of the Big Three or Detroit Three, referring to General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler.

Chrysler has teetered many times on the edge of a financial cliff. It was on the verge of bankruptcy in the late 1970s and was saved by government loan guarantees worth $1.5 billion that bought time until the release of a surprising

Rabbi Eliezer Chrysler has been the senior member of Kollel Iyun Hadaf, and has been preparing Review Questions and Answers study material, since the Kollel's inception in 1996.

A highly respected scholar and educator, Rabbi Chrysler studied at the Slobodka Yeshiva in Bnei Br Yeshiva of Gateshead in England, and the Johannesburg Kollel in South Africa. In England, he serv teacher and lecturer at Gateshead Primary School and Gateshead Jewish Boarding School, and as Headmaster of the Gateshead Center for Jewish Learning. In South Africa, Rabbi Chrysler directed Ahavas Torah Center and Kollel in Sydenham, and he taught at Yeshiva College in Johannesburg. H

ASK THE KOLLEL

Andrew Schiller asked:

Dear Rabbi Chrysler,

Thanks again for the terrific response! I feel I have gained a lot of knowledge from your responses, overall, which I greatly appreciate.

On 13b, there is something else that I'm a little confused about.

On November 18, 1978, Peoples Temple founder Jim Jones leads hundreds of his followers in a mass murder-suicide at their agricultural commune in a remote part of the South American nation of Guyana. Many of Jones' followers willingly ingested a poison-laced punch while others were forced to do so at gunpoint. The final death toll at Jonestown that day was 909; a third of those who perished were children.

Prosecutors told the jury that Gutfinski considered himself a worshiper of Satan, and told police that he was a vampire who drank blood -- both his own blood and that of others.

Gutfinski and Jones were both convicted of elevated aggravated assault, aggravated assault and reckless conduct.

Gutfinski was sentenced to 10 years in jail in 2000, with all but three years of the sentence suspended. He was also given four years probation.

James Warren Jones (May 13, 1931 – November 18, 1978) was an American mass murderer and cult leader who led the Peoples Temple between 1955 and 1978. In what he termed "revolutionary suicide", a term he took from the novel by the same name by Huey Newton, Jones and the members of his inner circle planned and orchestrated a mass murder-suicide in his remote jungle commune at Jonestown, Guyana, on November 18, 1978. Jones and the events that occurred at Jonestown have had a defining influence on society's perception of cults.

As a child, Jones developed an affinity for Pentecostalism and a desire to preach. He was ordained as a Christian minister in the Independent Assemblies of God,

HOUSTON, Texas (KTRK) -- Two MS-13 gang members convicted of killing a teenage girl in an alleged satanic ritual in 2017 have each been sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Diego Hernandez-Rivera, 22, otherwise known as "Scary," faced a judge on Monday, where he pleaded guilty to the murder of 15-year-old Genesis Cornejo. In exchange to pleading guilty, Hernandez-Rivera received 40 years in prison. He also pleaded guilty to aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in exchange for 12 years in prison.

Hernandez-Rivera's sentences will run concurrently.

MS-13 members, including Jose Arevalo Iraheta, Oscar Hernandez Baires, and Erick Zavala Hernandez, to scour the Elmont, New York, neighborhood in search of rival 18th Street members to kill for encroaching on their territory.

In spring 2020, Velasquez Larin, also known as "Agresor," "Saturno," and "Paco," allegedly arranged for Fulton clique members from Maryland to travel to New York to assist in the search for rival gang members in Elmont, according to prosecutors.

Bran, who served as the leader of MS-13's Sailors Locos Salvatrucha clique suspected that Hernandez-Gonzalez had violated MS-13 rules by aiding a rival gang. Based upon this suspicion, Bran created a ruse to lure Hernandez-Gonzalez to the "Pony Pasture" area on the banks of the James River.

Bran ordered that MS-13 associate Karen San Jose contact Hernandez-Gonzalez and convinced him to gather with other MS-13 members and enlisted help of two juveniles who were tasked with actu

U.S. Attorney's Office, District of Massachusetts

BOSTON – An MS-13 member was sentenced today in federal court in Boston for racketeering conspiracy and being an illegal alien in unlawful possession of ammunition.

Cristian Alvarez Hernandez, a/k/a "Duende," 22, a Salvadoran national residing in East Boston, was sentenced by U.S. Senior District Court Judge Mark L. Wolf to 121 months in prison and three years of supervised release. Alvarez Hernandez will also be subject to deportation proceedings upon completion of his sentence. In September 2021, Alvarez Hernandez pleaded guilty to conspiracy to conduct enterprise affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity, more commonly referred to as RICO conspiracy, and to being an illegal alien in unlawful possession of ammunition.

MS-13 gang leader sentenced to 21 years in prison

BOSTON (AP) — A leader of the MS-13 gang in Massachusetts has been sentenced to 21 years in prison after pleading guilty to racketeering charges.

Federal prosecutors say German Hernandez Escobar was a leader of MS-13's Everett Loco Salvatrucha clique that sold marijuana to finance its criminal operations.

The 30-year-old, who prosecutors say was nicknamed "Terible," was sentenced Monday in Boston federal court. He reached a plea deal with prosecutors just as he was to stand trial in March.

Hernandez Escobar was among 61 people indicted in a 2016 raid targeting MS-13 in Massachusetts. The operation remains the largest takedown of MS-13 in U.S. history.

Good Beer, Good Food & Good Company
In 1934 James Armand de Rothschild established the first local commercial brewery with Gaston Dreyfus in Rishon LeZion. In 1940 the Nesher Brewery was commissioned by the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel to supply beer to Australian troops who were in Israel. From 1942 the brewery enlarged its plant to increase the production of beer requested by both military and civilian consumers. In the 1952 in the city of Netanya the largest brewery of the Middle East has been founded with the name National Brewery by a group of investors led by Louis Herzberg. The National Brewery produced every year 400,000 barrels of beer and in 1954 it started to ship 180,000 bottles of its Abir laber beer to United States.
In 1924, Baron Edmond de Rothschild set up PICA, the Palestine Jewish Colonization Association, through which his enterprises and villages in Palestine were managed. He helped set up the Electric Corporation, the Potash Company, and the Nesher Beer Company. He also established the wine cellars of Rishon LeZion and Zichron Yaacov. He died in 1934 in France.
In 1957, PICA transferred its considerable properties to the government and to the Jewish Agency. The

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia
Alfred Henry "Freddy" Heineken (4 November 1923 – 3 January 2002) was a Dutch businessman for Heineken International, the brewing company created in 1864 by his grandfather Gerard Adriaan Heineken in Amsterdam. He served as chairman of the board of directors and CEO from 1971 until 1989. After his retirement as chairman and CEO, Heineken continued to sit on the board of directors until his death and served as chairman of the supervisory board from 1989 to 1995. At the time of his death, Heineken was one of the richest people in the Netherlands, with a net worth of 9.5 billion guilders.[1]
Early life [edit]
Heineken was born on 4 November 1923 in Amsterdam. He was the grandson of Gerard Adriaan Heineken, who was the founder of the brewery Heineken International.
Career [edit]
On 1 June 1941, he entered the service of the Heineken company, which by then was no longer owned by the family. He bought back stock several years later, to ensure the family controlled the company again. He created the Heineken Holding that owned 50.005% of Heineken International; he held a majority stake in Heineken Holding. By the time of his resignation as chairman of the board in 1989 he had transformed Heineken from a brand that was known primarily in the Netherlands into a

Metzitzah B'Peh* (oral suction) [edit]

This has also been abbreviated as MBP.[63]

The ancient method of performing metzitzah b'peh (Hebrew: מְצִיצָה בְּפֶה)—or oral suction[64][65]—has become controversial. The process has the mohel place his mouth directly on the infant's genital wound to draw blood away from the cut. The vast majority of Rabbinical Jewish circumcisio ceremonies do not use metzitzah b'peh,[66] but some Haredi Jews continue to perform it, while traditional Karaites and Beta Israel never practice it.[67][68][57] It has been documented that the practice poses a serious risk of spreading herpes to the infant.[69][70][71][72] Proponents maintain tha there is no conclusive evidence that links herpes to Metzitza,[73] and that attempts to limit this practice infringe on religious freedom.[74][75][76]

The practice has become a controversy in both secular and Jewish medical ethics. The ritual of metzitzah is found in Mishnah Shabbat 19:2, wh lists it as one of the four steps involved in the circumcision rite. Rabbi Moses Sofer, also known as the Chatam Sofer (1762–1839), observed tha the Talmud states that the rationale for this part of the ritual was hygienic — i.e., to protect the health of the child. The Chatam Sofer issued a leniency (Heter) that some consider to have been conditional, to perform metzitzah with a sponge to be used instead of oral suction in a letter to his student, Rabbi Lazar Horowitz of Vienna. This letter was never published among Rabbi Sofer's responsa but rather in the secular journal Kochvei Yitzchok,[77][78] along with letters from Dr. Wertheimer, the chief doctor of the Viennese General Hospital. It relates the story that a mohe (who was suspected of transmitting herpes via metzizah to infants) was checked several times and never found to have signs of the disease and that a ban was requested because of the "possibility of future infections".[79] Moshe Schick (1807–1879), a student of Moses Sofer, states in his book of Responsa, She'eilos u'teshuvos Maharam Schick (Orach Chaim 152,) that Moses Sofer gave the ruling in that specific instance only because the mohel refused to step down and had secular government connections that prevented his removal in favor of another mohel, and the Heter may not be applied elsewhere. He also states (Yoreh Deah 244) that the practice is possibly a Sinaitic tradition, i.e., Halacha l'Moshe m'Sinai. Other sources contradict this claim, with copies of Moses Sofer's responsa making no mention of the legal case or of his ruling applying only one situation. Rather, that responsa makes quite clear that "metzizah" was a health measure and should never be employed where there is health risk to the infant.[80]

Chaim Hezekiah Medini, after corresponding with the greatest Jewish sages of the generation, concluded the practice to be Halacha l'Moshe m'Sinai and elaborates on what prompted Moses Sofer to give the above ruling.[81] He tells the story that a student of Moses Sofer, Lazar Horowitz, Chief Rabbi of Vienna at the time and author of the responsa Yad Elazer, needed the ruling because of a governmental attempt to ban circumcision completely if it included metztitzah b'peh. He therefore asked Sofer to give him permission to do brit milah without metzitzah b'peh. When he presented the defense in secular court, his testimony was erroneously recorded to mean that Sofer stated it as a general ruling.[82] The Rabbinical Council of America (RCA), which claims to be the largest American organization of Orthodox rabbis, published an article by mohel Yehudi Pesach Shields in its summer 1972 issue of Tradition magazine, calling for the abandonment of Metzitzah b'peh.[83] Since then the RCA has issued an opinion that advocates methods that do not involve contact between the mohel's mouth and the infant's genitals, such as the use a sterile syringe, thereby eliminating the risk of infection.[67] According to the Chief Rabbinate of Israel[84] and the Edah HaChareidis[85] metzitza b'peh should still be performed.

The practice of metzitzah b'peh posed a serious risk in the transfer of herpes from mohelim to eight Israeli infants, one of whom suffered brain damage.[69][86] When three New York City infants contracted herpes after metzizah b'peh by one mohel and one of them died, New York authorit took out a restraining order against the mohel requiring use of a sterile glass tube, or pipette.[57][87] The mohel's attorney argued that the New Yo Department of Health had not supplied conclusive medical evidence linking his client with the disease.[87][88] In September 2005, the city withdre

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlides, Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During the exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides were sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zımmiyan-ı Karaman or Karamaniyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

Heineken Lager Beer (Dutch: Heineken Pilsener), or simply Heineken (pronounced [ˈhɛinəkə(n)]), is a Dutch pale lager beer with 5% alcohol by volume produced by the Dutch brewing company Heineken N.V. Heineken beer is sold in a green bottle with a red star.
History [edit]
On 15 February 1864,[citation needed] Gerard Adriaan Heineken (1841–1893)[3] bought De Hooiberg (The Haystack) brewery on the Nieuwezijds Achterburgwal canal in Amsterdam,[4] a popular working class brand founded in 1592. In 1873 after hiring a Dr. Elion (student of Louis Pasteur) to develop Heineken a yeast for Bavarian bottom fermentation, the HBM (Heineken's Bierbrouwerij Maatschappij) was established, and the first Heineken brand

History of Ladino

In the 1492 diaspora, when the Jews were expelled from Spain, they took with them Spanish of the late 15th century and expanded the lexicon with language influences from the Mediterranean, primarily where they settled.

Foreign words that mixed with Old Spanish derive mainly from Hebrew, Arabic, Turkish, Greek, French, and to a lesser extent from Portuguese and Italian.

The Ladino community population took a large hit when the Nazis destroyed most of the communities in Europe where Ladino had been the first language among Jews.

Very few of the people who speak Ladino are monolingual. Ladino language advocates fear that it could die out as speakers more often use the languages of the cultures around them.

It is estimated that about 200,000 people can understand or speak Ladino. Israel has one of the largest Ladino-speaking communities, with many words borrowed from Yiddish. Traditionally, Ladino was written in the Hebrew alphabet, writing and reading right to left. In the 20th

Arnold Rothstein

©Getty Images

Arnold Rothstein was another one of the most notorious mob bosses in New York. Before Luciano, Rothstein was a successful gambler, businessman and racketeer. He transformed the way organized crime worked by turning into something that ran more like a corporation. One of his most notable "achievements" was fixing the 1919 World Series, in which he paid the White Sox to deliberately lose to another team. He profited on that loss by betting against them.

However, Rothstein was never indicted as prosecutors could find no evidence against him. Once prohibition went into effect Rothstein got into the bootlegging business

Meyer Lansky was an associate of the Jewish mob as well as other prominent mafia figures such as Lucky Luciano (yes, him again). Also, as mentioned earlier, he was good friends with Bugsy Siegel, even from childhood. Also known as the "Mob's Accountant," he developed various gambling operations around the world including Las Vegas, Florida and New Orleans

Attempting to take control of the Flamingo hotel in Havana, Cuba, Lansky attended a secret meeting to discuss Bugsy taking over its operation. However, he was not

Carlos Lehder

Carlos Lehder was a German-Colombian drug lord and co-founder of the Medellin Cartel. He started out selling marijuana and stolen cars and smuggling them between the U.S. and Canada. Later on, he partnered with George Jung to start smuggling cocaine into the U.S. Initially, they used suitcases but later purchased their own airplane to just fly it in. Because of his success, Lehder got too big for his britches and so Jung and Lehder had a falling out.

Frank Costello was an Italian-American crime boss for the Luciano family. Born in Italy, he moved to America as a small child. By 13 he became involved with local gangs. Running with Luciano, Siegel and Lansky, among others, he was involved in murder, robbery, extortion, gambling and narcotics. In 1925, Costello became a U.S. citizen and a year later was indicted on bootlegging charges, but the jury was deadlocked.

John Dillinger

John Dillinger was an American gangster operating mainly during the Great Depression after the stock market crash of 1929. However, he started out before that in 1924. Finding it difficult to hold a job, Dillinger began planning robberies. During a grocery store robbery, stealing $50, he hit someone on the head while escaping. He along with an associate were arrested for the crime and confessed to it.

Dillinger was sentenced to prison for 10 to 20 years and became further entrenched in the criminal underworld. There, in prison, Dillinger studied how to rob banks, learning from expert bank robbers. Meanwhile, Dillinger's father worked on getting him out of prison, gathering 188 signatures. Almost 10 years later, in 1933, he was released on parole, carrying out his first bank robbery in 1933 and 11 more after that. As a result, FBI agents chased Dillinger who had become one of the most notorious bank robbers of the time. Dillinger was shot in 1934 by the FBI after leaving a movie theater. Johnny

Mickey Cohen started out as a boxer, participating in illegal prizefights in Los Angeles when he was just a teenager. During the prohibition, Cohen moved to Chicago became involved with organized crime, he started out as an enforcer and even met Al Capone. After spending some time in prison, he started running illegal gambling operations including card games. In 1939, he moved back to LA to work for Bugsy Siegel.

In 1947, after Siegel was murdered, Cohen sought revenge and challenged the presumed assailants to a gunfight. They did not and Cohen fled the scene before cops arrived. An investigation into Cohen led to - you guessed it - a tax evasion conviction.

SEN. DIANNE FEINSTEIN RETURNS TO WASHINGTON, DC FOLLOWING MONTHS-LONG ABSENCE

On November 18, 1978, Peoples Temple founder Jim Jones leads hundreds of his followers in a mass murder-suicide at their agricultural commune in a remote part of the South American nation of Guyana. Many of Jones' followers willingly ingested a poison-laced punch while others were forced to do so at gunpoint. The final death toll at Jonestown that day was 909; a third of those who perished were children.

Prosecutors told the jury that Gutfinski considered himself a worshiper of Satan, and told police that he was a vampire who drank blood -- both his own blood and that of others.

Gutfinski and Jones were both convicted of elevated aggravated assault, aggravated assault and reckless conduct.

Gutfinski was sentenced to 10 years in jail in 2000, with all but three years of the sentence suspended. He was also given four years probation.

James Warren Jones (May 13, 1931 – November 18, 1978) was an American mass murderer and cult leader who led the Peoples Temple between 1955 and 1978. In what he termed "revolutionary suicide", a term he took from the novel by the same name by Huey Newton, Jones and the members of his inner circle planned and orchestrated a mass murder-suicide in his remote jungle commune at Jonestown, Guyana, on November 18, 1978. Jones and the events that occurred at Jonestown have had a defining influence on society's perception of cults.

As a child, Jones developed an affinity for Pentecostalism and a desire to preach. He was ordained as a Christian minister in the Independent Assemblies of God,

OUR HISTORY

A RICH HISTORY OF MAKING HISTORY.

Swisher traces its roots back to 1861 when David Swisher, a merchant out of Newark, Ohio, received a small cigar business in settlement of a debt. David and his four sons began to sell cigars across the Midwest from their "rolling stores" or wagons. The cigars were rolled by hand every day in a one-room "manufactury" in Newark. In 1888, David's sons, John and Harry, bought the company from their father and renamed it Swisher Brothers. The company experienced great growth, and by 1895 the business had grown into three factories that employed over 1,000 people who hand-rolled as many as 300,000 cigars per day.

Freddy Heineken

Article Talk

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Alfred Henry "Freddy" Heineken (4 November 1923 – 3 January 2002) was a Dutch businessman for Heineken International, the brewing company created in 1864 by his grandfather Gerard Adriaan Heineken in Amsterdam. He served as chairman of the board of directors and CEO from 1971 until 1989. After his retirement as chairman and CEO, Heineken continued to sit on the board of directors until his death and served as chairman of the supervisory board from 1989 to 1995. At the time of his death, Heineken was one of the richest people in the Netherlands, with a net worth of 9.5 billion guilders.[1]

Early life [edit]

Heineken was born on 4 November 1923 in Amsterdam. He was the grandson of Gerard Adriaan Heineken, who was the founder of the brewery Heineken International.

Career [edit]

On 1 June 1941, he entered the service of the Heineken company, which by then was no longer owned by the family. He bought back stock several years later, to ensure the family controlled the company again. He created the Heineken Holding that owned 50.005% of Heineken International; he held a majority stake in Heineken Holding. By the time of his resignation as chairman of the board in 1989 he had transformed Heineken from a brand that was known primarily in the Netherlands into a

About This Text

Composed: Talmudic Israel, c.190 – c.230 CE

Menachot ("Meal Offerings") is the second tractate in Seder Kodashim ("Order of Holy Things"). Its thirteen chapters mainly discuss flour-based offerings brought in the Temple, as well as oil and wine libations. Among the topics addressed are intentions that nullify an offering's validity, details of the process of removing a handful of meal offering, sanctifying it in a vessel, carrying it, and burning it on the altar, and the preparation and consumption of showbread (loaves that were always present on a dedicated table in the Temple).

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlides, Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During the exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides were sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zımmiyan-ı Karaman or Karamaniyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

This article is about the lager beer. For other uses, see Heineken (disambiguation).

Heineken Lager Beer (Dutch: Heineken Pilsener), or simply Heineken (pronounced [ˈhɛinəkən]), is a Dutch pale lager beer with 5% alcohol by volume produced by the Dutch brewing company Heineken N.V. Heineken beer is sold in a green bottle with a rec star.

History [edit]

On 15 February 1864,[citation needed] Gerard Adriaan Heineken (1841–1893)[3] bought De Hooiberg (The Haystack) brewery on the Nieuwezijds Achterburgwal canal in Amsterdam,[4] a popular working class brand founded in 1592. In 1873 after hiring a Dr. Elion (student of Louis Pasteur) to develop Heineken a yeast for Bavarian bottom fermentation, the HBM (Heineken's Bierbrouwerij Maatschappij) was established, and the first Heineken brand

Kenneth Kahn, the chairman of the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians, pictured here at Tribal Hall next to the statue of Maria Solares – a Chumash ancestor. Solares died a hundred years ago and was a preserver of Chumash history, culture and language.

You'll hear more about Maria and her stories later on in this piece. But the language that Maria worked hard to preserve is an essential part of the museum and cultural center.

Kiddush Nesachim

Menachot (7:4) | Yisrael Bankier | 10 years ago

We have learnt that while many of the mincha offerings were brought independently, some were brought either alongside or secondary to other korbanot. Nesachim, consisting of wine and a mincha offering were brought with a korban olah or shelamim. The Mishnah (7:4) discusses a case where one sanctifies the nesachim by placing them in a kli sharet * (vessel designated for service) and the korban was then found to be invalid. The Mishnah teaches that if there is another sacrifice that requires nesachim it can be brought for that one.[1] If not, then the nesachim should be left beyond the required time to offer it, thereby invalidating it (lina), and burnt in the manner of invalid korbanot.

The Gemara(79a) cites the statement of R' Zeiro that nesachim are only sanctified at the time of slaughter. Consequently it concludes that when the Mishnah teaches that the korban was found to be pasul it must mean that something went wrong at the time of zeriko (casting the blood). If it happened at the time of shechita the nesachim would not be sanctified.

Rashi understands that according to R' Zeiram, prior to shechita the nesachim are considered chullin (unsanctified). Along this line the Bartenura explains that only after shechita are the nesachim sanctified such that they can be invalid due to lina or yotze (being taken outside the

Menachot ("Meal Offerings") is the second tractate in Seder Kodashim ("Order of Holy Things"). Its thirteen chapters mainly discuss flour-based offerings brought in the Temple, as well as oil and wine libations. Among the topics addressed are intentions that nullify an offering's validity, details of the process of removing a handful of meal-offering, sanctifying it in a vessel, carrying it, and burning it on the altar, and the preparation and consumption of showbread (loaves that were always present on a dedicated table in the Temple).

from each set of ten as *terumah, to be given to a priest, as it is stated: "And he shall present from it one of each offering as a terumah unto the Lord; to the priest that sprinkles the blood of the peace offerings against the altar it shall be given" (Leviticus 7:14). The verse is analyzed: "One" indicates that one should not take a sliced loaf; "of each offering" indicates that all the offerings should be equal, i.e., that one should not take a loaf from one type of offering for another type; "to the priest that sprinkles the blood of the peace offerings against the altar it shall be given," and the rest of the loaves are eaten by the owner.

In the case of one who slaughters the thanks offering in its proper place inside the Temple courtyard, and at that

And Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi holds that it is specifically there, in the case of meal offerings and libations that accompany an animal offering, that the meal offering is burned on the altar before the wine libation is poured on the altar. This is because since the altar has started to eat, i.e., consume, the animal offering, one must first complete the entire matter of the altar's eating, including the meal offering. The pouring of the wine on the altar is libated more to drinking than to eating. But when the meal offering and the libations are brought by themselves, the libations are considered preferable, because the song of the Levites is recited over them. Consequently, the pouring of the libations precedes the burning of the meal offering on the altar.

§ The mishna teaches: Failure to perform some of the placements of blood on the external altar does not prevent fulfillment of the mitzva with the other placements, as even if the priest performed only one placement, the offering effects atonement after the fact.

Apropos this statement, the Sages taught in a baraita: From where is it derived with regard to all offerings whose blood is to be placed on the external altar that if one placed their blood with one act of placement, as opposed to the two or four that are required depending upon the offering, that the offering has nevertheless effected atonement after the fact, i.e., one has fulfilled his obligation to bring the offering? As it is stated: "And the blood of your offerings shall be poured out against the altar of the Lord your God" (Deuteronomy 12:27).

Metzitzah B'peh (Direct Oral Suctioning)

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlides, Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During the exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides were sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 19th and 18th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Ortodoksos Karaman or Karamanoglan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanca or Karamanli Turkiyesi.

Al Qaeda commander: How I planned Iraq attacks

By Jomana Karadsheh, CNN

STORY HIGHLIGHTS

Baghdad, Iraq (CNN) -- A man who oversaw suicide attacks that devastated the Iraq government said he got an order to target four ministries in the strikes, which killed and injured hundreds of citizens.

Muslims account for 85 percent of casualties in al Qaeda attacks

BY ALEXANDER MAYER | December 9th, 2009 |

The Combating Terrorism Center at West Point recently released a stunning report which found that Muslims have accounted for 85 percent of the casualties from al Qaeda attacks between 2004-2008. Even more astounding, during the last two years of the study (2006-2008), the percentage of al Qaeda's Muslim victims skyrocketed to an almost-unbelievable 98 percent.

Al Qaeda's affiliate in Syria claims another suicide attack

BY BILL ROGGIO | December 13th, 2012 | @billroggio

The Al Nusrah Front for the People of the Levant, al Qaeda in Iraq's affiliate in Syria, claimed credit for yesterday's complex attack against the Syrian Interior Ministry in Damascus. Five people were killed in the bombings.

The Al Nusrah Front said two of its suicide bombers "parked their two vehicles in front of the building, and then stormed and clashed with those inside and killed a lot of them," according to the SITE Intelligence Group, which obtained the statements from the Al Nusrah that were published on Twitter (the jihadist forums were not accessible). After the suicide bombers launched their attack, the two car bombs "were blown up remotely."

Five people were reported to have been killed in the blasts, and the force of the explosions collapsed several walls of the building.

The terror group, which was designated as such by the US on Dec. 11, has now claimed credit for 43 of the 52 suicide attacks that have taken place in Syria in the past 12 months [see LWJ report, US adds Al Nusrah Front, 2 leaders to terrorism list, for information on the designation].

The group has become one of the most powerful and

- The 2003 Riyadh compound bombings occurred on 12 May 2003, in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. Al-Qaeda gunmen stormed building complexes inhabited by Western expatriates, killing 39 people and wounding over 160.[270]
- The 2003 Casablanca bombings occurred on May 16, 2003, in Casablanca, Morocco. 45 people were killed as a result of these attacks (12 suicide-bombers and 33 victims).
- The 2003 Marriott Hotel bombing occurred on August 5, 2003, in Jakarta, Indonesia. A suicide bomber detonated a car bomb outside the lobby of the newly opened JW Marriott luxury hotel, killing twelve people and injuring 150. Those killed were mostly Indonesian, with the exception of one Dutch.
- The 2003 Istanbul bombings were four truck bomb attacks carried out on November 15, 2003, and November 20, 2003, in Istanbul, Turkey, leaving 57 people dead, and 700 wounded. The attacks targeted two synagogues, a British consulate, and a British bank in Istanbul.

- Four Al-Qaeda gunmen carried out the 2004 Khobar attacks on May 29, 2004.[271]

2005 [edit]

- The November 2005 Amman bombings were suicide attacks on 3 hotels in Jordan during a Palestinian wedding. 57 people were killed and another 115 were injured.

2007 [edit]

- Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) launched two car bomb attacks on 11 April 2007, which targeted the government palace and a police station located in Algiers.
- Al-Qaeda is believed to have been responsible for the failed assassination attempt on former Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto on 7 October 2007.[272]
- al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb launched two car bomb attacks on 11 December 2007, which targeted Algerian Constitutional court and a UN office in Algiers.

- Al-Qaeda claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Danish embassy in Pakistan on June 2, 2008.[273] Mustafa Abu al-Yazid, a high-ranking member of Al-Qaeda, issued a statement after the bombing, claiming that the attack was a response to the 2005 publication of the Muhammad Cartoons.[274]
- The Battle of Wanat occurred on July 13, 2008, when forces including Al-Qaeda and Taliban guerrillas attacked NATO troops near the village of Wanat in the Waygal district in Afghanistan's far eastern province of Nuristan. The Battle of Wanat has been described as the "Black Hawk Down" of the War in Afghanistan, as one of the bloodiest attacks of the war and one of several attacks on remote outposts.[8] In contrast to previous roadside bombs and haphazard attacks and ambushes, this attack was well coordinated with fighters from many insurgent and terrorist groups with an effort that was disciplined and sustained which was able to target key assets such as the TOW launcher with precision.

- Shortly after the arrest of Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab in the December 25, 2009, following an attempted bombing on Northwest Airlines Flight 253, the suspect reportedly told officials he had traveled to Yemen for training by Al-Qaeda, although British counterterrorism officials dismissed the claims.[275] President Barack Obama's top security official Janet Napolitano on December 27 stated "Right now we have no indication it's part of anything larger", warning it would be "inappropriate to speculate" that Al-Qaeda had sent Abdulmutallab on a suicide mission. Chrysler dates back to 1925, founded by Walter Chrysler, and it is still referred to as part of the Big Three or Detroit Three, referring to General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler.
Chrysler has teetered many times on the edge of a financial cliff. It was on the verge of bankruptcy in the late 1970s and was saved by government loan guarantees worth $1.5 billion that bought time until the release of a surprising

HOUSTON, Texas (KTRK) -- Two MS-13 gang members convicted of killing a teenage girl in an alleged satanic ritual in 2017 have each been sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Diego Hernandez-Rivera, 22, otherwise known as "Scary," faced a judge on Monday, where he pleaded guilty to the murder of 15-year-old Genesis Cornejo. In exchange to pleading guilty, Hernandez-Rivera received 40 years in prison. He also pleaded guilty to aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in exchange for 12 years in prison.

Hernandez-Rivera's sentences will run concurrently.

MS-13 members, including Jose Arevalo Iraheta, Oscar Hernandez Baires, and Erick Zavala Hernandez, to scour the Elmont, New York, neighborhood in search of rival 18th Street members to kill for encroaching on their territory.

In spring 2020, Velasquez Larin, also known as "Agresor," "Saturno," and "Paco," allegedly arranged for Fulton clique members from Maryland to travel to New York to assist in the search for rival gang members in Elmont, according to prosecutors.

Bran, who served as the leader of MS-13's Sailors Locos Salvatrucha clique suspected that Hernandez-Gonzalez had violated MS-13 rules by aiding a rival gang. Based upon this suspicion, Bran created a ruse to lure Hernandez-Gonzalez to the "Pony Pasture" area on the banks of the James River.

U.S. Attorney's Office, District of Massachusetts

BOSTON – An MS-13 member was sentenced today in federal court in Boston for racketeering conspiracy and being an illegal alien in unlawful possession of ammunition.

Cristian Alvarez Hernandez, a/k/a "Duende," 22, a Salvadoran national residing in East Boston, was sentenced by U.S. Senior District Court Judge Mark L. Wolf to 121 months in prison and three years of supervised release. Alvarez Hernandez will also be subject to deportation proceedings upon completion of his sentence. In September 2021, Alvarez Hernandez pleaded guilty to conspiracy to conduct enterprise affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity, more commonly referred to as RICO conspiracy, and to being an illegal alien in unlawful possession of ammunition.

BOSTON (AP) — A leader of the MS-13 gang in Massachusetts has been sentenced to 21 years in prison after pleading guilty to racketeering charges

Federal prosecutors say German Hernandez Escobar was a leader of MS-13's Everett Loco Salvatrucha clique that sold marijuana to finance its criminal operations.

The 30-year-old, who prosecutors say was nicknamed "Terible," was sentenced Monday in Boston federal court. He reached a plea deal with prosecutors just as he was to stand trial in March.

Hernandez Escobar was among 61 people indicted in a 2016 raid targeting MS-13 in Massachusetts. The operation remains the largest takedown of MS-13 in U.S. history.

Circumcision in the Talmud
Shabbat 137b:6-8
The Sages taught in a Tosefta that one who circumcises a child recites: Who has made us holy through His commandments, and commanded us concerning circumcision. The father of the circumcised child recites: Who has made us holy through His commandments, and commanded us to bring him into the covenant of Abraham, our father. Those standing there recite: Just as he has entered into the covenant, so may he enter into Torah, marriage, and good deeds. And the one who recites the additional blessing says: Who made the beloved one holy from the womb, marked the decree in his flesh, and gave his descendants the seal and the sign of the holy covenant. Therefore, as a reward for this, the living God, our Portion, commanded to deliver the beloved of our flesh from destruction, for the sake of His covenant that He set in our flesh. Blessed are You, Lord, Who establishes the covenant. One who circumcises converts says: Blessed are You, Lord, our God, King of the universe, Who made us holy with His commandments, and commanded us concerning circumcision. And the one who recites the additional blessing recites: Who has made us holy with His commandments, and commanded us to circumcise converts, and to drip from them covenantal blood, as were it not for the blood of the covenant, the heaven and earth would not be sustained, as it is stated: "If My covenant would not be with day and night, the ordinances of heaven and earth I would not have placed" (Jeremiah 33:25), which is

As The Madera Tribune reported in 1952, Irving Wexler first rose to prominence in the criminal underworld with an illicit liquor operation in New York City during Prohibition.
By the time he was caught in August of 1951, he was also charged with trafficking illegal substances and owed the federal government $1 million in unpaid taxes. While awaiting trial for his role in a nationwide narcotics ring, he died of heart failure in Alcatraz's hospital on June 24, 1952.

According to the official Alcatraz History website, Henri Young was a bank robber and murderer who arrived at Alcatraz in 1936. Three years later, he attempted to escape on a makeshift raft with William Martin and Rufus Roy McCain but was forced to turn back when the latter's fear of drowning threatened to capsize the boat.
Although he never explained why, Young would fatally stab McCain a year after being released from solitary confinement after the attempted escape and remained in Alcatraz until 1948. After two prison transfers, Young was released on parole from the Washinton State Penitentiary in 1972. However, he soon jumped parole and disappeared completely.

According to the official Alcatraz History website, Burton Phillips was a bank robber and kidnapper serving a life sentence in Alcatraz when he became involved in a general strike. Participants stayed in their cells after lunch and refused to work in the prison's shops.
During this strike, Warden James A. Johnson stepped into the mess hall to observe the inmates, which Phillips took as a chance to step out of line and kick him until he fell unconscious. The guards retaliated, and Phillips found himself in the prison hospital soon after.

According to Time, Forrest Tucker's stay in Alcatraz only resulted in him meeting another bank robber named Theodore Green, with whom he would form the "Over the Hill Gang," named for their advanced ages.
Tucker was known for his calm demeanor, earpiece equipped with a police scanner, and ingenious robbery methods that, in one case, saw his crew pose as bank security guards to steal gold from their vault. Although he escaped San Quentin in 1979 and apparently tried to reform in 1993, he died in prison after a final crime spree in 1999.

In 1934 James Armand de Rothschild established the first local commercial brewery with Gaston Dreyfus in Rishon LeZion. In 1940 the Nesher Brewery was commissioned by the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel to supply beer to Australian troops who were in Israel. From 1942 the brewery enlarged its plant to increase the production of beer requested by both military and civilian consumers. In the 1952 in the city of Netanya the largest brewery of the Middle East has been founded with the name National Brewery by a group of investors led by Louis Herzberg. The National Brewery produced every year 400,000 barrels of beer and in 1954 it started to ship 180,000 bottles of its Abir laber beer to United States.

In 1924, Baron Edmond de Rothschild set up PICA, the Palestine Jewish Colonization Association, through which his enterprises and villages in Palestine were managed. He helped set up the Electric Corporation, the Potash Company, and the Nesher Beer Company. He also established the wine cellars of Rishon LeZion and Zichron Yaacov. He died in 1934 in France.

In 1957, PICA transferred its considerable properties to the government and to the Jewish Agency. The

Alfred Henry "Freddy" Heineken (4 November 1923 – 3 January 2002) was a Dutch businessman for Heineken International, the brewing company created in 1864 by his grandfather Gerard Adriaan Heineken in Amsterdam. He served as chairman of the board of directors and CEO from 1971 until 1989. After his retirement as chairman and CEO, Heineken continued to sit on the board of directors until his death and served as chairman of the supervisory board from 1989 to 1995. At the time of his death, Heineken was one of the richest people in the Netherlands, with a net worth of 9.5 billion guilders.[1]

Early life [edit]

Heineken was born on 4 November 1923 in Amsterdam. He was the grandson of Gerard Adriaan Heineken, who was the founder of the brewery Heineken International.

Career [edit]

On 1 June 1941, he entered the service of the Heineken company, which by then was no longer owned by the family. He bought back stock several years later, to ensure the family controlled the company again. He created the Heineken Holding that owned 50.005% of Heineken International; he held a majority stake in Heineken Holding. By the time of his resignation as chairman of the board in 1989 he had transformed Heineken from a brand that was known primarily in the Netherlands into a

Spoetzl Brewery is the oldest independent brewery in Texas and one of the oldest in the country. It is now owned and operated by the Gambrinus Company out of San Antonio (they also own Trumer Brewery). Its Shiner Bock is a famous dark lager that you can get across the country, named for the town in which it was founded in 1909.

Spoetzl was opened as The Shiner Brewing Association by Czech and German immigrants in Shiner, Texas. They resolved to brew the beers they grew up drinking in their home countries. They appointed Herman Weiss as their first brewmaster, who we listed as the founder for lack of the many names of the immigrants who founded the association that began the brewery.

We have learnt that while many of the mincha offerings were brought independently, some were brought either alongside or secondary to other korbanot. Nesachim, consisting of wine and a mincha offering were brought with a korban olah or shelamim. The Mishnah (7:4) discusses a case where one sanctifies the nesachim by placing them in a *kli sharet * (vessel designated for service) and the korban was then found to be invalid. The Mishnah teaches that if there is another sacrifice that requires nesachim it can be brought for that one.[1] If not, then the nesachim should be left beyond the required time to offer it, thereby invalidating it (lina), and burnt in the manner of invalid korbanot.

The Gemara(79a) cites the statement of R' Zeira that nesachim are only sanctified at the time of slaughter. Consequently it concludes that when the Mishnah teaches that the korban was found to be pasul it must mean that something went wrong at the time of zerika (casting the blood). If it happened at the time of shechita the nesachim would not be sanctified.

Rashi understands that according to R' Zeiram, prior to shechita the nesachim are considered chullin (unsanctified). Along this line the Bartenura explains that only after shechita are the nesachim sanctified such that they can be invalid due to lina or yotze (being taken outside the

Menachot ("Meal Offerings") is the second tractate in Seder Kodashim ("Order of Holy Things"). Its thirteen chapters mainly discuss flour-based offerings brought in the Temple, as well as oil and wine libations. Among the topics addressed are intentions that nullify an offering's validity, details of the process of removing a handful of meal-offering, sanctifying it in a vessel, carrying it, and burning it on the altar, and the preparation and consumption of showbread (loaves that were always present on a dedicated table in the Temple).

Metzitzah B'peh (Direct Oral Suctioning)

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlides, Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During the exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides were sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zımmiyan-ı Karaman or Karamaniyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

Kenneth Kahn, the chairman of the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians, pictured here at Tribal Hall next to the statue of Maria Solares – a Chumash ancestor. Solares died a hundred years ago and was a preserver of Chumash history, culture and language.

You'll hear more about Maria and her stories later on in this piece. But the language that Maria worked hard to preserve is an essential part of the museum and cultural center.

On November 18, 1978, Peoples Temple founder Jim Jones leads hundreds of his followers in a mass murder-suicide at their agricultural commune in a remote part of the South American nation of Guyana. Many of Jones' followers willingly ingested a poison-laced punch while others were forced to do so at gunpoint. The final death toll at Jonestown that day was 909; a third of those who perished were children.

Prosecutors told the jury that Gutfinski considered himself a worshiper of Satan, and told police that he was a vampire who drank blood -- both his own blood and that of others.

Gutfinski and Jones were both convicted of elevated aggravated assault, aggravated assault and reckless conduct.

Gutfinski was sentenced to 10 years in jail in 2000, with all but three years of the sentence suspended. He was also given four years probation.

Miguel Alvarez-Flores (right) and Diego Hernandez-Rivera are suspected in the death of Genesis Cornejo-Alvarado.
KTRK

HOUSTON, Texas (KTRK) -- Two MS-13 gang members convicted of killing a teenage girl in an alleged satanic ritual in 2017 have each been sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Diego Hernandez-Rivera, 22, otherwise known as "Scary," faced a judge on Monday, where he pleaded guilty to the murder of 15-year-old Genesis Cornejo. In exchange to pleading guilty, Hernandez-Rivera received 40 years in prison. He also pleaded guilty to aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in exchange for 12 years in prison.

Hernandez-Rivera's sentences will run concurrently.

MS-13 members, including Jose Arevalo Iraheta, Oscar Hernandez Baires, and Erick Zavala Hernandez, to scour the Elmont, New York, neighborhood in search of rival 18th Street members to kill for encroaching on their territory.

In spring 2020, Velasquez Larin, also known as "Agresor," "Saturno," and "Paco," allegedly arranged for Fulton clique members from Maryland to travel to New York to assist in the search for rival gang members in Elmont, according to prosecutors.

Bran, who served as the leader of MS-13's Sailors Locos Salvatrucha clique suspected that Hernandez-Gonzalez had violated MS-13 rules by aiding a rival gang. Based upon this suspicion, Bran created a ruse to lure Hernandez-Gonzalez to the "Pony Pasture" area on the banks of the James River.

Bran ordered that MS-13 associate Karen San Jose contact Hernandez-Gonzalez and convinced him to gather with other MS-13 members and enlisted help of two juveniles who were tasked with actu

For Immediate Release
U.S. Attorney's Office, District of Massachusetts

BOSTON – An MS-13 member was sentenced today in federal court in Boston for racketeering conspiracy and being an illegal alien in unlawful possession of ammunition.

Cristian Alvarez Hernandez, a/k/a "Duende," 22, a Salvadoran national residing in East Boston, was sentenced by U.S. Senior District Court Judge Mark L. Wolf to 121 months in prison and three years of supervised release. Alvarez Hernandez will also be subject to deportation proceedings upon completion of his sentence. In September 2021, Alvarez Hernandez pleaded guilty to conspiracy to conduct enterprise affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity, more commonly referred to as RICO conspiracy, and to being an illegal alien in unlawful possession of ammunition.

MS-13 gang leader sentenced to 21 years in prison

BOSTON (AP) — A leader of the MS-13 gang in Massachusetts has been sentenced to 21 years in prison after pleading guilty to racketeering charges.

Federal prosecutors say German Hernandez Escobar was a leader of MS-13's Everett Loco Salvatrucha clique that sold marijuana to finance its criminal operations.

The 30-year-old, who prosecutors say was nicknamed "Terible," was sentenced Monday in Boston federal court. He reached a plea deal with prosecutors just as he was to stand trial in March.

Hernandez Escobar was among 61 people indicted in a 2016 raid targeting MS-13 in Massachusetts. The operation remains the largest takedown of MS-13 in U.S. history.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Not to be confused with Carlsberg Group.

Karlsberg (German pronunciation: [ˈkaɐlsˌbɛɐk]) is one of the largest breweries in Germany; the Karlsberg Group also owns various other beer brands. It is called Karlsberg outside of Germany to differentiate it from the Danish brewing company Carlsberg.

History [edit]

Established 1878 in the town of Homburg, Saarland (then part of Bavaria), the brewery was named after the nearby Karlsberg Castle. Karlsberg's ownership has been handed down through generations. The current owner, Richard Weber, is the great-grandson of the brewery's founder.

Brands [edit]

Karlsberg's brands include Karlsberg, Beckers, Ottweiler and Kastell which includes Kastell Cru, a lager brewed in Saverne using champagne yeast.[1][2]

Karlsberg Group [edit]

The Karlsberg Group also owns and distributes other beer brands, among them the German brewery Königsbacher (in Koblenz) and the French brewery (brasserie de Saverne)[3]. The juice producers Merziger, Kindworth and Niehoffs Vaihinger belong to the company. In 2001 Karlsberg acquired controlling interest in the Mineralbrunnen Überkingen-Teinach company from Nestlé, including Afri-Cola and the mineral water brands Staatlich Fachingen and Hirschquelle from the Black Forest. Alcohol-free drinks today make up more than 50% of the company's turnover (of 691 million euros in the fiscal year 2004/05).

Circumcision in the Talmud

Shabbat 137b:6-8

The Sages taught in a Tosefta that one who circumcises a child recites: Who has made us holy through His commandments, and commanded us concerning circumcision. The father of the circumcised child recites: Who has made us holy through His commandments, and commanded us to bring him into the covenant of Abraham, our father. Those standing there recite: Just as he has entered into the covenant, so may he enter into Torah, marriage, and good deeds. And the one who recites the additional blessing says: Who made the beloved one holy from the womb, marked the decree in his flesh, and gave his descendants the seal and the sign of the holy covenant. Therefore, as a reward for this, the living God, our Portion, commanded to deliver the beloved of our flesh from destruction, for the sake of His covenant that He set in our flesh. Blessed are You, Lord, Who establishes the covenant. One who circumcises converts says: Blessed are You, Lord, our God, King of the universe, Who made us holy with His commandments, and commanded us concerning circumcision. And the one who recites the additional blessing recites: Who has made us holy with His commandments, and commanded us to circumcise converts, and to drip from them covenantal blood, as were it not for the blood of the covenant, the heaven and earth would not be sustained, as it is stated: "If My covenant would not be with day and night, the ordinances of heaven and earth I would not have placed" (Jeremiah 33:25), which is

This article is about the Babylonian Talmud. For the Jerusalem Talmud, see Jerusalem Talmud. "Talmudic" redirects here. "Talmudic Aramaic" refers to the Jewish Babylonian Aramaic dialect.

The Talmud (/ˈtɑːlmʊd, -mɒd, -ˈtæl-/; Hebrew: תַּלְמוּד, romanized: Talmud) is the central text of Rabbinic Judaism and the primary source of Jewish religious law (halakha) and Jewish theology.[1][2] Until the advent of modernity, in nearly all Jewish communities, the Talmud was the centerpiece of Jewish cultural life and was foundational to "all Jewish thought and aspirations", serving also as "the guide for the daily life" of Jews.[3]

The term Talmud normally refers to the collection of writings named specifically the Babylonian Talmud (Talmud Bavli), although there is also an earlier collection known as the Jerusalem Talmud (Talmud Yerushalmi).[4] It may also traditionally be called Shas (שׁ״ס), a Hebrew abbreviation of shisha sedarim, or the "six orders" of the Mishnah.

The Talmud has two components: the Mishnah (מִשְׁנָה, c. 200 CE), a written compendium of the Oral Torah; and the Gemara (גְּמָרָא, c. 500 CE), an elucidation of the Mishnah and related Tannaitic writings that often ventures onto other subjects and expounds broadly on the Hebrew Bible. The term "Talmud" may refer to either the Gemara alone, or the Mishnah and Gemara together.

The entire Talmud consists of 63 tractates, and in the standard print, called the Vilna Shas, there are 2,711 double-sided folios.[5] It is written in Mishnaic Hebrew and Jewish Babylonian Aramaic and contains the teachings and opinions of thousands of rabbis (dating from before the Common Era through to the fifth century) on a variety of subjects, including halakha, Jewish ethics, philosophy, customs, history, and folklore, and many other topics. The Talmud is the basis for all codes of Jewish law and is widely quoted in rabbinic literature.

and is in consequence regarded as a thirteenfold commandment, which must under all circumstances be observed. Hence the necessity for the twofold instruction.

is not conclusive evidence! It may be that R. Ishmael in the case of the sacrifice holds, that because it is not necessary that the commandment be beautified.* But in the case of circumcision, where the beautifying of the commandment is necessary (as is taught in Tract Sakkah), we might say, that R. Ishmael is of a different opinion; therefore the sages of Neherdai say, that the Tanas who hold, that after having finished the circumcision the operator must not commence anew, are in reality the rabbis who differ with R. Jose in Tract Menachoth concerning the law of the showbreads.†

The rabbis taught: "If excrescences remain on the gland after circumcision, and are such as make the circumcision invalid, they must be removed; and failure to do so involves the punishment of Karath." Who becomes liable to be punished by Karath? Said R. Kahana: "The circumciser." (If he performed the circumcision on Sabbath and did not finish it, he simply made a wound and did not perform a commandment; hence he becomes amenable to Karath. R. Papa opposed this; "The circumciser might say, 'I have performed one half of a commandment; come ye and complete the other half. Why should I be punished by Karath?' Therefore if the circumcision was performed on an adult who, excrescences which make it invalid having remained, will not permit them to be removed, he becomes amenable to Karath." This was opposed by R. Ashi: "As for an adult, what news does that impart to us? It is expressly stated [Genesis xvii. 14]: 'And any uncircumcised male, who circumciseth not the flesh of his foreskin, that soul shall be cut off from his people'? Therefore he says nay; it really refers to the circumciser, and only then if he came late on Sabbath, near twilight, and was told that it would be impossible to finish the operation before night, but persisted in performing it. If in consequence he left excrescences which make the circumcision invalid, he simply made a wound without performing a commandment, and thus he becomes amenable to Karath."

"Sucking out the blood." R. Papa said: "The circumciser who does not suck out the wound places the child in danger, and should be discharged from office." Is this not self-evident?

In 1934 James Armand de Rothschild established the first local commercial brewery with Gaston Dreyfus in Rishon LeZion. In 1940 the Nesher Brewery was commissioned by the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel to supply beer to Australian troops who were in Israel. From 1942 the brewery enlarged its plant to increase the production of beer requested by both military and civilian consumers. In the 1952 in the city of Netanya the largest brewery of the Middle East has been founded with the name National Brewery by a group of investors led by Louis Herzberg. The National Brewery produced every year 400,000 barrels of beer and in 1954 it started to ship 180,000 bottles of its Abir laber beer to United States.

In 1924, Baron Edmond de Rothschild set up PICA, the Palestine Jewish Colonization Association, through which his enterprises and villages in Palestine were managed. He helped set up the Electric Corporation, the Potash Company, and the Nesher Beer Company. He also established the wine cellars of Rishon LeZion and Zichron Yaacov. He died in 1934 in France.

In 1957, PICA transferred its considerable properties to the government and to the Jewish Agency. The

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Alfred Henry "Freddy" Heineken (4 November 1923 – 3 January 2002) was a Dutch businessman for Heineken International, the brewing company created in 1864 by his grandfather Gerard Adriaan Heineken in Amsterdam. He served as chairman of the board of directors and CEO from 1971 until 1989. After his retirement as chairman and CEO, Heineken continued to sit on the board of directors until his death and served as chairman of the supervisory board from 1989 to 1995. At the time of his death, Heineken was one of the richest people in the Netherlands, with a net worth of 9.5 billion guilders.[1]

Early life [edit]

Heineken was born on 4 November 1923 in Amsterdam. He was the grandson of Gerard Adriaan Heineken, who was the founder of the brewery Heineken International.

Career [edit]

On 1 June 1941, he entered the service of the Heineken company, which by then was no longer owned by the family. He bought back stock several years later, to ensure the family controlled the company again. He created the Heineken Holding that owned 50.005% of Heineken International; he held a majority stake in Heineken Holding. By the time of his resignation as chairman of the board in 1989 he had transformed Heineken from a brand that was known primarily in the Netherlands into a

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlid Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides wer sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zımm Karaman or Karamanlıyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

Otto's Brewery opened in 1933 and closed in 1937 it was open for 4 years. Breweries that are open for a couple of years like this did not have a long time to produce advertising and colle so they tend to be more scarce than breweries with more longevity. This listing was active du Prohibition which makes it an oddity. Some breweries were able to stay in business by produ "near-beer" which was very low alcohol, some switched over to bottling sodas or other bever some became Ice-houses or other related businesses. Our information indicates that Otto's Brewery was the only brewery that was located in Mantorville, MN sometimes this means th items from a brewery will have extra value in the area it comes from because there are not o sources for local breweriana.

This article is about the lager beer. For other uses, see Heineken (disambiguation)
Heineken Lager Beer (Dutch: Heineken Pilsener), or simply Heineken (pronounced [ˈheinəkə(n)]), is a Dutch pale lager beer with 5% alcohol by volume produced by the Dutch brewing company Heineken N.V. Heineken beer is sold in a green bottle with a red star.
History [edit]
On 15 February 1864,[citation needed] Gerard Adriaan Heineken (1841–1893)[3] bought De Hooiberg (The Haystack) brewery on the Nieuwezijds Achterburgwal canal in Amsterdam,[4] a popular working class brand founded in 1592. In 1873 after hiring a Dr. Elion (student of Louis Pasteur) to develop Heineken a yeast for Bavarian bottom fermentation, the HBM (Heineken's Bierbrouwerij Maatschappij) was established, and the first Heineken brand

History of Ladino

In the 1492 diaspora, when the Jews were expelled from Spain, they took with them Spanish of the late 15th century and expanded the lexicon with language influences from the Mediterranean, primarily where they settled.

Foreign words that mixed with Old Spanish derive mainly from Hebrew, Arabic, Turkish, Greek, French, and to a lesser extent from Portuguese and Italian.

The Ladino community population took a large hit when the Nazis destroyed most of the communities in Europe where Ladino had been the first language among Jews.

Very few of the people who speak Ladino are monolingual. Ladino language advocates fear that it could die out as speakers more often use the languages of the cultures around them.

It is estimated that about 200,000 people can understand or speak Ladino. Israel has one of the largest Ladino-speaking communities, with many words borrowed from Yiddish. Traditionally, Ladino was written in the Hebrew alphabet, writing and reading right to left. In the 20th

American Gangsters: The 20
History
Meyer Lansky

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Meyer_Lansky#/media/File:Meyer_Lansky_NYWTS_1_retouched.jpg
Meyer Lansky was an associate of the Jewish mob as well as other prominent mafia figures such as Lucky Luciano (yes, him again). Also, as mentioned earlier, he was good friends with Bugsy Siegel, even from childhood. Also known as the "Mob's Accountant," he developed various gambling operations around the world including Las Vegas, Florida and New Orleans
Attempting to take control of the Flamingo hotel in Havana, Cuba, Lansky attended a secret meeting to discuss Bugsy taking over its operation. However, he was not
Carlos Lehder

Carlos Lehder was a German-Colombian drug lord and co-founder of the Medellin Cartel. He started out selling marijuana and stolen cars and smuggling them between the U.S. and Canada. Later on, he partnered with George Jung to start smuggling cocaine into the U.S. Initially, they used suitcases but later purchased their own airplane to just fly it in. Because of his success, Lehder got too big for his britches and so Jung and Lehder had a falling out.
And things only went downhill from there. In 1984, Pablo Escobar had Rodrigo Lara
Frank Costello

Frank Costello was an Italian-American crime boss for the Luciano family. Born in Italy, he moved to America as a small child. By 13, he became involved with local gangs. Running with Luciano, Siegel and Lansky, among others, he was involved in murder, robbery, extortion, gambling and narcotics. In 1925, Costello became a U.S. citizen and a year later was indicted on bootlegging charges, but the jury was deadlocked.
Arnold Rothstein

Arnold Rothstein was another one of the most notorious mob bosses in New York. Before Luciano, Rothstein was a successful gambler, businessman and racketeer. He transformed the way organized crime worked by turning into something that ran more like a corporation. One of his most notable "achievements" was fixing the 1919 World Series, in which he paid the White Sox to deliberately lose to another team. He profited on that loss by betting against them.
However, Rothstein was never indicted as prosecutors could find no evidence against him. Once prohibition went into effect, Rothstein got into the bootlegging business

John Dillinger

John Dillinger was an American gangster operating manly during the Great Depression after the stock market crash of 1929. However, he started out before that in 1924. Finding it difficult to hold a job, Dillinger began planning robberies. During a grocery store robbery, stealing $50, he hit someone on the head while escaping. He along with an associate were arrested for the crime and confessed to it.
Dillinger was sentenced to prison for 10 to 20 years and became further entrenched in the criminal underworld. There, in prison, Dillinger studied how to rob banks, learning from expert bank robbers. Meanwhile, Dillinger's father worked on getting him out of prison, gathering 188 signatures. Almost 10 years later, in 1933, he was released on parole, carrying out his first bank robbery in 1933 and 11 more after that. As a result, FBI agents chased Dillinger who had become one of the most notorious bank robbers of the time. Dillinger was shot in 1934 by the FBI after leaving a movie theater. Johnny
Mickey Cohen

Mickey Cohen started out as a boxer, participating in illegal prizefights in Los Angeles when he was just a teenager. During the prohibition, Cohen moved to Chicago became involved with organized crime, he started out as an enforcer and even met Al Capone. After spending some time in prison, he started running illegal gambling operations including card games. In 1939, he moved back to LA to work for Bugsy Siegel.
In 1947, after Siegel was murdered, Cohen sought revenge and challenged the presumed assailants to a gunfight. They did not and Cohen fled the scene before cops arrived. An investigation into Cohen led to - you guessed it - a tax evasion conviction.
Bugsy Siegel

Bugsy Siegel, another famous American crime boss from the time of prohibition, was described as handsome and charismatic, which made him a gangster celebrity. At a young age, he befriended Jewish crime boss Meyer Lanski and Charles Luciano. He was allegedly involved in bootlegging and murder, carrying out hits for Lanski. While married, Siegel had a reputation for womanizing, which ultimately led to his marriage ending in 1946.
After making numerous enemies, Bugsy Siegel was sent off to California by the east coast mob in the late 1930s. He had already established connections there in the

On November 18, 1978, Peoples Temple founder Jim Jones leads hundreds of his followers in a mass murder-suicide at their agricultural commune in a remote part of the South American nation of Guyana. Many of Jones' followers willingly ingested a poison-laced punch while others were forced to do so at gunpoint. The final death toll at Jonestown that day was 909; a third of those who perished were children.

Prosecutors told the jury that Gutfinski considered himself a worshiper of Satan, and told police that he was a vampire who drank blood -- both his own blood and that of others.

Gutfinski and Jones were both convicted of elevated aggravated assault, aggravated assault and reckless conduct.

Gutfinski was sentenced to 10 years in jail in 2000, with all but three years of the sentence suspended. He was also given four years probation.

HOUSTON, Texas (KTRK) -- Two MS-13 gang members convicted of killing a teenage girl in an alleged satanic ritual in 2017 have each been sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Diego Hernandez-Rivera, 22, otherwise known as "Scary," faced a judge on Monday, where he pleaded guilty to the murder of 15-year-old Genesis Cornejo. In exchange to pleading guilty, Hernandez-Rivera received 40 years in prison. He also pleaded guilty to aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in exchange for 12 years in prison.

Hernandez-Rivera's sentences will run concurrently.

BOSTON (AP) -- A leader of the MS-13 gang in Massachusetts has been sentenced to 21 years in prison after pleading guilty to racketeering charges.

Federal prosecutors say German Hernandez Escobar was a leader of MS-13's Everett Locos Salvatrucha clique that sold marijuana to finance its criminal operations.

The 30-year-old, who prosecutors say was nicknamed "Terrible," was sentenced Monday in Boston federal court. He reached a plea deal with prosecutors just as he was to stand trial in March.

Hernandez Escobar was among 61 people indicted in a 2018 raid targeting MS-13 in Massachusetts. The operation remains the largest takedown of MS-13 in U.S. history.

Bree Mills (born July 15, 1981) is an American adult film director, screenwriter and producer.[1][2] Head of production company Gamma Films and Chief Creative Officer for Gamma Entertainment.[3][4]

Having begun her career in Adult Entertainment in 2009 with Gamma Entertainment as a Marketing Director, Mills moved on to become the head of creative content six years later to create Gamma's websites Girlsway and PureTaboo and most recently her newly launched master brand Adult Time.[5][6]

Early life [edit]

Mills was born in 1981 in Boston, Massachusetts and Canadian-raised in London, Ontario, Canada and graduated from London Central Secondary School. Raised by a gay parent who came out when she was 8 years old, Mills was able to grow up in an openly accepting environment while exploring her own sexuality. A great lover of film, Mills

OUR HISTORY
A RICH HISTORY OF MAKING HISTORY.
Swisher traces its roots back to 1861 when David Swisher, a merchant out of Newark, Ohio, received a small cigar business in settlement of a debt. David and his four sons began to sell cigars across the Midwest from their "rolling stores" or wagons. The cigars were rolled by hand every day in a one-room "manufactury" in Newark. In 1888, David's sons, John and Harry, bought the company from their father and renamed it Swisher Brothers. The company experienced great growth, and by 1895 the business had grown into three factories that employed over 1,000 people who hand-rolled as many as 300,000 cigars per day.

Circumcision in the Talmud
Shabbat 137b:6-8
The Sages taught in a Tosefta that one who circumcises a child recites: Who has made us holy through His commandments, and commanded us concerning circumcision. The father of the circumcised child recites: Who has made us holy through His commandments, and commanded us to bring him into the covenant of Abraham, our father. Those standing there recite: Just as he has entered into the covenant, so may he enter into Torah, marriage, and good deeds. And the one who recites the additional blessing says: Who made the beloved one holy from the womb, marked the decree in his flesh, and gave his descendants the seal and the sign of the holy covenant. Therefore, as a reward for this, the living God, our Portion, commanded to deliver the beloved of our flesh from destruction, for the sake of His covenant that He set in our flesh. Blessed are You, Lord, Who establishes the covenant. One who circumcises converts says: Blessed are You, Lord, our God, King of the universe, Who made us holy with His commandments, and commanded us concerning circumcision. And the one who recites the additional blessing recites: Who has made us holy with His commandments, and commanded us to circumcise converts, and to drip from them covenantal blood, as were it not for the blood of the covenant, the heaven and earth would not be sustained, as it is stated: "If My covenant would not be with day and night, the ordinances of heaven and earth I would not have placed" (Jeremiah 33:25), which is

Metzitzah B'Peh* (oral suction) [edit]

This has also been abbreviated as MBP.[63]

The ancient method of performing metzitzah b'peh (Hebrew: מְצִיצָה בְּפֶה)—or oral suction[64][65]—has become controversial. The process has the mohel place his mouth directly on the infant's genital wound to draw blood away from the cut. The vast majority of Rabbinical Jewish circumcisio ceremonies do not use metzitzah b'peh,[66] but some Haredi Jews continue to perform it, while traditional Karaites and Beta Israel never practice it.[67][68][57] It has been documented that the practice poses a serious risk of spreading herpes to the infant.[69][70][71][72] Proponents maintain tha there is no conclusive evidence that links herpes to Metzitza,[73] and that attempts to limit this practice infringe on religious freedom.[74][75][76]

The practice has become a controversy in both secular and Jewish medical ethics. The ritual of metzitzah is found in Mishnah Shabbat 19:2, whi lists it as one of the four steps involved in the circumcision rite. Rabbi Moses Sofer, also known as the Chatam Sofer (1762–1839), observed tha the Talmud states that the rationale for this part of the ritual was hygienic — i.e., to protect the health of the child. The Chatam Sofer issued a leniency (Heter) that some consider to have been conditional, to perform metzitzah with a sponge to be used instead of oral suction in a letter to his student, Rabbi Lazar Horowitz of Vienna. This letter was never published among Rabbi Sofer's responsa but rather in the secular journal Kochvei Yitzchok,[77][78] along with letters from Dr. Wertheimer, the chief doctor of the Viennese General Hospital. It relates the story that a mohe (who was suspected of transmitting herpes via metzizah to infants) was checked several times and never found to have signs of the disease and that a ban was requested because of the "possibility of future infections".[79] Moshe Schick (1807–1879), a student of Moses Sofer, states in his book of Responsa, She'eilos u'teshuvos Maharam Schick (Orach Chaim 152,) that Moses Sofer gave the ruling in that specific instance only because the mohel refused to step down and had secular government connections that prevented his removal in favor of another mohel, and the Heter may not be applied elsewhere. He also states (Yoreh Deah 244) that the practice is possibly a Sinaitic tradition, i.e., Halacha l'Moshe m'Sinai. Other sources contradict this claim, with copies of Moses Sofer's responsa making no mention of the legal case or of his ruling applying only one situation. Rather, that responsa makes quite clear that "metzizah" was a health measure and should never be employed where there is health risk to the infant.[80]

Chaim Hezekiah Medini, after corresponding with the greatest Jewish sages of the generation, concluded the practice to be Halacha l'Moshe m'Sinai and elaborates on what prompted Moses Sofer to give the above ruling.[81] He tells the story that a student of Moses Sofer, Lazar Horowitz, Chief Rabbi of Vienna at the time and author of the responsa Yad Elazer, needed the ruling because of a governmental attempt to ban circumcision completely if it included metzitzah b'peh. He therefore asked Sofer to give him permission to do brit milah without metzitzah b'peh. When he presented the defense in secular court, his testimony was erroneously recorded to mean that Sofer stated it as a general ruling.[82] The Rabbinical Council of America (RCA), which claims to be the largest American organization of Orthodox rabbis, published an article by mohel Yehudi Pesach Shields in its summer 1972 issue of Tradition magazine, calling for the abandonment of Metzitzah b'peh.[83] Since then the RCA has issued an opinion that advocates methods that do not involve contact between the mohel's mouth and the infant's genitals, such as the use a sterile syringe, thereby eliminating the risk of infection.[67] According to the Chief Rabbinate of Israel[84] and the Edah HaChareidis[85] metzitza b'peh should still be performed.

The practice of metzitzah b'peh posed a serious risk in the transfer of herpes from mohelim to eight Israeli infants, one of whom suffered brain damage.[69][86] When three New York City infants contracted herpes after metzizah b'peh by one mohel and one of them died, New York authorit took out a restraining order against the mohel requiring use of a sterile glass tube, or pipette.[57][87] The mohel's attorney argued that the New Yo Department of Health had not supplied conclusive medical evidence linking his client with the disease.[87][88] In September 2005, the city withdre

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlides, Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During the exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides were sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zımmiyan-ı Karaman or Karamaniyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

Muslims account for 85 percent of casualties in al Qaeda attacks

BY ALEXANDER MAYER | December 9th, 2009 |

The Combating Terrorism Center at West Point recently released a stunning report which found that Muslims have accounted for 85 percent of the casualties from al Qaeda attacks between 2004-2008. Even more astounding, during the last two years of the study (2006-2008), the percentage of al Qaeda's Muslim victims skyrocketed to an almost-unbelievable 98 percent.

Al Qaeda's affiliate in Syria claims another suicide attack

BY BILL ROGGIO | December 13th, 2012 | @billroggio

The Al Nusrah Front for the People of the Levant, al Qaeda in Iraq's affiliate in Syria, claimed credit for yesterday's complex attack against the Syrian Interior Ministry in Damascus. Five people were killed in the bombings.

The Al Nusrah Front said two of its suicide bombers "parked their two vehicles in front of the building, and then stormed and clashed with those inside and killed a lot of them," according to the SITE Intelligence Group, which obtained the statements from the Al Nusrah that were published on Twitter (the jihadist forums were not accessible). After the suicide bombers launched their attack, the two car bombs "were blown up remotely."

Five people were reported to have been killed in the blasts, and the force of the explosions collapsed several walls of the building.

The terror group, which was designated as such by the US on Dec. 11, has now claimed credit for 43 of the 52 suicide attacks that have taken place in Syria in the past 12 months [see LWJ report, US adds Al Nusrah Front, 2 leaders to terrorism list, for information on the designation].

The group has become one of the most powerful and

- The 2003 Riyadh compound bombings occurred on 12 May 2003, in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. Al-Qaeda gunmen stormed building complexes inhabited by Western expatriates, killing 39 people and wounding over 160.[20]
- The 2003 Casablanca bombings occurred on May 16, 2003, in Casablanca, Morocco. 45 people were killed as a result of these attacks (12 suicide-bombers and 33 victims).
- The 2003 Marriott Hotel bombing occurred on August 5, 2003, in Jakarta, Indonesia. A suicide bomber detonated a car bomb outside the lobby of the newly opened JW Marriott luxury hotel, killing twelve people and injuring 150. Those killed were mostly Indonesian, with the exception of one Dutch.
- The 2003 Istanbul bombings were four truck bomb attacks carried out on November 15, 2003, and November 20, 2003, in Istanbul, Turkey, leaving 57 people dead, and 700 wounded. The attacks targeted two synagogues, a British consulate, and a British bank in Istanbul.

2004 [edit]

- Four Al-Qaeda gunmen carried out the 2004 Khobar attacks on May 29, 2004.[21]

2005 [edit]

- The November 2005 Amman bombings were suicide attacks on 3 hotels in Jordan during a Palestinian wedding. 57 people were killed and another 115 were injured.

2007 [edit]

- Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) launched two car bomb attacks on 11 April 2007, which targeted the government palace and a police station located in Algiers.
- Al-Qaeda is believed to have been responsible for the failed assassination attempt on former Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto on 7 October 2007.[22]
- al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb launched two car bomb attacks on 11 December 2007, which targeted Algerian Constitutional court and a UN office in Algiers.

- Al-Qaeda claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Danish embassy in Pakistan on June 2, 2008.[23] Mustafa Abu al-Yazid, a high-ranking member of Al-Qaeda, issued a statement after the bombing, claiming that the attack was a response to the 2005 publication of the Muhammed Cartoons.[24]
- The Battle of Wanat occurred on July 13, 2008, when forces including Al-Qaeda and Taliban guerrillas attacked NATO troops near the village of Wanat in the Waygal district in Afghanistan's far eastern province of Nuristan. The Battle of Wanat has been described as the "Black Hawk Down" of the War in Afghanistan, as one of the bloodiest attacks of the war and one of several attacks on remote outposts.[8] In contrast to previous roadside bombs and haphazard attacks and ambushes, this attack was well coordinated with fighters from many insurgent and terrorist groups with an effort that was disciplined and sustained which was able to target key assets such as the TOW launcher with precision.

2009 [edit]

- Shortly after the arrest of Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab in the December 25, 2009, following an attempted bombing on Northwest Airlines Flight 253, the suspect reportedly told officials he had traveled to Yemen for training by Al-Qaeda, although British counterterrorism officials dismissed the claims.[25] President Barack Obama's top security official Janet Napolitano on December 27 stated "Right now we have no indication it's part of anything larger", warning it would be "inappropriate to speculate" that Al-Qaeda had sent Abdulmutallab on a suicide mission. On

In 1999, Gutfinski and his girlfriend were sentenced to 10 years in jail after bringing a 16-year-old girl to a hotel room, slashing a 7-inch gash in her back, and drinking the girl's blood.

Otto's Brewery opened in 1933 and closed in 1937 it was open for 4 years. Breweries that are open for a couple of years like this did not have a long time to produce advertising and colle so they tend to be more scarce than breweries with more longevity. This listing was active du Prohibition which makes it an oddity. Some breweries were able to stay in business by produ "near-beer" which was very low alcohol, some switched over to bottling sodas or other bever some became Ice-houses or other related businesses. Our information indicates that Otto's Brewery was the only brewery that was located in Mantorville, MN sometimes this means th items from a brewery will have extra value in the area it comes from because there are not o sources for local breweriana.

Lucien Greaves on the Satanic Temple

The Satanic Temple's, Lucien Greaves!

The Satanic Temple and the First Amend lecture by Lucien Greaves

The statue unveiling was officially presented with a sermon by Satanic Temple co-founder Malcolm Jarry and Messner, who read a statement tucked in the pages of a Bible, flanked by two men holding candles. As the two men removed the blanket from the monument (and started making out), Messner ripped out pages from the Bible and threw them into the audience. Later, VIP ticket holders could get their photo taken on Baphomet's lap, while attendees hounded Messner to autograph the torn Bible pages.

Karlsberg (German pronunciation: [ˈkaslsˌbɛɐk]) is one of the largest breweries in Germany; the Karlsberg Group also owns various other beer brands. It is called Karlsbräu outside of Germany to differentiate it from the Danish brewing company Carlsberg.

History [edit]

Established 1878 in the town of Homburg, Saarland (then part of Bavaria), the brewery was named after the nearby Karlsberg Castle. Karlsberg's ownership has been handed down through generations. The current owner, Richard Weber, is the great-grandson of the brewery's founder.

Brands [edit]

Karlsberg's brands include Karlsberg, Beckers, Ottweiler and Kasteel which includes Kasteel Cru, a lager brewed in Saverne using champagne yeast.[1][2]

Karlsberg Group [edit]

The Karlsberg Group also owns and distributes other beer brands, among them the German brewery Königsbacher (in Koblenz) and the French brewery Brasserie de Saverne. The juice producers Merziger, Klindworth and Niehoffs Vaihinger belong to the company. In 2001 Karlsberg acquired controlling interest in the Mineralbrunnen Überkingen-Teinach company from Nestlé, including Afri-Cola and the mineral water brands Staatlich Fachingen and Hirschquelle from the Black Forest. Alcohol-free drinks today make up more than 50% of the company's turnover (of 691 million euros in the fiscal year 2004/05).

Carlsberg A/S (/ˈkɑːrlzbɜːrɡ/; Danish: [ˈkʰɑˀʳlsˌpɛɡˀ]) is a Danish multinational brewer. Founded in 1847 by J. C. Jacobsen, the company's headquarters is in Copenhagen, Denmark. Since Jacobsen's death in 1887, the majority owner of the company has been the Carlsberg Foundation. The company's flagship brand is Carlsberg (named after Jacobsen's son Carl). Other brands include Tuborg, Kronenbourg, Somersby cider, Holsten, Neptun, Belgian Grimbergen, Fix, one of Greece's oldest brands and more than 500 local beers.[6][failed verification] The company employs around 41,000 people, primarily in Europe and Asia. Carlsberg is currently the 6th largest brewery in the world based on revenue.[7]

History [edit]

Carlsberg was founded by J. C. Jacobsen, a philanthropist and avid art collector. With his fortune he amassed an art collection which is housed in the Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek in central Copenhagen. The first brew was finished on 10 November 1847, and the export of Carlsberg beer began in 1868 with the export of one barrel to Edinburgh, Scotland.[8] Some of the company's original logos include an elephant, after which some of its lagers are named, and the swastika,[note 1] the use of which was discontinued in the 1930s because of its association with political parties in neighboring Germany.

Jacobsen's son Carl opened a brewery in 1882 named Ny (New) Carlsberg forcing him

A RICH HISTORY OF MAKING HISTORY

Swisher traces its roots back to 1861 when David Swisher, a merchant out of Newark, Ohio, received a small cigar business in settlement of a debt. David and his four sons began to sell cigars across the Midwest from their "rolling stores" or wagons. The cigars were rolled by hand every day in a one-room "manufactory" in Newark. In 1888, David's sons, John and Harry, bought the company from their father and renamed it Swisher Brothers. The company experienced great growth, and by 1891 the business had grown into three factories that employed over 1,000 people who hand-rolled as many as 300,000 cigars per day.

Irving "Waxey Gordon" Wexler
Burton Phillips
According to the official Alcatraz History website, Burton Phillips was a bank robber and kidnapper serving a life sentence in Alcatraz when he became involved in a general strike. Participants stayed in their cells after lunch and refused to work in the prison's shops.
During this strike, Warden James A. Johnson stepped into the mess hall to observe the inmates, which Phillips took as a chance to step out of line and kick him until he fell unconscious. The guards retaliated, and Phillips found himself in the prison hospital soon after.
Joseph Paul Cretzer
According to the San Francisco Public Library, Joseph Paul Cretzer came to Alcatraz after receiving a life sentence for the murder of a U.S. Marshal in Tacoma, Washington and additional convictions for bank robbery and escaping another prison.
Meyer Harris "Mickey" Cohen
According to Alcatraz's official website, Mickey Cohen was a California crime boss who was able to wriggle out of bookmaking, racketeering, assault, and even murder charges thanks to his street smarts and his claimed ability to pay off authorities.
Forrest Tucker
According to Time, Forrest Tucker's stay in Alcatraz only resulted in him meeting another bank robber named Theodore Green, with whom he would form the "Over the Hill Gang," named for their advanced ages.
Tucker was known for his calm demeanor, earpiece equipped with a police scanner, and ingenious robbery methods that, in one case, saw his crew pose as bank security guards to steal gold from their vault. Although he escaped San Quentin in 1979 and apparently tried to reform in 1993, he died in prison after a final crime spree in 1999.
Henri Young
According to the official Alcatraz History website, Henri Young was a bank robber and murderer who arrived at Alcatraz in 1936. Three years later, he attempted to escape on a makeshift raft with William Martin and Rufus Roy McCain but was forced to turn back when the latter's fear of drowning threatened to capsize the boat.
Although he never explained why, Young would fatally stab McCain a year after being released from solitary confinement after the attempted escape and remained in Alcatraz until 1948. After two prison transfers, Young was released on parole from the Washinton State Penitentiary in 1972. However, he soon jumped parole and disappeared completely.

Metzitzah B'peh (Direct Oral Suctioning)
When a baby is circumcised, some ritual Jewish circumcisers (mohelim) do a practice called metzitzah b'peh. Metzitzah b'peh is when the mohel uses their mouth to suck blood away from the baby's circumcision wound as part of the circumcision ritual. After metzitzah b'peh, some babies can get an infection.

How Metzitzah B'peh (Direct Oral Suctioning) Can Cause Infection
Public health experts have found that metzitzah b'peh can put babies at risk of getting a harmful virus called herpes simplex virus type 1 or HSV-1. Some of these babies became seriously ill. Some developed brain damage, and others have died. There is no proven way eliminate the risk of HSV-1 infection from direct oral suctioning, though there are options to reduce the risk.
Many adults carry HSV-1 in their bodies. They may have no symptoms or only mild

Kiddush Nesachim

Menachot (7:4) | Yisrael Bankier | 10 years ago

We have learnt that while many of the mincha offerings were brought independently, some were brought either alongside or secondary to other korbanot. Nesachim, consisting of wine and a mincha offering were brought with a korban olah or shelamim. The Mishnah (7:4) discusses a case where one sanctifies the nesachim by placing them in a *kli sharet * (vessel designated for service) and the korban was then found to be invalid. The Mishnah teaches that if there is another sacrifice that requires nesachim it can be brought for that one.[1] If not, then the nesachim should be left beyond the required time to offer it, thereby invalidating it (lina), and burnt in the manner of invalid korbanot.

The Gemara(79a) cites the statement of R' Zeira that nesachim are only sanctified at the time of slaughter. Consequently it concludes that when the Mishnah teaches that the korban was found to be pasul it must mean that something went wrong at the time of zerika (casting the blood). If it happened at the time of shechita the nesachim would not be sanctified.

Rashi understands that according to R' Zeiram, prior to shechita the nesachim are considered chullin (unsanctified). Along this line the Bartenura explains that only after shechita are the nesachim sanctified such that they can be invalid due to lina or yotze (being taken outside the Menachot ("Meal Offerings") is the second tractate in Seder Kodashim ("Order of Holy Things"). Its thirteen chapters mainly discuss flour-based offerings brought in the Temple, as well as oil and wine libations. Among the topics addressed are intentions that nullify an offering's validity, details of the process of removing a handful of meal-offering, sanctifying it in a vessel, carrying it, and burning it on the altar, and the preparation and consumption of showbread (loaves that were always present on a dedicated table in the Temple).

And Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi holds that it is specifically there, in the case of meal offerings and libations that accompany an animal offering, that the meal offering is burned on the altar before the wine libation is poured on the altar. This is because since the altar has started to eat, i.e., consume, the animal offering, one must first complete the entire matter of the altar's eating, including the meal offering. The pouring of the wine on the altar is likened more to drinking than to eating. But when the meal offering and the libations are brought by themselves, the libations are considered preferable, because the song of the Levites is recited over them. Consequently, the pouring of the libations precedes the burning of the meal offering on the altar.

Muslims account for 85 percent of casualties in al Qaeda attacks

By ALEXANDER MAYER | December 8th, 2009 |

The Combating Terrorism Center at West Point recently released a stunning report which found that Muslims have accounted for 85 percent of the casualties from al Qaeda attacks between 2004-2008. Even more astounding, during the last two years of the study (2006-2008), the percentage of al Qaeda's Muslim victims skyrocketed to an almost-unbelievable 98 percent.

Al Qaeda's affiliate in Syria claims another suicide attack

By BILL ROGGIO | December 19th, 2012 | @billroggio

The Al Nusrah Front for the People of the Levant, al Qaeda in Iraq's affiliate in Syria, claimed credit for yesterday's complex attack against the Syrian Interior Ministry in Damascus. Five people were killed in the bombings.

The Al Nusrah Front said two of its suicide bombers "parked their two vehicles in front of the building, and then stormed and clashed with those inside and killed a lot of them," according to the SITE Intelligence Group, which obtained the statements from the Al Nusrah that were published on Twitter (the jihadist forums were not accessible). After the suicide bombers launched their attack, the two car bombs "were blown up remotely."

Five people were reported to have been killed in the blasts, and the force of the explosions collapsed several walls of the building.

The terror group, which was designated as such by the US on Dec. 11, has now claimed credit for 45 of the 52 suicide attacks that have taken place in Syria in the past 12 months [see LWJ report, US adds Al Nusrah Front, 2 leaders to terrorism list, for information on the designation].

The group has become one of the most powerful and

This article is about the lager beer. For other uses, see Heineken (disambiguation)
Heineken Lager Beer (Dutch: Heineken Pilsener), or simply Heineken (pronounced [ˈheinəkə(n)]), is a Dutch pale lager beer with 5% alcohol by volume produced by the Dutch brewing company Heineken N.V. Heineken beer is sold in a green bottle with a red star.
History [edit]
On 15 February 1864,[citation needed] Gerard Adriaan Heineken (1841–1893)[3] bought De Hooiberg (The Haystack) brewery on the Nieuwezijds Achterburgwal canal in Amsterdam,[4] a popular working class brand founded in 1592. In 1873 after hiring a Dr. Elion (student of Louis Pasteur) to develop Heineken a yeast for Bavarian bottom fermentation, the HBM (Heineken's Bierbrouwerij Maatschappij) was established, and the first Heineken brand

History of Ladino

In the 1492 diaspora, when the Jews were expelled from Spain, they took with them Spanish of the late 15th century and expanded the lexicon with language influences from the Mediterranean, primarily where they settled.

Foreign words that mixed with Old Spanish derive mainly from Hebrew, Arabic, Turkish, Greek, French, and to a lesser extent from Portuguese and Italian.

The Ladino community population took a large hit when the Nazis destroyed most of the communities in Europe where Ladino had been the first language among Jews.

Very few of the people who speak Ladino are monolingual. Ladino language advocates fear that it could die out as speakers more often use the languages of the cultures around them.

It is estimated that about 200,000 people can understand or speak Ladino. Israel has one of the largest Ladino-speaking communities, with many words borrowed from Yiddish. Traditionally, Ladino was written in the Hebrew alphabet, writing and reading right to left. In the 20th

Carlos Lehder
Carlos Lehder was a German-Colombian drug lord and co-founder of the Medellín Cartel. He started out selling marijuana and stolen cars and smuggling them between the U.S. and Canada. Later on, he partnered with George Jung to start smuggling cocaine into the U.S. Initially, they used suitcases but later purchased their own airplane to just fly it in. Because of his success, Lehder got too big for his britches and so Jung and Lehder had a falling out.
And things only went downhill from there. In 1984, Pablo Escobar had Rodrigo Lara
Mickey Cohen
Mickey Cohen started out as a boxer, participating in illegal prizefights in Los Angeles when he was just a teenager. During the prohibition, Cohen moved to Chicago became involved with organized crime, he started out as an enforcer and even met Al Capone. After spending some time in prison, he started running illegal gambling operations including card games. In 1939, he moved back to LA to work for Bugsy Siegel.
In 1947, after Siegel was murdered, Cohen sought revenge and challenged the presumed assailants to a gunfight. They did not and Cohen fled the scene before cops arrived. An investigation into Cohen led to - you guessed it - a tax evasion conviction.

History
Meyer Lansky
Meyer Lansky was an associate of the Jewish mob as well as other prominent mafia figures such as Lucky Luciano (yes, him again). Also, as mentioned earlier, he was good friends with Bugsy Siegel, even from childhood. Also known as the "Mob's Accountant," he developed various gambling operations around the world including Las Vegas, Florida and New Orleans
Attempting to take control of the Flamingo hotel in Havana, Cuba, Lansky attended a secret meeting to discuss Bugsy taking over its operation. However, he was not
Carlos Lehder
Carlos Lehder was a German-Colombian drug lord and co-founder of the Medellin Cartel. He started out selling marijuana and stolen cars and smuggling them between the U.S. and Canada. Later on, he partnered with George Jung to start smuggling cocaine into the U.S. Initially, they used suitcases but later purchased their own airplane to just fly it in. Because of his success, Lehder got too big for his britches and so Jung and Lehder had a falling out.
And things only went downhill from there. In 1984, Pablo Escobar had Rodrigo Lara
Frank Costello
Frank Costello was an Italian-American crime boss for the Luciano family. Born in Italy, he moved to America as a small child. By 13, he became involved with local gangs. Running with Luciano, Siegel and Lansky, among others, he was involved in murder, robbery, extortion, gambling and narcotics. In 1925, Costello became a U.S. citizen and a year later was indicted on bootlegging charges, but the jury was deadlocked.

Mickey Cohen
Mickey Cohen started out as a boxer, participating in illegal prizefights in Los Angeles when he was just a teenager. During the prohibition, Cohen moved to Chicago became involved with organized crime, he started out as an enforcer and even met Al Capone. After spending some time in prison, he started running illegal gambling operations including card games. In 1939, he moved back to LA to work for Bugsy Siegel.
In 1947, after Siegel was murdered, Cohen sought revenge and challenged the presumed assailants to a gunfight. They did not and Cohen fled the scene before cops arrived. An investigation into Cohen led to - you guessed it - a tax evasion conviction.
Bugsy Siegel
Bugsy Siegel, another famous American crime boss from the time of prohibition, was described as handsome and charismatic, which made him a gangster celebrity. At a young age, he befriended Jewish crime boss Meyer Lanski and Charles Luciano. He was allegedly involved in bootlegging and murder, carrying out hits for Lanski. While married, Siegel had a reputation for womanizing, which ultimately led to his marriage ending in 1946.
After making numerous enemies, Bugsy Siegel was sent off to California by the east coast mob in the late 1930s. He had already established connections there in the

Metzitzah B'Peh* (oral suction) [edit]

This has also been abbreviated as MBP.[63]

The ancient method of performing metzitzah b'peh (Hebrew: מציצה בפה)—or oral suction[64][65]—has become controversial. The process has the mohel place his mouth directly on the infant's genital wound to draw blood away from the cut. The vast majority of Rabbinical Jewish circumcisio ceremonies do not use metzitzah b'peh,[66] but some Haredi Jews continue to perform it, while traditional Karaites and Beta Israel never practice it.[67][68][57] It has been documented that the practice poses a serious risk of spreading herpes to the infant.[69][70][71][72] Proponents maintain tha there is no conclusive evidence that links herpes to Metzitza,[73] and that attempts to limit this practice infringe on religious freedom.[74][75][76]

The practice has become a controversy in both secular and Jewish medical ethics. The ritual of metzitzah is found in Mishnah Shabbat 19:2, wh lists it as one of the four steps involved in the circumcision rite. Rabbi Moses Sofer, also known as the Chatam Sofer (1762–1839), observed tha the Talmud states that the rationale for this part of the ritual was hygienic — i.e., to protect the health of the child. The Chatam Sofer issued a leniency (Heter) that some consider to have been conditional, to perform metzitzah with a sponge to be used instead of oral suction in a letter to his student, Rabbi Lazar Horowitz of Vienna. This letter was never published among Rabbi Sofer's responsa but rather in the secular journal Kochvei Yitzchok.[77][78] along with letters from Dr. Wertheimer, the chief doctor of the Viennese General Hospital. It relates the story that a mohe (who was suspected of transmitting herpes via metzizah to infants) was checked several times and never found to have signs of the disease and that a ban was requested because of the "possibility of future infections".[79] Moshe Schick (1807–1879), a student of Moses Sofer, states in his book of Responsa, She'eilos u'teshuvos Maharam Schick (Orach Chaim 152.) that Moses Sofer gave the ruling in that specific instance only because the mohel refused to step down and had secular government connections that prevented his removal in favor of another mohel, and the Heter may not be applied elsewhere. He also states (Yoreh Deah 244) that the practice is possibly a Sinaitic tradition, i.e., Halacha l'Moshe m'Sinai. Other sources contradict this claim, with copies of Moses Sofer's responsa making no mention of the legal case or of his ruling applying only one situation. Rather, that responsa makes quite clear that "metzizah" was a health measure and should never be employed where there is health risk to the infant.[80]

Chaim Hezekiah Medini, after corresponding with the greatest Jewish sages of the generation, concluded the practice to be Halacha l'Moshe m'Sinai and elaborates on what prompted Moses Sofer to give the above ruling.[81] He tells the story that a student of Moses Sofer, Lazar Horowitz, Chief Rabbi of Vienna at the time and author of the responsa Yad Elazer, needed the ruling because of a governmental attempt to ban circumcision completely if it included metztitzah b'peh. He therefore asked Sofer to give him permission to do brit milah without metzitzah b'peh. When he presented the defense in secular court, his testimony was erroneously recorded to mean that Sofer stated it as a general ruling.[82] The Rabbinical Council of America (RCA), which claims to be the largest American organization of Orthodox rabbis, published an article by mohel Yehudi Pesach Shields in its summer 1972 issue of Tradition magazine, calling for the abandonment of Metzitzah b'peh.[83] Since then the RCA has issued an opinion that advocates methods that do not involve contact between the mohel's mouth and the infant's genitals, such as the use a sterile syringe, thereby eliminating the risk of infection.[67] According to the Chief Rabbinate of Israel[84] and the Edah HaChareidis[85] metzitza b'peh should still be performed.

The practice of metzitzah b'peh posed a serious risk in the transfer of herpes from mohelim to eight Israeli infants, one of whom suffered brain damage.[69][86] When three New York City infants contracted herpes after metzizah b'peh by one mohel and one of them died, New York authorit took out a restraining order against the mohel requiring use of a sterile glass tube, or pipette.[57][87] The mohel's attorney argued that the New Yo

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlides, Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During the exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides were sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zimmiyan-ı Karaman or Karamaniyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

Muslims account for 85 percent of casualties in al Qaeda attacks

BY ALEXANDER MAYER | December 9th, 2009 |

The Combating Terrorism Center at West Point recently released a stunning report which found that Muslims have accounted for 85 percent of the casualties from al Qaeda attacks between 2004-2008. Even more astounding, during the last two years of the study (2006-2008), the percentage of al Qaeda's Muslim victims skyrocketed to an almost-unbelievable 98 percent.

Al Qaeda's affiliate in Syria claims another suicide attack

BY BILL ROGGIO | December 13th, 2012 | @billroggio

The Al Nusrah Front for the People of the Levant, al Qaeda in Iraq's affiliate in Syria, claimed credit for yesterday's complex attack against the Syrian Interior Ministry in Damascus. Five people were killed in the bombings.

The Al Nusrah Front said two of its suicide bombers "parked their two vehicles in front of the building, and then stormed and clashed with those inside and killed a lot of them," according to the SITE Intelligence Group, which obtained the statements from the Al Nusrah that were published on Twitter (the jihadist forums were not accessible). After the suicide bombers launched their attack, the two car bombs "were blown up remotely."

Five people were reported to have been killed in the blasts, and the force of the explosions collapsed several walls of the building.

The terror group, which was designated as such by the US on Dec. 11, has now claimed credit for 43 of the 52 suicide attacks that have taken place in Syria in the past 12 months [see LWJ report, US adds Al Nusrah Front, 2 leaders to terrorism list, for information on the designation].

The group has become one of the most powerful and

- The 2003 Riyadh compound bombings occurred on 12 May 2003, in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. Al-Qaeda gunmen stormed building complexes inhabited by Western expatriates, killing 39 people and wounding over 160.[20]
- The 2003 Casablanca bombings occurred on May 16, 2003, in Casablanca, Morocco. 45 people were killed as a result of these attacks (12 suicide-bombers and 33 victims).
- The 2003 Marriott Hotel bombing occurred on August 5, 2003, in Jakarta, Indonesia. A suicide bomber detonated a car bomb outside the lobby of the newly opened JW Marriott luxury hotel, killing twelve people and injuring 150. Those killed were mostly Indonesian, with the exception of one Dutch.
- The 2003 Istanbul bombings were four truck bomb attacks carried out on November 15, 2003, and November 20, 2003, in Istanbul, Turkey, leaving 57 people dead, and 700 wounded. The attacks targeted two synagogues, a British consulate, and a British bank in Istanbul.

2004 [edit]

- Four Al-Qaeda gunmen carried out the 2004 Khobar attacks on May 29, 2004.[21]

2005 [edit]

- The November 2005 Amman bombings were suicide attacks on 3 hotels in Jordan during a Palestinian wedding. 57 people were killed and another 115 were injured.

2007 [edit]

- Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) launched two car bomb attacks on 11 April 2007, which targeted the government palace and a police station located in Algiers.
- Al-Qaeda is believed to have been responsible for the failed assassination attempt on former Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto on 7 October 2007.[22]
- al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb launched two car bomb attacks on 11 December 2007, which targeted Algerian Constitutional court and a UN office in Algiers.

- Al-Qaeda claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Danish embassy in Pakistan on June 2, 2008.[23] Mustafa Abu al-Yazid, a high-ranking member of Al-Qaeda, issued a statement after the bombing, claiming that the attack was a response to the 2005 publication of the Muhammed Cartoons.[24]
- The Battle of Wanat occurred on July 13, 2008, when forces including Al-Qaeda and Taliban guerrillas attacked NATO troops near the village of Wanat in the Waygal district in Afghanistan's far eastern province of Nuristan. The Battle of Wanat has been described as the "Black Hawk Down" of the War in Afghanistan, as one of the bloodiest attacks of the war and one of several attacks on remote outposts.[8] In contrast to previous roadside bombs and haphazard attacks and ambushes, this attack was well coordinated with fighters from many insurgent and terrorist groups with an effort that was disciplined and sustained which was able to target key assets such as the TOW launcher with precision.

- Shortly after the arrest of Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab in the December 25, 2009, following an attempted bombing on Northwest Airlines Flight 253, the suspect reportedly told officials he had traveled to Yemen for training by Al-Qaeda, although British counterterrorism officials dismissed the claims.[25] President Barack Obama's top security official Janet Napolitano on December 27 stated "Right now we have no indication it's part of anything larger", warning it would be "inappropriate to speculate" that Al-Qaeda had sent Abdulmutallab on a suicide mission. HOMEPAGE

Sanders played a rabbi in the low-budget 1999 comedy "My X-Girlfriend's Wedding Reception." The film has a 5.3/10 rating on IMDB, but a 100% score on Rotten Tomatoes, based on 86 user ratings.

His cameo as Rabbi Manny Shevitz, who gives a speech during a wedding reception, doesn't disappoint.

The family resolved to convert to Judaism, yet in their quest to find their place in the world, one major obstacle loomed: Hernandez was an illegal immigrant.

Hernandez heard about a federal program that allowed migrants from Guatemala and Central America to apply for political asylum and receive permanent U.S. residency status in the form of a Green Card. The application process takes years

Heineken

Founder and visionary

Gerard Adriaan Heineken is born into an Amsterdam merchant family in 1841. In 1864 he buys brewery 'De Hooiberg' (The Haystack) in Amsterdam and immediately turns his focus towards brewing uncompromised premium lager beer. He embraces the latest brewing innovations and becomes the first brewer on the planet to introduce a quality control lab. He also did a lot for the city of Amsterdam.

Karlsberg (German pronunciation: [ˈkaɪ̯ls.bɛɐ̯k] 🔊) is one of the largest breweries in Germany; the Karlsberg Group also owns various other beer brands. It is called Karlsbräu outside of Germany to differentiate it from the Danish brewing company Carlsberg.

History [edit]

Established 1878 in the town of Homburg, Saarland (then part of Bavaria), the brewery was named after the nearby Karlsberg Castle. Karlsberg's ownership has been handed down through generations. The current owner, Richard Weber, is the great-grandson of the brewery's founder.

Brands [edit]

Karlsberg Group [edit]

The Karlsberg Group also owns and distributes other beer brands, among them the German brewery Königsbacher (in Koblenz) and the French brewery Brasserie de Saverne. The juice producers Merziger, Klindworth and Niehoffs Vaihinger belong to the company. In 2001 Karlsberg acquired controlling interest in the Mineralbrunnen Überkingen-Teinach company from Nestlé, including Afri-Cola and the mineral water brands Staatlich Fachingen and Hirschquelle from the Black Forest. Alcohol-free drinks today make up more than 50% of the company's turnover (of 691 million euros in the fiscal year 2004/05).

Carlsberg A/S (/ˈkɑːrlzbɜːrɡ/; Danish: [ˈkʰɑˀls.pɛɐ̯ˀ]) is a Danish multinational brewer. Founded in 1847 by J. C. Jacobsen, the company's headquarters is in Copenhagen, Denmark. Since Jacobsen's death in 1887, the majority owner of the company has been the Carlsberg Foundation. The company's flagship brand is Carlsberg (named after Jacobsen's son Carl). Other brands include Tuborg, Kronenbourg, Somersby cider, Holsten, Neptun, Belgian Grimbergen, Fix, one of Greece's oldest brands and more than 500 local beers.[6][failed verification] The company employs around 41,000 people, primarily in Europe and Asia. Carlsberg is currently the 6th largest brewery in the world based on revenue.[7]

History [edit]

Carlsberg was founded by J. C. Jacobsen, a philanthropist and avid art collector. With his fortune he amassed an art collection which is housed in the Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek in central Copenhagen. The first brew was finished on 10 November 1847, and the export of Carlsberg beer began in 1868 with the export of one barrel to Edinburgh, Scotland.[8] Some of the company's original logos include an elephant, after which some of its lagers are named, and the swastika,[note 1] the use of which was discontinued in the 1930s because of its association with political parties in neighboring Germany.

Jacobsen's son Carl opened a brewery in 1882 named Ny (New) Carlsberg forcing him

Circumcision in the Talmud
Shabbat 137b:6-8
The Sages taught in a Tosefta that one who circumcises a child recites: Who has made us holy through His commandments, and commanded us concerning circumcision. The father of the circumcised child recites: Who has made us holy through His commandments, and commanded us to bring him into the covenant of Abraham, our father. Those standing there recite: Just as he has entered into the covenant, so may he enter into Torah, marriage, and good deeds. And the one who recites the additional blessing says: Who made the beloved one holy from the womb, marked the decree in his flesh, and gave his descendants the seal and the sign of the holy covenant. Therefore, as a reward for this, the living God, our Portion, commanded to deliver the beloved of our flesh from destruction, for the sake of His covenant that He set in our flesh. Blessed are You, Lord, Who establishes the covenant. One who circumcises converts says: Blessed are You, Lord, our God, King of the universe, Who made us holy with His commandments, and commanded us concerning circumcision. And the one who recites the additional blessing recites: Who has made us holy with His commandments, and commanded us to circumcise converts, and to drip from them covenantal blood, as were it not for the blood of the covenant, the heaven and earth would not be sustained, as it is stated: "If My covenant would not be with day and night, the ordinances of heaven and earth I would not have placed" (Jeremiah 33:25), which is

Daniel S. Zion (3 August 1883, Salonica – 13 November 1979, Jaffa) was an Orthodox rabbi, Kabbalist[1] and political activist. Zion moved to Sofia, Bulgaria, as a slaughterer and cantor. Bulgaria's Jewish community at the time was almost completely assimilated, and there were no ultra-Orthodox communities in the country during World War II.[2] In 1943, Zion was removed from his position on the local rabbinic court for his newfound belief that Jesus of Nazareth was the Jewish Messiah.[3]

Daniel S. Zion (3 August 1883, Salonica – 13 November 1979, Jaffa) was an Orthodox rabbi, Kabbalist[1] and political activist. Zion moved to Sofia, Bulgaria, as a slaughterer and cantor. Bulgaria's Jewish community at the time was almost completely assimilated, and there were no ultra-Orthodox communities in the country during World War II.[2] In 1943, Zion was removed from his position on the local rabbinic court for his newfound belief that Jesus of Nazareth was the Jewish Messiah.[3]

In 1934 James Armand de Rothschild established the first local commercial brewery with Gaston Dreyfus in Rishon LeZion. In 1940 the Nesher Brewery was commissioned by the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel to supply beer to Australian troops who were in Israel. From 1942 the brewery enlarged its plant to increase the production of beer requested by both military and civilian consumers. In the 1952 in the city of Netanya the largest brewery of the Middle East has been founded with the name National Brewery by a group of investors led by Louis Herzberg. The National Brewery produced every year 400,000 barrels of beer and in 1954 it started to ship 180,000 bottles of its Abir laber beer to United States.
In 1924, Baron Edmond de Rothschild set up PICA, the Palestine Jewish Colonization Association, through which his enterprises and villages in Palestine were managed. He helped set up the Electric Corporation, the Potash Company, and the Nesher Beer Company. He also established the wine cellars of Rishon LeZion and Zichron Yaacov. He died in 1934 in France.
In 1957, PICA transferred its considerable properties to the government and to the Jewish Agency. The

Metzitzah B'peh (Direct Oral Suctioning)

When a baby is circumcised, some ritual Jewish circumcisers (mohelim) do a practice called metzitzah b'peh. Metzitzah b'peh is when the mohel uses their mouth to suck blood away from the baby's circumcision wound as part of the circumcision ritual. After metzitzah b'peh, some babies can get an infection.

How Metzitzah B'peh (Direct Oral Suctioning) Can Cause Infection

Public health experts have found that metzitzah b'peh can put babies at risk of getting a harmful virus called herpes simplex virus type 1 or HSV-1. Some of these babies became seriously ill. Some developed brain damage, and others have died. There is no proven way eliminate the risk of HSV-1 infection from direct oral suctioning, though there are options to reduce the risk.

Many adults carry HSV-1 in their bodies. They may have no symptoms or only mild

Kiddush Nesachim

Menachot (7:4) | Yisrael Bankier | 10 years ago

We have learnt that while many of the mincha offerings were brought independently, some were brought either alongside or secondary to other korbanot. Nesachim, consisting of wine and a mincha offering were brought with a korban olah or shelamim. The Mishnah (7:4) discusses a case where one sanctifies the nesachim by placing them in a kli sharet * (vessel designated for service) and the korban was then found to be invalid. The Mishnah teaches that if there is another sacrifice that requires nesachim it can be brought for that one.[1] If not, then the nesachim should be left beyond the required time to offer it, thereby invalidating it (lina), and burnt in the manner of invalid korbanot.

The Gemara(79a) cites the statement of R' Zeira that nesachim are only sanctified at the time of slaughter. Consequently it concludes that when the Mishnah teaches that the korban was found to be pasul it must mean that something went wrong at the time of zerika (casting the blood). If it happened at the time of shechita the nesachim would not be sanctified.

Rashi understands that according to R' Zeiram, prior to shechita the nesachim are considered chullin (unsanctified). Along this line the Bartenura explains that only after shechita are the nesachim sanctified such that they can be invalid due to lina or yotze (being taken outside the

Composed: Talmudic Israel, c.190 – c.230 CE

Menachot ("Meal Offerings") is the second tractate in Seder Kodashim ("Order of Holy Things"). Its thirteen chapters mainly discuss flour-based offerings brought in the Temple, as well as oil and wine libations. Among the topics addressed are intentions that nullify an offering's validity, details of the process of removing a handful of meal-offering, sanctifying it in a vessel, carrying it, and burning it on the altar, and the preparation and consumption of showbread (loaves that were always present on a dedicated table in the Temple).

ורבי התם הוא דאיתחיל באכילה נמי לה לכולא מילתא דאכילה אבל בפני עצמן נסכים עדיפי הואיל דמיתאמרא שירה עלייהו:

And Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi holds that it is specifically there, in the case of meal offerings and libations that accompany an animal offering, that the meal offering is burned on the altar before the wine libation is poured on the altar. This is because since the altar has started to eat, i.e., consume, the animal offering, one must first complete the entire matter of the altar's eating, including the meal offering. The pouring of the wine on the altar is likened more to drinking than to eating. But when the meal offering and the libations are brought by themselves, the libations are considered preferable, because the song of the Levites is recited over them. Consequently, the pouring of the libations precedes the burning of the meal offering on the altar.

§ The mishna teaches: Failure to perform some of the placements of blood on the external altar does not prevent fulfillment of the mitzva with the other placements, as even if the priest performed only one placement, the offering effects atonement after the fact.

Apropos this statement, the Sages taught in a beraita: From where is it derived with regard to all offerings whose blood is to be placed on the external altar that if one placed their blood with one act of placement, as opposed to the two or four that are required depending upon the offering, that the offering has nevertheless effected atonement after the fact, i.e., one has fulfilled his obligation to bring the offering? As it is stated: "And the blood of your offerings shall be poured out against the altar of the Lord your God" (Deuteronomy 12:27).

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlid Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides wer sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zımm Karaman or Karamanlıyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

Muslims account for 85 percent of casualties in al Qaeda attacks

BY ALEXANDER MAYER | December 9th, 2009 |

The Combating Terrorism Center at West Point recently released a stunning report which found that Muslims have accounted for 85 percent of the casualties from al Qaeda attacks between 2004-2008. Even more astounding, during the last two years of the study (2006-2008), the percentage of al Qaeda's Muslim victims skyrocketed to an almost-unbelievable 98 percent.

Al Qaeda's affiliate in Syria claims another suicide attack

BY BILL ROGGIO | December 13th, 2012 | @billroggio

The Al Nusrah Front for the People of the Levant, al Qaeda in Iraq's affiliate in Syria, claimed credit for yesterday's complex attack against the Syrian Interior Ministry in Damascus. Five people were killed in the bombings.

The Al Nusrah Front said two of its suicide bombers "parked their two vehicles in front of the building, and then stormed and clashed with those inside and killed a lot of them," according to the SITE Intelligence Group, which obtained the statements from the Al Nusrah that were published on Twitter (the jihadist forums were not accessible). After the suicide bombers launched their attack, the two car bombs "were blown up remotely."

Five people were reported to have been killed in the blasts, and the force of the explosions collapsed several walls of the building.

The terror group, which was designated as such by the US on Dec. 11, has now claimed credit for 43 of the 52 suicide attacks that have taken place in Syria in the past 12 months [see LWJ report, US adds Al Nusrah Front, 2 leaders to terrorism list, for information on the designation].

The group has become one of the most powerful and

• The 2003 Riyadh compound bombings occurred on 12 May 2003, in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. Al-Qaeda gunmen stormed building complexes inhabited by Western expatriates, killing 39 people and wounding over 160.[70]
• The 2003 Casablanca bombings occurred on May 16, 2003, in Casablanca, Morocco. 45 people were killed as a result of these attacks (12 suicide-bombers and 33 victims).
• The 2003 Marriott Hotel bombing occurred on August 5, 2003, in Jakarta, Indonesia. A suicide bomber detonated a car bomb outside the lobby of the newly opened JW Marriott luxury hotel, killing twelve people and injuring 150. Those killed were mostly Indonesian, with the exception of one Dutch.
• The 2003 Istanbul bombings were four truck bomb attacks carried out on November 15, 2003, and November 20, 2003, in Istanbul, Turkey, leaving 57 people dead, and 700 wounded. The attacks targeted two synagogues, a British consulate, and a British bank in Istanbul.

2004 [edit]

• Four Al-Qaeda gunmen carried out the 2004 Khobar attacks on May 29, 2004.[71]

2005 [edit]

• The November 2005 Amman bombings were suicide attacks on 3 hotels in Jordan during a Palestinian wedding. 57 people were killed and another 115 were injured.

2007 [edit]

• Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) launched two car bomb attacks on 11 April 2007, which targeted the government palace and a police station located in Algiers.
• Al-Qaeda is believed to have been responsible for the failed assassination attempt on former Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto on 7 October 2007.[72]
• al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb launched two car bomb attacks on 11 December 2007, which targeted Algerian Constitutional court and a UN office in Algiers.

• Al-Qaeda claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Danish embassy in Pakistan on June 2, 2008.[73] Mustafa Abu al-Yazid, a high-ranking member of Al-Qaeda, issued a statement after the bombing, claiming that the attack was a response to the 2005 publication of the Muhammed Cartoons.[74]
• The Battle of Wanat occurred on July 13, 2008, when forces including Al-Qaeda and Taliban guerrillas attacked NATO troops near the village of Wanat in the Waygal district in Afghanistan's far eastern province of Nuristan. The Battle of Wanat has been described as the "Black Hawk Down" of the War in Afghanistan, as one of the bloodiest attacks of the war and one of several attacks on remote outposts.[8] In contrast to previous roadside bombs and haphazard attacks and ambushes, this attack was well coordinated with fighters from many insurgent and terrorist groups with an effort that was disciplined and sustained which was able to target key assets such as the TOW launcher with precision.

• Shortly after the arrest of Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab in the December 25, 2009, following an attempted bombing on Northwest Airlines Flight 253, the suspect reportedly told officials he had traveled to Yemen for training by Al-Qaeda, although British counterterrorism officials dismissed the claims.[75] President Barack Obama's top security official Janet Napolitano on December 27 stated "Right now we have no indication it's part of anything larger", warning it would be "inappropriate to speculate" that Al-Qaeda had sent Abdulmutallab on a suicide mission. Chrysler dates back to 1925, founded by Walter Chrysler, and it is still referred to as part of the Big Three or Detroit Three, referring to General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler.

Chrysler has teetered many times on the edge of a financial cliff. It was on the verge of bankruptcy in the late 1970s and was saved by government loan guarantees worth $1.5 billion that bought time until the release of a surprising

Andrew Schiller asked:

Dear Rabbi Chrysler,

Thanks again for the terrific response! I feel I have gained a lot of knowledge from your responses, overall, which I greatly appreciate.

On 13b, there is something else that I'm a little confused about.

On November 18, 1978, Peoples Temple founder Jim Jones leads hundreds of his followers in a mass murder-suicide at their agricultural commune in a remote part of the South American nation of Guyana. Many of Jones' followers willingly ingested a poison-laced punch while others were forced to do so at gunpoint. The final death toll at Jonestown that day was 909; a third of those who perished were children.

Prosecutors told the jury that Gutfinski considered himself a worshiper of Satan, and told police that he was a vampire who drank blood -- both his own blood and that of others.

Gutfinski and Jones were both convicted of elevated aggravated assault, aggravated assault and reckless conduct.

Gutfinski was sentenced to 10 years in jail in 2000, with all but three years of the sentence suspended. He was also given four years probation.

James Warren Jones (May 13, 1931 – November 18, 1978) was an American mass murderer and cult leader who led the Peoples Temple between 1955 and 1978. In what he termed "revolutionary suicide", a term he took from the novel by the same name by Huey Newton, Jones and the members of his inner circle planned and orchestrated a mass murder-suicide in his remote jungle commune at Jonestown, Guyana, on November 18, 1978. Jones and the events that occurred at Jonestown have had a defining influence on society's perception of cults.

As a child, Jones developed an affinity for Pentecostalism and a desire to preach. He was ordained as a Christian minister in the Independent Assemblies of God, Carlsberg A/S (/ˈkɑːlsbɜːɡ/; Danish: [ˈkʰɑ̝ˀlsˌpɐ̝ˀ]) is a Danish multinational brewer. Founded in 1847 by J. C. Jacobsen, the company's headquarters is in Copenhagen, Denmark. Since Jacobsen's death in 1887, the majority owner of the company has been the Carlsberg Foundation. The company's flagship brand is Carlsberg (named after Jacobsen's son Carl). Other brands include Tuborg, Kronenbourg, Somersby cider, Holsten, Neptun, Belgian Grimbergen, Fix, one of Greece's oldest brands and more than 500 local beers. The company employs around 41,000 people, primarily in Europe and Asia. Carlsberg is currently the 6th largest brewery in the world based on revenue.

History [edit]
Carlsberg was founded by J. C. Jacobsen, a philanthropist and avid art collector. With his fortune he amassed an art collection which is housed in the Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek in central Copenhagen. The first brew was finished on 10 November 1847, and the export of Carlsberg beer began in 1868 with the export of one barrel to Edinburgh, Scotland. Some of the company's original logos include an elephant, after which some of its lagers are named, and the swastika, the use of which was discontinued in the 1930s because of its association with political parties in neighboring Germany.

OUR HISTORY

A RICH HISTORY OF MAKING HISTORY.

Swisher traces its roots back to 1861 when David Swisher, a merchant out of Newark, Ohio, received a small cigar business in settlement of a debt. David and his four sons began to sell cigars across the Midwest from their "rolling stores" or wagons. The cigars were rolled by hand every day in a one-room "manufactory" in Newark. In 1888, David's sons, John and Harry, bought the company from their father and renamed it Swisher Brothers. The company experienced great growth, and by 1895 the business had grown into three factories that employed over 1,000 people who hand-rolled as many as 300,000 cigars per day.

Metzitzah B'Peh* (oral suction) [edit]

This has also been abbreviated as MBP.[63]

The ancient method of performing metzitzah b'peh (Hebrew: מְצִיצָה בְּפֶה)—or oral suction[64][65]—has become controversial. The process has the mohel place his mouth directly on the infant's genital wound to draw blood away from the cut. The vast majority of Rabbinical Jewish circumcisio ceremonies do not use metzitzah b'peh,[66] but some Haredi Jews continue to perform it, while traditional Karaites and Beta Israel never practice it.[67][68][57] It has been documented that the practice poses a serious risk of spreading herpes to the infant.[69][70][71][72] Proponents maintain tha there is no conclusive evidence that links herpes to Metzitza,[73] and that attempts to limit this practice infringe on religious freedom.[74][75][76]

The practice has become a controversy in both secular and Jewish medical ethics. The ritual of metzitzah is found in Mishnah Shabbat 19:2, wh lists it as one of the four steps involved in the circumcision rite. Rabbi Moses Sofer, also known as the Chatam Sofer (1762–1839), observed tha the Talmud states that the rationale for this part of the ritual was hygienic — i.e., to protect the health of the child. The Chatam Sofer issued a leniency (Heter) that some consider to have been conditional, to perform metzitzah with a sponge to be used instead of oral suction in a letter to his student, Rabbi Lazar Horowitz of Vienna. This letter was never published among Rabbi Sofer's responsa but rather in the secular journal Kochvei Yitzchok.[77][78] along with letters from Dr. Wertheimer, the chief doctor of the Viennese General Hospital. It relates the story that a mohe (who was suspected of transmitting herpes via metzizah to infants) was checked several times and never found to have signs of the disease and that a ban was requested because of the "possibility of future infections".[79] Moshe Schick (1807–1879), a student of Moses Sofer, states in his book of Responsa, She'eilos u'teshuvos Maharam Schick (Orach Chaim 152,) that Moses Sofer gave the ruling in that specific instance only because the mohel refused to step down and had secular government connections that prevented his removal in favor of another mohel, and the Heter may not be applied elsewhere. He also states (Yoreh Deah 244) that the practice is possibly a Sinaitic tradition, i.e., Halacha l'Moshe m'Sinai. Other sources contradict this claim, with copies of Moses Sofer's responsa making no mention of the legal case or of his ruling applying only one situation. Rather, that responsa makes quite clear that "metzizah" was a health measure and should never be employed where there is health risk to the infant.[80]

Chaim Hezekiah Medini, after corresponding with the greatest Jewish sages of the generation, concluded the practice to be Halacha l'Moshe m'Sinai and elaborates on what prompted Moses Sofer to give the above ruling.[81] He tells the story that a student of Moses Sofer, Lazar Horowitz, Chief Rabbi of Vienna at the time and author of the responsa Yad Elazer, needed the ruling because of a governmental attempt to ban circumcision completely if it included metzitzah b'peh. He therefore asked Sofer to give him permission to do brit milah without metzitzah b'peh. When he presented the defense in secular court, his testimony was erroneously recorded to mean that Sofer stated it as a general ruling.[82] The Rabbinical Council of America (RCA), which claims to be the largest American organization of Orthodox rabbis, published an article by mohel Yehudi Pesach Shields in its summer 1972 issue of Tradition magazine, calling for the abandonment of Metzitzah b'peh.[83] Since then the RCA has issued an opinion that advocates methods that do not involve contact between the mohel's mouth and the infant's genitals, such as the use a sterile syringe, thereby eliminating the risk of infection.[67] According to the Chief Rabbinate of Israel[84] and the Edah HaChareidis[85] metzitza b'peh should still be performed.

The practice of metzitzah b'peh posed a serious risk in the transfer of herpes from mohelim to eight Israeli infants, one of whom suffered brain damage.[69][86] When three New York City infants contracted herpes after metzizah b'peh by one mohel and one of them died, New York authorit took out a restraining order against the mohel requiring use of a sterile glass tube, or pipette.[57][87] The mohel's attorney argued that the New Yo

This has also been abbreviated as MBP.[63]

The ancient method of performing metzitzah b'peh (Hebrew: מְצִיצָה בְּפֶה)—or oral suction[64][65]—has become controversial. The process has the mohel place his mouth directly on the infant's genital wound to draw blood away from the cut. The vast majority of Rabbinical Jewish circumcisio ceremonies do not use metzitzah b'peh,[66] but some Haredi Jews continue to perform it, while traditional Karaites and Beta Israel never practice it.[67][68][57] It has been documented that the practice poses a serious risk of spreading herpes to the infant.[69][70][71][72] Proponents maintain tha there is no conclusive evidence that links herpes to Metzitza,[73] and that attempts to limit this practice infringe on religious freedom.[74][75][76]

The practice has become a controversy in both secular and Jewish medical ethics. The ritual of metzitzah is found in Mishnah Shabbat 19:2, wh lists it as one of the four steps involved in the circumcision rite. Rabbi Moses Sofer, also known as the Chatam Sofer (1762–1839), observed tha the Talmud states that the rationale for this part of the ritual was hygienic — i.e., to protect the health of the child. The Chatam Sofer issued a leniency (Heter) that some consider to have been conditional, to perform metzitzah with a sponge to be used instead of oral suction in a letter to his student, Rabbi Lazar Horowitz of Vienna. Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlides, Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During the exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides were sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zimmiyan-ı Karaman or Karamaniyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

Muslims account for 85 percent of casualties in al Qaeda attacks

BY ALEXANDER MAYER | December 9th, 2009 |

The Combating Terrorism Center at West Point recently released a stunning report which found that Muslims have accounted for 85 percent of the casualties from al Qaeda attacks between 2004-2008. Even more astounding, during the last two years of the study (2006-2008), the percentage of al Qaeda's Muslim victims skyrocketed to an almost-unbelievable 98 percent.

Al Qaeda's affiliate in Syria claims another suicide attack

BY BILL ROGGIO | December 13th, 2012 | @billroggio

The Al Nusrah Front for the People of the Levant, al Qaeda in Iraq's affiliate in Syria, claimed credit for yesterday's complex attack against the Syrian Interior Ministry in Damascus. Five people were killed in the bombings.

The Al Nusrah Front said two of its suicide bombers "parked their two vehicles in front of the building, and then stormed and clashed with those inside and killed a lot of them," according to the SITE Intelligence Group, which obtained the statements from the Al Nusrah that were published on Twitter (the jihadist forums were not accessible). After the suicide bombers launched their attack, the two car bombs "were blown up remotely."

Five people were reported to have been killed in the blasts, and the force of the explosions collapsed several walls of the building.

The terror group, which was designated as such by the US on Dec. 11, has now claimed credit for 43 of the 52 suicide attacks that have taken place in Syria in the past 12 months [see LWJ report, US adds Al Nusrah Front, 2 leaders to terrorism list, for information on the designation].

The group has become one of the most powerful and

- The 2003 Riyadh compound bombings occurred on 12 May 2003, in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. Al-Qaeda gunmen stormed building complexes inhabited by Western expatriates, killing 39 people and wounding over 160.[20]
- The 2003 Casablanca bombings occurred on May 16, 2003, in Casablanca, Morocco. 45 people were killed as a result of these attacks (12 suicide-bombers and 33 victims).
- The 2003 Marriott Hotel bombing occurred on August 5, 2003, in Jakarta, Indonesia. A suicide bomber detonated a car bomb outside the lobby of the newly opened JW Marriott luxury hotel, killing twelve people and injuring 150. Those killed were mostly Indonesian, with the exception of one Dutch.
- The 2003 Istanbul bombings were four truck bomb attacks carried out on November 15, 2003, and November 20, 2003, in Istanbul, Turkey, leaving 57 people dead, and 700 wounded. The attacks targeted two synagogues, a British consulate, and a British bank in Istanbul.

2004 [edit]

- Four Al-Qaeda gunmen carried out the 2004 Khobar attacks on May 29, 2004.[21]

2005 [edit]

- The November 2005 Amman bombings were suicide attacks on 3 hotels in Jordan during a Palestinian wedding. 57 people were killed and another 115 were injured.

2007 [edit]

- Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) launched two car bomb attacks on 11 April 2007, which targeted the government palace and a police station located in Algiers.
- Al-Qaeda is believed to have been responsible for the failed assassination attempt on former Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto on 7 October 2007.[22]
- al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb launched two car bomb attacks on 11 December 2007, which targeted Algerian Constitutional court and a UN office in Algiers.

- Al-Qaeda claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Danish embassy in Pakistan on June 2, 2008.[23] Mustafa Abu al-Yazid, a high-ranking member of Al-Qaeda, issued a statement after the bombing, claiming that the attack was a response to the 2005 publication of the Muhammed Cartoons.[24]
- The Battle of Wanat occurred on July 13, 2008, when forces including Al-Qaeda and Taliban guerrillas attacked NATO troops near the village of Wanat in the Waygal district in Afghanistan's far eastern province of Nuristan. The Battle of Wanat has been described as the "Black Hawk Down" of the War in Afghanistan, as one of the bloodiest attacks of the war and one of several attacks on remote outposts.[8] In contrast to previous roadside bombs and haphazard attacks and ambushes, this attack was well coordinated with fighters from many insurgent and terrorist groups with an effort that was disciplined and sustained which was able to target key assets such as the TOW launcher with precision.

- Shortly after the arrest of Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab in the December 25, 2009, following an attempted bombing on Northwest Airlines Flight 253, the suspect reportedly told officials he had traveled to Yemen for training by Al-Qaeda, although British counterterrorism officials dismissed the claims.[25] President Barack Obama's top security official Janet Napolitano on December 27 stated "Right now we have no indication it's part of anything larger", warning it would be "inappropriate to speculate" that Al-Qaeda had sent Abdulmutallab on a suicide mission. History of Ladino

In the 1492 diaspora, when the Jews were expelled from Spain, they took with them Spanish of the late 15th century and expanded the lexicon with language influences from the Mediterranean, primarily where they settled.

Foreign words that mixed with Old Spanish derive mainly from Hebrew, Arabic, Turkish, Greek, French, and to a lesser extent from Portuguese and Italian.

The Ladino community population took a large hit when the Nazis destroyed most of the communities in Europe where Ladino had been the first language among Jews.

Very few of the people who speak Ladino are monolingual. Ladino language advocates fear that it could die out as speakers more often use the languages of the cultures around them.

It is estimated that about 200,000 people can understand or speak Ladino. Israel has one of the largest Ladino-speaking communities, with many words borrowed from Yiddish. Traditionally, Ladino was written in the Hebrew alphabet, writing and reading right to left. In the 20th

The statue unveiling was officially presented with a sermon by Satanic Temple co-founder Malcolm Jarry and Mesner, who read a statement tucked in the pages of a Bible, flanked by two men holding candles. As the two men removed the blanket from the monument (and started making out), Mesner ripped out pages from the Bible and threw them into the audience. Later, VIP ticket holders could get their photo taken on Baphomet's lap, while attendees hounded Mesner to autograph the torn Bible pages.

Heineken

Founder and visionary

Gerard Adriaan Heineken is born into an Amsterdam merchant family in 1841. In 1864 he buys brewery 'De Hooiberg' (The Haystack) in Amsterdam and immediately turns his focus towards brewing uncompromised premium lager beer. He embraces the latest brewing innovations and becomes the first brewer on the planet to introduce a quality control lab. He also did a lot for the city of Amsterdam.

Karlsberg (German pronunciation: [ˈkaɐlsˌbɛɐk]) is one of the largest breweries in Germany; the Karlsberg Group also owns various other beer brands. It is called Karlsbräu outside of Germany to differentiate it from the Danish brewing company Carlsberg.

History [edit]

Established 1878 in the town of Homburg, Saarland (then part of Bavaria), the brewery was named after the nearby Karlsberg Castle. Karlsberg's ownership has been handed down through generations. The current owner, Richard Weber, is the great-grandson of the brewery's founder.

Brands [edit]

Karlsberg Group [edit]

The Karlsberg Group also owns and distributes other beer brands, among them the German brewery Königsbacher (in Koblenz) and the French brewery Brasserie de Saverne. The juice producers Merziger, Klindworth and Niehoffs Vaihinger belong to the company. In 2001 Karlsberg acquired controlling interest in the Mineralbrunnen Überkingen-Teinach company from Nestlé, including Afri-Cola and the mineral water brands Staatlich Fachingen and Hirschquelle from the Black Forest. Alcohol-free drinks today make up more than 50% of the company's turnover (of 691 million euros in the fiscal year 2004/05).

Carlsberg A/S (/ˈkɑrlzbɜrɡ/; Danish: [ˈkʰɑˀls.pɛɡˀ]) is a Danish multinational brewer. Founded in 1847 by J. C. Jacobsen, the company's headquarters is in Copenhagen, Denmark. Since Jacobsen's death in 1887, the majority owner of the company has been the Carlsberg Foundation. The company's flagship brand is Carlsberg (named after Jacobsen's son Carl). Other brands include Tuborg, Kronenbourg, Somersby cider, Holsten, Neptun, Belgian Grimbergen, Fix, one of Greece's oldest brands and more than 500 local beers.[6][failed verification] The company employs around 41,000 people, primarily in Europe and Asia. Carlsberg is currently the 6th largest brewery in the world based on revenue.[7]

History [edit]

Carlsberg was founded by J. C. Jacobsen, a philanthropist and avid art collector. With his fortune he amassed an art collection which is housed in the Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek in central Copenhagen. The first brew was finished on 10 November 1847, and the export of Carlsberg beer began in 1868 with the export of one barrel to Edinburgh, Scotland.[8] Some of the company's original logos include an elephant, after which some of its lagers are named, and the swastika,[note 1] the use of which was discontinued in the 1930s because of its association with political parties in neighboring Germany.

Jacobsen's son Carl opened a brewery in 1882 named Ny (New) Carlsberg forcing him

In 1934 James Armand de Rothschild established the first local commercial brewery with Gaston Dreyfus in Rishon LeZion. In 1940 the Nesher Brewery was commissioned by the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel to supply beer to Australian troops who were in Israel. From 1942 the brewery enlarged its plant to increase the production of beer requested by both military and civilian consumers. In the 1952 in the city of Netanya the largest brewery of the Middle East has been founded with the name National Brewery by a group of investors led by Louis Herzberg. The National Brewery produced every year 400,000 barrels of beer and in 1954 it started to ship 180,000 bottles of its Abir labber beer to United States.

Spoetzl Brewery is the oldest independent brewery in Texas and one of the oldest in the country. It is now owned and operated by the Gambrinus Company out of San Antonio (they also own Trumer Brewery). Its Shiner Bock is a famous dark lager that you can get across the country, named for the town in which it was founded in 1909.

Spoetzl was opened as The Shiner Brewing Association by Czech and German immigrants in Shiner, Texas. They resolved to brew the beers they grew up drinking i their home countries. They appointed Herman Weiss as their first brewmaster, whic we listed as the founder for lack of the many names of the immigrants who founde the association that began the brewery.

Karamanli Turkish (Καραμανλήδικα)

Karamanli Turkish is a variety of Anatolian Turkish that was spoken by the Karamanlides, Turkish-speaking Orthodox Christians who lived in Ottoman Turkey until 1923. During the exchanges of populations between Turkey and Greece in 1923, the Karamanlides were sent to Greece, and some of them continued to speak Karamanli Turkish.

Karamanli Turkish was written with the Greek alphabet and many publications were produced during the 18th and 19th centuries. The Karamanlides were known as Zımmiyan-ı Karaman or Karamanıyan in Turkish, and their language as Karamanlıca or Karamanlı Türkçesi.

Abdus Salam: The Muslim science genius forgotten by history

Abdus Salam (credit: Getty Images)

The Pakistani physicist's work led to the discovery of the Higgs boson, but he was disowned in his home country for his faith. Now a Netflix film is putting him back in the spotlight.

In 1979, Pakistani scientist Abdus Salam won the Nobel Prize for physics. His life's work was key to defining a theory of particle physics still used today, and it laid the groundwork for the 2012 discovery of the Higgs boson – the particle responsible for giving all other particles mass.

Salam was the first Pakistani to win a Nobel, and his victory should have been a historic moment for the country. But instead, 40 years on, his story has largely been forgotten by the country in which he was born – in part because of the religious identi he held so dear. Now a new documentary on Netflix, Salam, The First  Nobel Laureate, is seeking to bring Salam and his achievements back into the spotlight.

ICTP The Abdus Salam International Centre for Theoretical Physics

Our History

From a humble beginning to international reknown

In 1964, Nobel Laureate Abdus Salam established ICTP in Trieste, Italy, acting in collaboration with Italian physicist Paolo Budinich. Inspired by his conviction that science is the common heritage of humankind, Salam secured the support of the Italian government, the UN, and the IAEA as founding sponsors.

From that moment, ICTP has become an international scientific hub of excellence linking scientists from developing countries with their colleagues worldwide, overcoming intellectual isolation and helping buil a strong scientific base around the world so that all countries can play their rightful role in the global science community and in the family of nations.

The choice of Trieste, a strategically located city in Italy whose history ha been defined by shifting political boundaries, symbolizes ICTP's commitment to international cooperation through science. This commitment was reinforced when UNESCO designated ICTP as a Category 1 institute to build scientific capacity in developing countries.

Salam was the first Pakistani to win a Nobel, and his victory should have been a historic moment for the country. But instead, 40 years on, his story has largely been forgotten by the country in which he was born – in part because of the religious identity he held so dear. Now a new documentary on Netflix, Salam, The First  Nobel Laureate, is seeking to bring Salam and his achievements back into the spotlight.

ICTP The Abdus Salam International Centre for Theoretical Physics IAEA unesco

Our History

From a humble beginning to international reknown

In 1964, Nobel Laureate Abdus Salam established ICTP in Trieste, Italy, acting in collaboration with Italian physicist Paolo Budinich. Inspired by his conviction that science is the common heritage of humankind, Salam secured the support of the Italian government, the UN, and the IAEA as founding sponsors.

From that moment, ICTP has become an international scientific hub of excellence linking scientists from developing countries with their colleagues worldwide, overcoming intellectual isolation and helping build a strong scientific base around the world so that all countries can play their rightful role in the global science community and in the family of nations.

The choice of Trieste, a strategically located city in Italy whose history has been defined by shifting political boundaries, symbolizes ICTP's commitment to international cooperation through science. This commitment was reinforced when UNESCO designated ICTP as a Category 1 institute to build scientific capacity in developing countries.

Abdus Salam: The Muslim science genius forgotten by history

The Pakistani physicist's work led to the discovery of the Higgs boson, but he was disowned in his home country for his faith. Now a Netflix film is putting him back in the spotlight.

In 1979, Pakistani scientist Abdus Salam won the Nobel Prize for physics. His life's work was key to defining a theory of particle physics still used today, and it laid the groundwork for the 2012 discovery of the Higgs boson – the particle responsible for giving all other particles mass.

Salam was the first Pakistani to win a Nobel, and his victory should have been a historic moment for the country. But instead, 40 years on, his story has largely been forgotten by the country in which he was born – in part because of the religious identity he held so dear. The house that porn built: Pornhub founder Feras Antoon is using his fortune to build massive mansion on Montreal nature reserve for his wife and two sons as the adult site comes under fire for exploiting children and violent sex

- Syrian-born Pornhub founder Feras Antoon, 45,has spent a fortune building a castle for his wife and two sons
- He bought two lots of land next in a Montreal nature reserve for CAN$2.3 million (US$1.8 million)
- He paid cash four years ago and has spent millions more building the home of his dreams
- DailyMail.com can reveal that the luxury mansion is near completion and the home backs on to Montreal's 'Mafia Row' where many crime figures live
- Pornhub has been hit with claims it was hosting videos of underage sex
- The company temporarily halted unverified users from uploading videos
- In a complaint filed Tuesday in California, alleged victims say the company 'knew it was partnering with and profiting from a sex trafficking venture for years'

The massive mansion standing on the edge of a nature reserve is testament to the millions of dollars to be made from porn, as the company faces claims it was facilitating the exploitation of children and sex trafficking victims.

For this is the house that porn built — the brand-new chateau in Montreal that Pornhub boss Feras Antoon will soon call home.

Syrian-born Antoon, 45, bought two lots of land next to the Bois-de-Saraguay nature park on the northern edge of Montreal for CAN$2.3 million (US$1.8 million) cash four years ago and spent millions more building the home of his dreams ever since.

Abdus Salam (1926-1996) was a 1979 Nobel laureate in Physics, and helped found the Theoretical Physics Group at Imperial College London. He first arrived at Imperial College London in 1957 and remained a professor here for the rest of his life. Salam won the Nobel Prize, along with Sheldon Glashow and Steven Weinberg, for his work in unifying two fundamental forces of nature: electromagnetism and the weak nuclear force. Not only was Salam a brilliant theoretical physicist, but he also championed the spread of science in the developing world.

He founded the International Centre for Theoretical Physics (ICTP) in Trieste in 1964, with the aim of having of its visiting researchers be from the Global South. The ICTP allowed scientists from all over the world to have access to world-class resources and a vibrant intellectual ecosystem for research collaboration. Throughout his life, Salam was a tireless advocate for science-driven development.

The Pakistani physicist's work led to the discovery of the Higgs boson, but he was disowned in his home country for his faith. Now a Netflix film is putting him back in the spotlight.

In 1979, Pakistani scientist Abdus Salam won the Nobel Prize for physics. His life's work was key to defining a theory of particle physics still used today, and it laid the groundwork for the 2012 discovery of the Higgs boson – the particle responsible for giving all other particles mass.

Salam was the first Pakistani to win a Nobel, and his victory should have been a historic moment for the country. But instead, 40 years on, his story has largely been forgotten by the country in which he was born – in part because of the religious identi he held so dear. Now a new documentary on Netflix, Salam, The First  Nobel Laureate, is seeking to bring Salam and his achievements back into the spotlight.

Inspired by his conviction that science is the common heritage of humankind, Salam secured the support of the Italian government, the UN, and the IAEA as founding sponsors.

From that moment, ICTP has become an international scientific hub of excellence linking scientists from developing countries with their colleagues worldwide, overcoming intellectual isolation and helping buil a strong scientific base around the world so that all countries can play their rightful role in the global science community and in the family of nations.

The choice of Trieste, a strategically located city in Italy whose history ha been defined by shifting political boundaries, symbolizes ICTP's commitment to international cooperation through science. This commitment was reinforced when UNESCO designated ICTP as a Category 1 institute to build scientific capacity in developing countries.

The house that porn built: Pornhub founder Feras Antoon is using his fortune to build massive mansion on Montreal nature reserve for his wife and two sons as the adult site comes under fire for exploiting children and violent sex

- Syrian-born Pornhub founder Feras Antoon, 45,has spent a fortune building a castle for his wife and two sons
- He bought two lots of land next in a Montreal nature reserve for CAN$2.3 million (US$1.8 million)
- He paid cash four years ago and has spent millions more building the home of his dreams
- DailyMail.com can reveal that the luxury mansion is near completion and the home backs on to Montreal's 'Mafia Row' where many crime figures live
- Pornhub has been hit with claims it was hosting videos of underage sex
- The company temporarily halted unverified users from uploading videos
- In a complaint filed Tuesday in California, alleged victims say the company 'knew it was partnering with and profiting from a sex trafficking venture for years'

The massive mansion standing on the edge of a nature reserve is testament to the millions of dollars to be made from porn, as the company faces claims it was facilitating the exploitation of children and sex trafficking victims.

For this is the house that porn built — the brand-new chateau in Montreal that Pornhub boss Feras Antoon will soon call home.

Syrian-born Antoon, 45, bought two lots of land next to the Bois-de-Saraguay nature park on the northern edge of Montreal for CAN$2.3 million (US$1.8 million) cash four years ago and spent millions more building the home of his dreams ever since.

In 1964, Nobel Laureate Abdus Salam established ICTP in Trieste, Italy, acting in collaboration with Italian physicist Paolo Budinich. Inspired by his conviction that science is the common heritage of humankind, Salam secured the support of the Italian government, the UN, and the IAEA as founding sponsors.

From that moment, ICTP has become an international scientific hub of excellence linking scientists from developing countries with their colleagues worldwide, overcoming intellectual isolation and helping buil a strong scientific base around the world so that all countries can play their rightful role in the global science community and in the family of nations.

The choice of Trieste, a strategically located city in Italy whose history ha been defined by shifting political boundaries, symbolizes ICTP's commitment to international cooperation through science. This commitment was reinforced when UNESCO designated ICTP as a Category 1 institute to build scientific capacity in developing countries.

Early life [edit]

Davis grew up in Essex.[1] In 1981, his family moved to Toronto, Ontario.

Career [edit]

Davis in a pornographic shoot in 2011

After graduating from high school, he went to Los Angeles to shoot a Playgirl pictorial at 18 years of age. Soon thereafter, he moved to the US permanently. From 1984 to 1988, he was employed as a stripper for the "Chippendale" dancers. In January 1993, Davis began his career in adult films.[2]

In 2003, Davis was inducted into the AVN Hall of Fame.[3] In February 2006, he was inducted into the XRCO Hall of Fame.[4]

In his last years (2009-2012), he worked primarily for kink.com, serving villainous roles in BDSM scenes. In 2012, Mark Davis announced his retirement from pornography, ending a nearly 20-year career.[2] In 2016, Davis returned to pornography to shoot exclusively for kink.com.[5]

Davis performed in about 2,400 videos in his pornographic career.

Personal life [edit]

Davis was married to Kobe Tai and, later, Kitten. He served as best man for Jenna Jameson and Brad Armstrong's wedding in 1996. He was also a friend of Jon Dough, whose suicide affected him "big time."

Awards [edit]

- 1994 XRCO Award – Best Anal Sex Scene (Butt Banged Bicycle Babes)[6]

Not to be confused with outlaw motorcycle clubs in general.

The Outlaws Motorcycle Club, incorporated as the American Outlaws Association or its acronym, A.O.A., is an international outlaw motorcycle club. Founded in McCook, Illinois in 1935, the Outlaws MC is the oldest outlaw biker club in the world.[3] With 441 chapters located in 43 countries, and a membership of over 3,000, the club is also the third-largest in the world, behind the Hells Angels and the Bandidos.[5][6][7]

The club is designated an organized crime syndicate by numerous law enforcement and international intelligence agencies, including the United States Department of Justice, the Criminal Intelligence Service Canada, and Europol.[8][9][10]

A Star Historian Opens a New Chapter: Jewish Slaveowners

By Eric Herschthal
August 17, 2006

More than a decade ago, pioneering historian Natalie Zemon Davis was trudging through German archives, performing research for her book "Women on the Margins: Three Seventeenth-Century Lives." Published in 1995 and universally praised, the book was seen as vintage Davis: scholarly, but not impenetrable; groundbreaking, but not immoderate.

Although she was researching the lives of three 17th-century Europeans, Davis found a curious connection between one of her characters, Maria Sibylla Merian, and a Jewish physician in South America. Fixed on the project at hand, Davis "tucked the [Jewish doctor]" in the back of her mind, but filed away Merian's

Rabbi Jack Luxemburg, Rabbi Emeritus retired after 35 years as Temple Beth Ami's Senior Rabbi, in July 2016. Beginning in July of 1981 as the congregation's first full-time Rabbi, Rabbi Luxemburg has been part of the Temple Beth Ami community for more than half of its history. His contributions to all facets of the congregation's life have enabled the Temple to preserve its special character, while enjoying a period of significant growth in membership and in both the quality and diversity of Temple programs.

Rabbi Luxemburg is active in the community, having served on the Executive Committees of the Jewish Community Council, the Jewish Social Service Agency, the Charles E. Smith Day School, the Mid-Atlantic region of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the National Rabbinic Cabinet of the United Jewish Appeal, and the Washington Board of Rabbis. He was a founder and Vice President of the Suburban Maryland Chapter of the American Jewish Congress, and has served in that organization as President of the National Capital Region and

The benefits of the plasma screen are brighter images and a much faster response. The speed of plasma allows you to work in advanced applications and in particular with graphics just as you would on a desktop. With the T4400SX even moving images won't blur on your screen. And the screen is unexpectedly large for a notebook, too. Try a diagonal of 9.5 inches (24 cm) for size.

For the generic term, see Personal watercraft. For other uses, see Jet Ski (disambiguation).

Jet Ski is the brand name of a personal watercraft (PWC)[1] manufactured by Kawasaki,[2] a Japanese company.[3] The term is often used generically to refer to any type of personal watercraft used mainly for recreation, and it is also used as a verb to describe the use of any type of PWC.

A 1985 Kawasaki 550 Jet Ski on a beach.

Kawasaki Jet Ski [edit]

"Jet Ski" is a proper noun and registered trademark of Kawasaki. Released in 1972, the stand-up Kawasaki Jet Ski was the first commercially successful personal watercraft in America (after reaching a license agreement with the inventor of the Sea-Doo, Clayton Jacobson II when his license agreement with Bombardier expired).[7] The Kawasaki Jet Ski was the only commercially successful PWC for almost 16 years, from the introduction of the WSAA in October 1972 through the reintroduction of the sit-down, runabout-style Bombardier Sea-Doo in 1988.[4] [5]

With the introduction of the Jet Ski, Kawasaki helped create the United States Jet Ski Boating Association (USJSBA), in cooperation with aftermarket companies and enthusiasts. In 1982 the name was changed to the International Jet Sports Boating Association (IJSBA). At the start, only JS440 stand-ups were raced. After Kawasaki introduced the runabout-style X2 in 1986, it gained its own class, later to be renamed the "Sport Class".[4]

June 02, 2016 at 8:45 pm EDT

NORTH BROOKFIELD, Mass. — A convicted child rapist from Barre was found working with children at a martial arts studio in North Brookfield and police were never notified.

"We're talking children. We're talking classes that are going on and this is something that is very alarming to me," said Chief Mark Smith with North Brookfield police.

A resident, who's a retired police officer, recognized 60-year-old David Sanderson from the sex offender registry and alerted police.

Miller's script makes several references to Biff's budding football career.

Direction from Neil Armfield (who worked with Lapaglia on the film Holding the Man) director Theresa Borg is exemplary.

For a play that is all but three hours, there is no letdown. With few props, the action mo pace.

Its emotional resonance endures, all the more so given the current state of the world an it is for many to make ends meet.

The Sewanee Project on Slavery, Race, and Reconciliation recently brought Dr. Joshua Rothman, a professor of history at the University of Alabama and one of the foremost scholars on the domestic slave trade in the United States, to lecture on the life and historical significance of John Armfield. The lecture, titled, "'He has been for many years engaged in the traffic of human flesh': John Armfield and America's Domestic Slave Trade" explored Armfield's career and his connections with the University of the South.

Director of the Project and professor of history Woody Register (C'80) opened the event by saying that Rothman "is making history here" at Sewanee, taking special note of the fact that Rothman's lecture was the first public event to acknowledge and consider Armfield's legacy with the University.

"I've been teaching at Sewanee for many years, and for many of those many years, I've been telling my students about John Armfield," Register said. "So to me this history has been one that any student of Sewanee should or even must know. I feel very strongly about that."

Armfield was the operator of the largest slave trading firm in the United States, and he was

Miller's script makes several references to Biff's budding football career.

Direction from Neil Armfield (who worked with Lapaglia on the film Holding the Man) director Theresa Borg is exemplary.

For a play that is all but three hours, there is no letdown. With few props, the action mo pace.

Its emotional resonance endures, all the more so given the current state of the world an it is for many to make ends meet.

within just a few weeks, then two more necessary inferences could be added to the six facts above...

- 7. Since Isaac was 37 at his mother's death, he was 37 when Rebekah was born.
- 8. Since Isaac was 40 when he married Rebekah, Rebekah would be 3 when the marriage took place (because 40-37=3)

But these last two inferences are spurious, because they are based not on what the scripture says in Genesis 22 and 23, but rather what is said in non-biblical tradition.

p. 296

and is in consequence regarded as a thirteenfold commandment, which must under all circumstances be observed. Hence the necessity for the twofold instruction.

MISHNA: One may perform everything necessary for circumcision on the Sabbath, as circumcising, tearing open, sucking out the blood, applying a plaster or caraway seed. If the latter had not been ground before the Sabbath, one may masticate it with the teeth and then apply it. If one had not mixed wine with oil before the Sabbath, he may apply each separately. One must not prepare an actual bandage (on the Sabbath), but may apply an old piece of linen; and if such had not been prepared before the Sabbath, the circumciser may bring it with him tied around his finger and even from another court (yard).

The Gemara asks: Until what age is one still considered a minor? Rav Ḥisda said: A girl until she is three years and one day old, and a boy until he is nine years and one day old, for these are the ages from which a sexual act in which they participate is considered a sexual act.

to finish the operation before night, but persisted in performing it. If in consequence he left excrescences which make the circumcision invalid, he simply made a wound without performing a commandment, and thus he becomes amenable to Karath."

"Sucking out the blood." R. Papa said: "The circumciser who does not suck out the wound places the child in danger, and should be discharged from office." Is this not self-evident?

*The Hebrew word "Veanvehu" is interpreted by the Talmud to signify "and I will beautify him," while in the translation of the Bible, by I. Leeser, it is translated, "I will sing his praise," and the reference made to the verse by the Talmud accepts the term in its Talmudical sense.

† This will be explained in the Tract Menachoth.

The Contemporary Torah, JPS, 2006

19 וְאֵלֶּה תּוֹלְדֹת יִצְחָק בֶּן־אַבְרָהָם אַבְרָהָם הוֹלִיד אֶת־יִצְחָק׃

This is the story of Isaac, son of Abraham. Abraham begot Isaac.

20 וַיְהִי יִצְחָק בֶּן־אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה בְּקַחְתּוֹ אֶת־רִבְקָה בַּת־בְּתוּאֵל הָאֲרַמִּי מִפַּדַּן אֲרָם אֲחוֹת לָבָן הָאֲרַמִּי לוֹ לְאִשָּׁה׃

Isaac was forty years old when he took to wife Rebekah, daughter of Bethuel the Aramean of Paddan-aram, sister of Laban the Aramean.

21 וַיֶּעְתַּר יִצְחָק לַיהוָה לְנֹכַח אִשְׁתּוֹ כִּי עֲקָרָה הִוא וַיֵּעָתֶר לוֹ יְהוָה וַתַּהַר רִבְקָה אִשְׁתּוֹ׃

Isaac pleaded with יהוה on behalf of his wife, because she was barren; and יהוה responded to his plea, and his wife Rebekah conceived.

Commentary

בן ארבעים שנה FORTY YEARS OLD — For when Abraham came from Mount Moriah he received the news that Rebecca was born (22:20). Isaac was then thirty-seven years old, because at that time Sarah died and from the birth of Isaac until the Binding — when Sarah died — there were 37 years since she was 90 years old when Isaac was born and 127 when she died, as it is said, (23:1) "And the life of Sarah was [one hundred and twenty seven years]" — thus Isaac was then 37 years old. At that period Rebecca was born and he waited until she was fit for marriage — 3 years — and then married her (Seder Olam).

Why is the age of consent 21?

Discussion

Bahrain has the highest age of consent in the world at 21. I'm curious as to why it is so high. Most countries set it between 16-18. Sime are lower 15 in France 14 in Germany 13 in Japan

The age at which a person is deemed legally competent to consent to sexual activity varies widely around the world - and even within Europe.

Middle East: Like parts of North Africa, most Middle Eastern countries do not have a set age of consent but require that the couple are married. This includes Afghanistan, Iran, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, the UAE and Yemen. In many countries where sex outside of marriage is illegal, the minimum age of marriage is lower for women than for men. It is common for courts to grant permission for girls to marry below the legal age. In Iran in

What is the Bahrain Age of Consent?

The Age of Consent in Bahrain is 21 years old. The age of consent is the minimum age at which an individual is considered legally old enough to consent to participation in sexual activity. Individuals aged 20 or younger in Bahrain are not legally able to consent to sexual activity, and such activity may result in prosecution for statutory rape or the equivalent local law.

Bahrain statutory rape law is violated when an individual has consensual sexual contact with a person under age 21.

Bahrain does not have a close-in-age exemption. Close in age exemptions, commonly known as "Romeo and Juliet laws" in the United States, are put in place to prevent the prosecution of individuals who engage in consensual sexual activity when both participants are significantly close in age to each other, and one or both partners are below the age of consent.

Because there is no close-in-age exemption in Bahrain, it is possible for two individuals both under the age of 21 who willingly engage in intercourse to both be prosecuted for statutory rape, although this is rare. Similarly, no protections are reserved for sexual relations in which one participant is a 20 year old and the second is a 21 or 22 year old.

The age of consent varies by jurisdiction across Europe. The ages of consent – hereby meaning the age from which one is deemed able to consent to having sex with anyone else of consenting age or above – are between 14 and 18. The vast majority of countries set their ages in the range of 14 to 16; only four countries, Cyprus (17), Ireland (17), Turkey (18), and the Vatican City (18), set an age of consent higher than 16.

The highlighted age is that from which a young person can lawfully engage in a non-commercial sexual act with an older person, regardless of their age difference. If a participant in a sexual act is under 18 but above the age of consent then sexual acts with another person who is at or over the age of consent may still be illegal if the older participant is in a position of authority over the younger person. For example, a teacher and their student or someone in the police. Commercial sex/prostitution requires all those involved to be 18 or older. Sexual acts may not be legal if those engaging are blood relatives, regardless of age, though the legality of incest varies between European countries.

Some countries have close-in-age exceptions, allowing partners close in age of whom one or both may be below the standard unrestricted age of consent to be able to both legally consent to engage in sexual acts with each other. The lowest minimum age of consent for a close-in-age exception to apply in Europe is 12 (in Hungary), providing their older sexual partner is under 18.[7]

Investigation into child exploitation on Meta platforms leads to arrests of three men

By Clare Duffy, CNN

An investigation into safety risks for children on Meta's platforms has led to the arrests of three men accused of attempting to sexually abuse children. Justin Sullivan/Getty Images

New York (CNN) — An investigation by the New Mexico Attorney General into the potential dangers of Meta's platforms has resulted in the arrests of three men charged with attempted sexual abuse of children.

The arrests came after a months-long investigation by the attorney general's office into the risks of sexual exploitation of children on Facebook and Instagram. That investigation also formed the basis of a lawsuit against Meta, filed in December, accusing the tech giant of creating a "breeding ground" for child predators.

More accusations against former Lindbergh coach after cold case gets national broadcast

The coach was secretly recorded confessing to what the family of one woman believes were sex crimes against her when she was a student

ST. LOUIS — They thought his own words would be enough to convict him.

"This kind of stuff, if we were the same age, would have been no problem," Jim Wilder is heard saying on an audio recording.

In 2013, after more than a decade of silence, Emilie Morris worked up the courage to go to the police.

She told them Wilder, her former Lindbergh cross country coach, committed sex crimes against her when she was still a student.

Police asked Morris to wear a wire and Wilder was arrested and charged with multiple sex crimes.

But just before his case was set to go to trial, Morris was found dead in her apartment and her case was dropped. Her cause of death - inconclusive.

When 5 On Your Side first reported her story in 2018, Emilie's family was still hoping her case could be reopened.

Lindbergh coach's sex crime confession caught on recording

As the pair spent more time together after practice, on out-of-town team trips, the rumors spread.

UPDATE: The Missouri Department of Secondary and Elementary Education is responding to a 5 On Your Side Cover Story about a former Lindbergh cross country coach caught on a secret recording confessing to sex crimes against a student.

That confession came nearly twenty years after former coach James Wilder had sexual contact with Emilie Morris who was 16 at the time.

Because of the recording, Wilder was arrested and charged but when Emilie passed away before he went to trial his case was dropped.

Wilder resigned from Lindbergh when the district said police turned over "new evidence" of the incident. But he was able to keep his state teaching license.

A Lindbergh spokesperson said the license is the responsibility of the state, and a state official said because Wilder's license was not revoked because he was never convicted.

However, 5 On Your Side has found a state statute that says a teacher can be disciplined or a certificate "not renewed" if there is "evidence of incompetence, immorality, or neglect of duty by the certificate holder"

ST. LOUIS — They thought his own words would be enough to convict him.

"This kind of stuff, if we were the same age, would have been no problem," Jim Wilder is heard saying on an audio recording.

In 2013, after more than a decade of silence, Emilie Morris worked up the courage to go to the police.

She told them Wilder, her former Lindbergh cross country coach, committed sex crimes against her when she was still a student.

Police asked Morris to wear a wire and Wilder was arrested and charged with multiple sex crimes.

But just before his case was set to go to trial, Morris was found dead in her apartment and her case was dropped. Her cause of death - inconclusive.

When 5 On Your Side first reported her story in 2018, Emilie's family was still hoping her case could be reopened.

COVER STORY

Lindbergh coach's sex crime confession caught on recording

As the pair spent more time together after practice, on out-of-town team trips, the rumors spread.

UPDATE: The Missouri Department of Secondary and Elementary Education is responding to a 5 On Your Side Cover Story about a former Lindbergh cross country coach caught on a secret recording confessing to sex crimes against a student.

That confession came nearly twenty years after former coach James Wilder had sexual contact with Emilie Morris who was 16 at the time.

Because of the recording, Wilder was arrested and charged but when Emilie passed away before he went to trial his case was dropped.

Wilder resigned from Lindbergh when the district said police turned over "new evidence" of the incident. But he was able to keep his state teaching license.

A Lindbergh spokesperson said the license is the responsibility of the state, and a state official said because Wilder's license was not revoked because he was never convicted.

However, 5 On Your Side has found a state statute that says a teacher can be disciplined or a certificate "not renewed" if there is "evidence of incompetence, immorality, or neglect of duty by the certificate holder."

Yousef al-Khattab helped change the way young Muslims were radicalized by spewing extreme Islamist propaganda on a YouTube channel.

Yousef al-Khattab helped found Revolution Muslim, a website that published extreme Islamist propaganda. Al-Khattab, who was born Joseph Cohen and was raised in a Jewish family in New Jersey, faces sentencing Friday after pleading guilty to terrorism charges.

Now al-Khattab, who was born Joseph Leonard Cohen and was brought up in New Jersey and in Brooklyn in a Jewish home, tells NPR he made a big mistake and describes himself as a "failure." He's scheduled to appear in a federal court in Alexandria, Va., on Friday to be sentenced on terrorism charges.

The case is significant because al-Khattab, now in his mid-40s, is one of the founders of a radical Islamist group called Revolution Muslim, which became a gateway for young jihadists in the U.S. looking to join violent Islamist groups overseas.

Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi Was A Mossad Agent? Israel-ISIS 'Links' Resurface After Moscow Terrorist Attack | Fact Check

The deadly terrorist strike at Moscow's Crocus City Hall in which 143 were killed sparked a massive outrage online. As people were mourning and praying for the victims of the attack claimed by the Islamic State (also known as ISIS), several social media posts claimed that Israel's purported involvement in the creation and further funding of the captured militants. The most visible and amplified claim was that the ISIS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi was a 'Jewish Mossad agent' named 'Elliot Shimon' or 'Simon Elliot', among others.

Edward Snowden never claimed that the first caliph of the Islamic State was born to Israeli parents and was originally named Elliot Shimon.

Mohammed Yusuf (29 January 1970 – 30 July 2009), also known as Ustaz Mohammed Yusuf, was a Nigerian terrorist who founded the Islamist militant group Boko Haram in 2002. He was its leader until he was killed during the 2009 Boko Haram uprising.[1]

Born in Girgi village, in Jakusko, present-day Yobe State, Nigeria, Yusuf received a University education.[2] Later he studied more of Islam and became a Salafi.[3]

Education and beliefs

According to scholar Paul Lubeck of the University of California at Santa Cruz, as a young man Yusuf was instructed in Shiasm and associated with Salafism and the teachings of Ibn Taymiyyah.[4] He had the equivalent of a graduate education, according to Nigerian academic Hussain Zakaria. Yusuf was never as proficient in English as was reported. He believed in the strict application of Islamic law, which represented his ideal of justice according to the teachings of the Islamic prophet, Muhammad. Boko Haram hitmen would murder members of other Muslim sects like the Salafist Izala and the Sufi Tidjaniyya and Qadiriya fraternities.[5] In a 2009 BBC interview, Yusuf stated his belief that the concept of a spherical Earth is contrary to Islamic teaching and should be rejected. He also rejected Darwinian evolution, and the concept of the condensation cycle that produces rain.[6] In the interview he said:

> There are prominent Islamic preachers who have seen and understood that the present Western-style education is mixed with issues that run contrary to our beliefs in Islam, he said.
> Like rain. We believe it is a creation of God rather than an evaporation caused by the sun that condenses and becomes rain.

Son of Hamas founder blasts student supporters in US: 'Those pro-Palestine need to go to a mental asylum'

The son of one of the founders of Hamas has blasted the terror group's student supporters in the United States, accusing them of participating in Hamas' brutal crimes and declaring they "need to go to a mental asylum."

Mosab Hassan Yousef, the son of Hamas founder Sheikh Hassan Yousef, made the remarks as he appeared on "Dr. Phil Primetime" last week to debate two anti-Israel student activists from the University of Michigan.

"It's very disappointing to see Americans supporting Hamas and thinking that Hamas is a cool thing, while Hamas does not respect any of those followers," Yousef said on the April 2 episode.

Israel is trying to legalize pedophilia - Avi Maoz

Israeli far-right lawmaker Avi Maoz accused the Justice Ministry of attempting to normalize pedophilia within the country by altering Israel's age of consent laws.

Currently, the age of consent in Israel is 16 for all genders. However, that age of consent can go as low as 14, provided the other sexual partner was no more than three years older and both parties consented.

But according to Maoz, the Justice Ministry is trying to change this to an age gap of five years.

Description:
The HX-20 was the world's first production laptop computer. Since it was manufactured by Epson, it is not surprising that this machine included a built-in printer, even though that was unusual for a computer of this era, particularly one so small. The machine received much favorable publicity, but did not establish a place for Epson in the global computer market. Over time, Epson concluded that it had little unique ability to bring to this market, and scaled back to producing computers only for specialty markets.

Al-Kimiya: Notes on Alchemy

Historians have uncovered evidence of influence of Arabic alchemy—a largely piece of the alchemical puzzle.

Jabir ibn Hayyan (Geber)

c. 721-c. 815

Arab Alchemist and Physician

Jābir ibn Hayyan, often known as Geber, is sometimes confused with a fourteenth-century Spanish mystic who also called himself Geber. In fact the latter deliberately took on the name of his distinguished predecessor, and thus is typically known as "the false Geber." As for the true Jabir, he is widely credited as the Father of Chemistry, the first alchemist to take his studies beyond superstition and into the realm of pure science. Among his many practical discoveries were arsenic, sulphur, and mercury.

Born Abu Musa Jabir Ibn Hayyan, Jabir practiced alchemy and medicine professionally

How Jabir Ibn Hayyan Became the Father of Modern Chemistry

Most students of Chemistry may be unfamiliar with the name Jabir ibn Hayyan not to lack of knowing him as the Father of modern chemistry. However, ibn Hayyan was not just a chemist, he was also an alchemist, a polymath, an engineer and physicist, an astronomer and astrologer, a geographer, a philosopher, a physician, and a pharmacist.

Jabir ibn Hayyan's greatest legacy was the use of experimentation in chemistry. The scientist is credited with using more than 20 types of now commonly common chemical laboratory equipment, including the alembic (an apparatus, mostly made of glass, used for distilling in alchemy) and retort stand, as well as explaining other chemical processes, including crystallisation and distillation.

Ahmed Hassan Zewail (1946–2016)

Jabir Ibn Hayyan was an 8th century famous Arab scientist, philosopher, and pharmacist. Due to his immense contributions he had in the fields of alchemy and chemistry, he came to be known as the "Father of modern chemistry". He is also credited with being the author of a variety of books on subjects such as Shi'ite religious philosophy, alchemy, chemistry and astronomy. Generally called the Jabirian corpus, the works of Jabir had a tremendous influence on scholarship in not just the Islamic world but also all across Europe.

Muhammad Yunus: History, Accomplishments, Criticism

By DANIEL LIBERTO Updated June 27, 2022
Reviewed by ROBERT C. KELLY

Who Is Muhammad Yunus?

Muhammad Yunus is a professor of economics who was awarded the 2006 Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts in developing social and economic improvements through microcredit and microloan operations. Most notably, Yunus founded the Grameen Bank, which is known for loaning billions of dollars to impoverished people all over the world.[1]

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Muhammad Yunus is an economist, microfinancing pioneer, and founder of the grassroots Grameen Bank, known for loaning billions to impoverished people all over the world.
- While teaching economics in his native Bangladesh, Yunus became aware of the extreme poverty in the country and the refusal of banks to offer credit to poor people.

Muhammad Yunus won a Nobel Peace Prize for spreading the concept of microcredit—tiny loans to help poor people start businesses—via his Bangladesh-based Grameen Bank. He resigned as CEO of that organization last year, at age 70, due to pressure from the Bangladeshi government, but he remains active in Grameen ventures elsewhere in the world. Interviewed by Alison Beard

HBR: There was a lot of controversy over your retirement. It was reported that the Bangladeshi government, which owns 3% of Grameen Bank, forced your hand.

Yunus: Look, when I was 60, I submitted my resignation. “Why do you want to retire?” the board asked. “Is the work becoming too heavy on you? Do you want to do something else? If you’re enjoying your work and we enjoy you, why don’t you continue?” So I said OK. When I turned 70, I did the same thing. I said, “I think I should go.” They said, “You cannot.” Staff members all over the country were writing me letters saying, “Don’t leave. This will bring a panic.” So again I couldn’t leave. But I wrote a letter by my own hand and took it to the finance minister and said, “I’m trying to retire as CEO, so why doesn’t the government appoint

Forget about wireless personal area networks, like Bluetooth, and wireless WANs with their respective network devices. Even without these wireless network topologies, there's enough to keep straight with the topic of WLAN. In particular, let's explore the differences between WLAN vs. Wi-Fi.

What is a WLAN and how does it work?

A WLAN is a local area network that uses radio technology instead of wiring to interconnect networked nodes.

To tackle the generic WLAN construct, we first need to review what local area network means. A LAN is generally a network contained within a building or campus, representing a geographical or functional construct usually connected via cabling of various sorts. Add a W to LAN, and it becomes a wireless LAN. Wireless technology either extends the LAN, replaces parts of it or both.

The terms WLAN and Wi-Fi are often linked and used interchangeably, but problems arise with that habit. A WLAN can be built on various wireless technologies, including Wi-Fi, cellular and Bluetooth, for example.

History [edit]

In 1992, Halim Zaghloul and Michel Fattouche co-founded WiLAN[2] after they developed together the Wideband Orthogonal Frequency Division Multiplexing patent (WO),[3][citation needed] and Multi-code Direct-sequence Spread Spectrum (MC-DSSS).[4][citation needed] Through WiLAN's efforts, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has allowed OFDM technology over the 2.4 GHz unlicensed ISM band for the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE) 802.11 standards. MC-DSSS (Multicode Direct-sequence Spread Spectrum) is central to high speed CDMA applications, the main technology currently used by many cellphone networks.

In March 1995, WiLAN had its initial public offering.[5]

In November 1995, WiLAN and Philips invited companies to attend a meeting to form an alliance to promote the OFDM technology and its applications.[6] WiLAN was a founding member of the WiMAX Forum together with Ericsson, Cisco/Span, Intel, and Nokia.

From its founding in 1992 to 2000, WiLAN had success as interest and investment in the tech industry grew. However, in 2000, when the world's first tech bubble collapsed,

History [edit]

WiLan was founded in 1992 by Halim Zaghloul and Michel Fattouche to commercialize their Wideband Orthogonal Frequency Division Multiplexing (WOFDM) technology.[1] It was originally based in Calgary, Alberta, and the name was an acronym for "Wireless Local Area Network".[1] In March 1999, WILAN had its initial public offering on the Alberta Stock Exchange at $2.50 per share (it later listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange).[2] WILAN enjoyed significant success in the context of the tech bubble at the time, but its fortunes changed when the bubble collapsed. From October 1999 to March 2000, WiLan's share price increased from $10 to $04, but it fell back down to $12 by November 2000.[3] By February 2006, the price had fallen to 66 cents.[4]

In 2005, WILAN reached a significant patent licensing deal with Cisco Systems.[1] In 2006 WILAN divested its various technology product lines to refocus its business on licensing intellectual property and patent rights. As part of this change of strategy, it replaced its CFO, Bill Dunbar, with Jim Skippen, who served as President and CEO of WILAN until July 2018.[5] Founder Halim Zaghloul resigned from the board.[6] At the same time, the company moved its headquarters from Calgary to Ottawa.[7]

Dalal Warra. By October 2021, things between Ali and Ana had escalated as the former suspected his wife of cheating on him.

Meanwhile, Ana wanted out of her marriage to Ali. On October 21, 2021, she was at The Spire, where she and her daughter were living without her estranged husband. The same day, she had texted Ali, "I want you out of my life, once and for all." Afterward, her friend, Ray, visited the apartment. Eventually, Ali stormed into the apartment— seemingly out of the blue— with a gun and shot Ana and Ray. In total, Ali fired six shots that day and killed two people. Furthermore, he called his mother after the crime to tell her about it and sent her a picture of the crime scene as evidence. He made another phone call shortly after to the 911 emergency hotline and informed authorities that he had found Ana and Ray's dead bodies. Before the cops came, the perpetrator fled the crime scene.

Ali Abulaban Claimed The Killings Were Unintentional

After Ana Abulaban and Rayburn Cardenas Barron's deaths, the cops caught up to their shooter. Ali Abulaban, shortly afterward and arrested him.

Ana Marie Abulaban, [illegible]lia Miller, was originally from the Pl[illegible]a, Japan, where she met Ali Abulaban and [illegible]010s. Shortly after her boyfriend's discha[illegible]bsequent move back to America, Ana learned she was pregnant. As such, she moved to the States to Virginia, marrying Ali in 2017. Thus, the couple started their new life with their daughter, Amira.

After a few years of residence in Virginia with Ali's parents, the husband's career as an online content creator started taking off, prompting a move to San Diego at Ana's request. In the new city, the couple moved into the Spire San Diego, and Ana found herself surrounded by a number of her friends. Rayburn Cardenas Barron, known as Ray, was among these friends. He was born in Mexico in 1992 and moved to San Diego sometime later in his life. While the two sported a reliable friendship, their friends divulged in the 'TikTok Star Murders' documentary that Ray's crush on Ana was a known fact among their circles.

Early life [edit]

Davis grew up in Essex[1] in 1981, his family moved to Toronto, Ontario.

Davis in a pornographic shoot in 2011

After graduating from high school, he went to Los Angeles to shoot a Playgirl pictorial at 18 years of age. Soon thereafter, he moved to the US permanently. From 1984 to 1988, he was employed as a stripper for the "Chippendales" dancers. In January 1993, Davis began his career in adult films.[2]

In 2003, Davis was inducted into the AVN Hall of Fame.[3] In February 2008, he was inducted into the XRCO Hall of Fame.[4]

In his last years (2009-2012), he worked primarily for kink.com, serving villainous roles in BDSM scenes. In 2012, Mark Davis announced his retirement from pornography, ending a nearly 20-year career.[2] In 2019, Davis returned to pornography to shoot exclusively for kink.com.[5]

Davis performed in about 2,400 videos in his pornographic career.

Personal life [edit]

Davis was married to Kobe Tai and, later, Kitten. He served as best man for Jenna Jameson and Brad Armstrong's wedding in 1998. He was also a friend of Jon Dough, whose suicide affected him "big time".

The Outlaws Motorcycle Club, incorporated as the American Outlaws Association or its acronym, A.O.A., is an international outlaw motorcycle club. Founded in McCook, Illinois in 1935, the Outlaws MC is the oldest outlaw biker club in the world.[1] With 441 chapters located in 43 countries, and a membership of over 3,000, the club is also the third-largest in the world, behind the Hells Angels and the Bandidos.[2][3][4]

The club is designated an organized crime syndicate by numerous law enforcement and international intelligence agencies, including the United States Department of Justice, the Criminal Intelligence Service Canada, and Europol.[5][6][7]

A Star Historian Opens a New Chapter: Jewish Slaveowners

By Eric Herschthal
August 11, 2006

More than a decade ago, pioneering historian Natalie Zemon Davis was trudging through German archives, performing research for her book "Women on the Margins: Three Seventeenth-Century Lives." Published in 1995 and universally praised, the book was seen as vintage Davis: scholarly, but not impenetrable; groundbreaking, but not immodestate.

Although she was researching the lives of three 17th-century Europeans, Davis found a curious connection between one of her characters, Maria Sibylla Merian, and a Jewish physician in South America. Fixed on the project at hand, Davis "tucked the [Jewish doctor]" in the back of her mind, filed away Merian's

CASIO

50 Years of Innovation

The year 2024 marks exactly 50 years since the birth of CASIO wristwatches. Released in 1974 as CASIO's first wristwatch, the CASIOTRON was the world's first digital watch with an automatic calendar function and a precursor to later CASIO brands such as G-SHOCK, OCEANUS, and PROTREK. It was a model positioned as a turning point in CASIO COMPUTER's history.

The 1992 Toshiba T4400SX was the first notebook to offer a choice of screens: a bright page-white LCD screen, or the latest super-fast plasma screen technology. The benefits of the plasma screen are brighter images and a much faster response. The speed of plasma allows you to work in advanced applications and in particular with graphics just as you would on a desktop. With the T4400SX even moving images won't blur on your screen. And the screen is unexpectedly large for a notebook, too. Try a diagonal of 9.5 inches (24 cm) for size.

Processor: Intel 486SX™ upgradable to 486DX™, 25 /12.5 MHz clock speed, 8 KB cache on chip, Reset switch, Numeric data processor included in 486DX Memory: Standard 2 MB RAM, Expandable to 10 MB, LIM EMS 4.0XMS support
Hard Disk: 80 MB, less than 19 ms average access time
Diskette Drive: 3.5" 1.44 MB/720 KB diskette drive, Media-type checking Display: Sidelit Supertwist LCD or high contrast, low power gas plasma, 9.5" (24 cm) diagonal, 640 x 480 dot resolution

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For the generic term, see Personal watercraft. For other uses, see Jet Ski (disambiguation).

Jet Ski is the brand name of a personal watercraft (PWC)[1] manufactured by Kawasaki,[2] a Japanese company.[3] The term is often used generically to refer to any type of personal watercraft used mainly for recreation, and it is also used as a verb to describe the use of any type of PWC.

A 1985 Kawasaki 550 Jet Ski on a beach.

The Original 1973 Kawasaki JS400 Jet Ski.

Kawasaki Jet Ski [edit]

"Jet Ski" is a proper noun and registered trademark of Kawasaki. Released in 1972, the stand-up Kawasaki Jet Ski was the first commercially successful personal watercraft in America (after reaching a license agreement with the inventor of the Sea-Doo, Clayton Jacobson II when his license agreement with Bombardier expired).[2] The Kawasaki Jet Ski was the only commercially successful PWC for almost 16 years, from the introduction of the WSAA in October 1972 through the reintroduction of the sit-down, runabout-style Bombardier Sea-Doo in 1988.[4] [5]

The first stand-up prototype

With the introduction of the Jet Ski, Kawasaki helped create the United States Jet Ski Boating Association (USJSBA), in cooperation with aftermarket companies and enthusiasts. In 1982 the name was changed to the International Jet Sports Boating Association (IJSBA). At the start, only JS440 stand-ups were raced. After Kawasaki introduced the runabout-style X2 in 1986, it gained its own class, later to be renamed the "Sport Class".[4]

Elk County podiatrist charged for allegedly overprescribing opioids

By Brianne Fleming bfleming@thecourierexpress.com Jul 22, 2021 Updated May 18, 2023

ST. MARYS — An Elk County podiatrist has been charged with several felonies after he was accused of overprescribing opioid-based medications to patients for over a year.

David Gregory Sanderson, 59, of St. Marys, is charged with 15 felony counts of "Admin Etc Of Cont Subst By Pract" — the administration, dispensing, delivery, gift or prescription of any controlled substance by any practitioner or professional assistant under the practitioner's direction and supervision, unless done in good faith, within the scope of the patient relationship or in accordance with treatment principals — according to a criminal complaint filed by the Pennsylvania Office of Attorney General at Magisterial District Judge Mark Jacobs's office July 21.

June 02, 2016 at 8:45 pm EDT

NORTH BROOKFIELD, Mass. — A convicted child rapist from Barre was found working with children at a martial arts studio in North Brookfield and police were never notified.

"We're talking children. We're talking classes that are going on and this is something that is very alarming to me," said Chief Mark Smith with North Brookfield police.

A resident, who's a retired police officer, recognized 60-year-old David Sanderson from the sex offender registry and alerted police.

"The Sewanee Project on Slavery, Race, and Reconciliation recently brought Dr. Joshua Rothman, a professor of history at the University of Alabama and one of the foremost scholars on the domestic slave trade in the United States, to lecture on the life and historical significance of John Armfield. The lecture, titled, "He has been for many years engaged in the traffic of human flesh': John Armfield and American's Domestic Slave Trade" explored Armfield's career and his connections with the University of the South.

Director of the Project and professor of history Wesley Hogkins (C'90) opened the event by saying that Rothman "is making history here" at Sewanee, taking special note of the fact that Rothman's lecture was the first public event to acknowledge and consider Armfield's legacy with the University.

"I've been teaching at Sewanee for many years, and for many of those many years, I've been telling my students about John Armfield," Hogkins said. "So to me this history has been one that any student of Sewanee should or even must know. I feel very strongly about that."

within just a few weeks, then two more necessary inferences could be added to the six facts above...

- 7. Since Isaac was 37 at his mother's death, he was 37 when Rebekah was born.
- 8. Since Isaac was 40 when he married Rebekah, Rebekah would be 3 when the marriage took place (because 40-37=3)

But these last two inferences are spurious, because they are based not on what the scripture says in Genesis 22 and 23, but rather what is said in non-biblical tradition.

within just a few weeks, then two more necessary inferences could be added to the six facts above...

- 7. Since Isaac was 37 at his mother's death, he was 37 when Rebekah was born.
- 8. Since Isaac was 40 when he married Rebekah, Rebekah would be 3 when the marriage took place (because 40-37=3)

But these last two inferences are spurious, because they are based not on what the scripture says in Genesis 22 and 23, but rather what is said in non-biblical tradition.

The Master said in a baraita: If his children and the members of his household were minors, even though they are unclothed, it is permitted to recite Shema even without a garment separating between them. The Gemara asks: Until what age is one still considered a minor? Rav Ḥisda said: A girl until she is three years and one day old, and a boy until he is nine years and one day old, for these are the ages from which a sexual act in which they participate is considered a sexual act.

and is in consequence regarded as a thirteenfold commandment, which must under all circumstances be observed. Hence the necessity for the twofold instruction.

MISHNA: One may perform everything necessary for circumcision on the Sabbath, as circumcising, tearing open, sucking out the blood, applying a plaster or caraway seed. If the latter had not been ground before the Sabbath, one may masticate it with the teeth and then apply it. If one had not mixed wine with oil before the Sabbath, he may apply each separately. One must not prepare an actual bandage (on the Sabbath), but may apply an old piece of linen; and if such had not been prepared before the Sabbath, the circumciser may bring it with him tied around his finger and even from another court (yard).

to finish the operation before night, but persisted in performing it. If in consequence he left excrescences which make the circumcision invalid, he simply made a wound without performing a commandment, and thus he becomes amenable to Karath."

"Sucking out the blood." R. Papa said: "The circumciser who does not suck out the wound places the child in danger, and should be discharged from office." Is this not self-evident?

* The Hebrew word "Veanvehu" is interpreted by the Talmud to signify "and I will beautify him," while in the translation of the Bible, by I. Leeser, it is translated, "I will sing his praise," and the reference made to the verse by the Talmud accepts the term in its Talmudical sense.

† This will be explained in the Tract Menachoth.

MISHNA: A girl who is three years and one day old, whose father arranged her betrothal, is betrothed through intercourse, as the halakhic status of intercourse with her is that of intercourse in all halakhic senses. And in a case where the childless husband of a girl three years and one day old dies, if his brother the yavam* engages in intercourse with her, he acquires her as his wife; and if she is married, a man other than her husband is liable for engaging in intercourse with her due to violation of the prohibition against intercourse with a married woman.

The Contemporary Torah, JPS, 2006

19 וְאֵלֶּה תּוֹלְדֹת יִצְחָק בֶּן־אַבְרָהָם אַבְרָהָם הוֹלִיד אֶת־יִצְחָק׃

This is the story of Isaac, son of Abraham. Abraham begot Isaac.

20 וַיְהִי יִצְחָק בֶּן־אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה בְּקַחְתּוֹ אֶת־רִבְקָה בַּת־בְּתוּאֵל הָאֲרַמִּי מִפַּדַּן אֲרָם אֲחוֹת לָבָן הָאֲרַמִּי לוֹ לְאִשָּׁה׃

Isaac was forty years old when he took to wife Rebekah, daughter of Bethuel the Aramean of Paddan-aram, sister of Laban the Aramean.

21 וַיֶּעְתַּר יִצְחָק לַיהוָה לְנֹכַח אִשְׁתּוֹ כִּי עֲקָרָה הִוא וַיֵּעָתֶר לוֹ יְהוָה וַתַּהַר רִבְקָה אִשְׁתּוֹ׃

Commentary

בן ארבעים שנה FORTY YEARS OLD — For when Abraham came from Mount Moriah he received the news that Rebecca was born (22:20). Isaac was then thirty-seven years old, because at that time Sarah died and from the birth of Isaac until the Binding — when Sarah died — there were 37 years since she was 90 years old when Isaac was born and 127 when she died, as it is said, (23:1) "And the life of Sarah was [one hundred and twenty seven years]" — thus Isaac was then 37 years old. At that period Rebecca was born and he waited until she was fit for marriage — 3 years — and then married her (Seder Olam).

What is the Bahrain Age of Consent?

The Age of Consent in Bahrain is 21 years old. The age of consent is the minimum age at which an individual is considered legally old enough to consent to participation in sexual activity. Individuals aged 20 or younger in Bahrain are not legally able to consent to sexual activity, and such activity may result in prosecution for statutory rape or the equivalent local law.

Bahrain statutory rape law is violated when an individual has consensual sexual contact with a person under age 21.

Bahrain does not have a close-in-age exemption. Close-in-age exemptions, commonly known as "Romeo and Juliet laws" in the United States, are put in place to prevent the prosecution of individuals who engage in consensual sexual activity when both participants are significantly close in age to each other, and one or both partners are below the age of consent.

Because there is no close-in-age exemption in Bahrain, it is possible for two individuals both under the age of 21 who willingly engage in intercourse to both be prosecuted for statutory rape, although this is rare. Similarly, no protections are reserved for sexual relations in which one participant is a 20 year old and the second is a 21 or 22 year old.

The age of consent varies by jurisdiction across Europe. The ages of consent – hereby meaning the age from which one is deemed able to consent to having sex with anyone else of consenting age or above – are between 14 and 18. The vast majority of countries set their ages in the range of 14 to 16; only four countries, Cyprus (17), Ireland (17), Turkey (18), and the Vatican City (18), set an age of consent higher than 16.

The highlighted age is that from which a young person can lawfully engage in a non-commercial sexual act with an older person, regardless of their age difference. If a participant in a sexual act is under 18 but above the age of consent then sexual acts with another person who is at or over the age of consent may still be illegal if the older participant is in a position of authority over the younger person. For example, a teacher and their student or someone in the police. Commercial sex/prostitution requires all those involved to be 18 or older. Sexual acts may not be legal if those engaging are blood relatives, regardless of age, though the legality of incest varies between European countries.

Some countries have close-in-age exceptions, allowing partners close in age of whom one or both may be below the standard unrestricted age of consent to be able to both legally consent to engage in sexual acts with each other. The lowest minimum age of consent for a close-in-age exception to apply in Europe is 12 (in Hungary), providing their older sexual partner is under 18.[1]

ʿĀʾishah (born 614, Mecca, Arabia [now in Saudi Arabia]—died July 678, Medina) was the third wife of the Prophet Muhammad (the founder of Islam), who played a role of some political importance after the Prophet's death.

All Muhammad's marriages had political motivations, and in this case the intention seems to have been to cement ties with ʿĀʾishah's father, Abū Bakr, who was one of Muhammad's most important supporters. ʿĀʾishah's physical charms, intelligence, and wit, together with the genuine warmth of their relationship, secured her a place in his affections that was not lessened by his subsequent marriages. It is said that in 627 she accompanied the Prophet on an expedition but became separated from the group. When she was later escorted back to Medina by a man who had found her in the desert, Muhammad's enemies claimed that she had been unfaithful. A subsequent Qurʾānic revelation asserted her innocence; the Qurʾān furthermore criticized and stipulated punishment for those who slander virtuous women.

ʿĀʾishah had no important influence on her husband's political or religious policies while he lived, but he is said to have recognized her knowledge of Islam by counseling his Companions to "take half your knowledge from Humayra," Humayra ("Little Red One") being his term of endearment for her.

When Muhammad died in 632, ʿĀʾishah was left a childless widow of about 18, although some sources suggest she was older. She remained politically inactive until the time of ʿUthmān (644–656; the third caliph, or leader of the Islamic community), during whose reign she played an important role in fomenting opposition that led to his murder in 656. She led an army against his successor, ʿAlī, when he refused to bring ʿUthmān's murderers to justice, but she was defeated in the Battle of the Camel. The engagement derived its name from the fierce fighting that centred around the camel upon which ʿĀʾishah was mounted. Afterward she was allowed to return to Medina. More accusations against former Lindbergh coach after cold case gets national broadcast

The coach was secretly recorded confessing to what the family of one woman believes were sex crimes against her when she was a student

ST. LOUIS — They thought his own words would be enough to convict him.

"This kind of stuff, if we were the same age, would have been no problem," Jim Wilder is heard saying on an audio recording.

In 2013, after more than a decade of silence, Emilie Morris worked up the courage to go to the police.

She told them Wilder, her former Lindbergh cross country coach, committed sex crimes against her when she was still a student.

Police asked Morris to wear a wire and Wilder was arrested and charged with multiple sex crimes.

But just before his case was set to go to trial, Morris was found dead in her apartment and her case was dropped. Her cause of death - inconclusive.

When 5 On Your Side first reported her story in 2018, Emilie's family was still hoping her case could be reopened.

UPDATE: The Missouri Department of Secondary and Elementary Education is responding to a 5 On Your Side Cover Story about a former Lindbergh cross country coach caught on a secret recording confessing to sex crimes against a student.

That confession came nearly twenty years after former coach James Wilder had sexual contact with Emilie Morris who was 16 at the time.

Because of the recording, Wilder was arrested and charged but when Emilie passed away before he went to trial his case was dropped.

Wilder resigned from Lindbergh when the district said police turned over "new evidence" of the incident. But he was able to keep his state teaching license.

A Lindbergh spokesperson said the license is the responsibility of the state, and a state official said because Wilder's license was not revoked because he was never convicted.

However, 5 On Your Side has found a state statute that says a teacher can be disciplined or a certificate "not renewed" if there is "evidence of incompetence, immorality, or neglect of duty by the certificate holder."

The World's First Web Site

On August 6, 1991, without fanfare, British computer scientist Tim Berners-Lee published the first-ever website while working at CERN, the huge particle physics lab in Switzerland.

The first website at CERN – and in the world – was dedicated to the World Wide Web project itself and was hosted on Berners-Lee's NeXT computer. In 2013, CERN launched a project to restore this first ever website: info.cern.ch.

The Jewish Kid From New Jersey Who Became A Radical Islamist

APRIL 25, 2014 · 3:09 AM ET

HEARD ON MORNING EDITION

By Dina Temple-Raston

4-Minute Listen

Yousef al-Khattab helped change the way young Muslims were radicalized by spewing extreme Islamist propaganda on a YouTube channel.

Now al-Khattab, who was born Joseph Leonard Cohen and was brought up in New Jersey and in Brooklyn in a Jewish home, tells NPR he made a big mistake and describes himself as a "failure." He's scheduled to appear in a federal court in Alexandria, Va., on Friday to be sentenced on terrorism charges.

The case is significant because al-Khattab, now in his mid-40s, is one of the founders of a radical Islamist group called Revolution Muslim, which became a gateway for young jihadists in the U.S. looking to join violent Islamist groups overseas.

Yousef al-Khattab helped found Revolution Muslim, a website that published extreme Islamist propaganda. Al-Khattab, who was born Joseph Cohen and was raised in a Jewish family in New Jersey, faces sentencing Friday after pleading guilty to terrorism charges.

Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi Was A Mossad Agent? Israel-ISIS 'Links' Resurface After Moscow Terrorist Attack | Fact Check

The deadly terrorist strike at Moscow's Crocus City Hall in which 143 were killed sparked a massive outrage online. As people were mourning and praying for the victims of the attack claimed by the Islamic State (also known as ISIS), several social media posts claimed that Israel's purported involvement in the creation and further funding of the captured militants. The most visible and amplified claim was that the ISIS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi was a 'Jewish Mossad agent' named 'Elliot Shimon' or 'Simon Elliot', among others.

Mohammed Yusuf (29 January 1970 – 30 July 2009), also known as Ustaz Mohammed Yusuf, was a Nigerian terrorist who founded the Islamist militant group Boko Haram in 2002. He was its leader until he was killed during the 2009 Boko Haram uprising.[1]

Born in Girgi village, in Jakusko, present-day Yobe State, Nigeria, Yusuf received a University education.[2] Later he studied more of Islam and became a Salafi.[3]

Education and beliefs

[edit]

According to scholar Paul Lubeck of the University of California at Santa Cruz, as a young man Yusuf was instructed in Shiasm and associated with Salafism and the teachings of Ibn Taymiyyah.[4] He had the equivalent of a graduate education, according to Nigerian academic Hussain Zakaria. Yusuf was never as proficient in English as was reported. He believed in the strict application of Islamic law, which represented his ideal of justice according to the teachings of the Islamic prophet, Muhammad. Boko Haram hitmen would murder members of other Muslim sects like the Salafist Izala and the Sufi Tidjaniyya and Qadiriya fraternities.[5] In a 2009 BBC interview, Yusuf stated his belief that the concept of a spherical Earth is contrary to Islamic teaching and should be rejected. He also rejected Darwinian evolution, and the concept of the condensation cycle that produces rain.[6] In the interview he said:

> There are prominent Islamic preachers who have seen and understood that the present Western-style education is mixed with issues that run contrary to our beliefs in Islam, he said.
> Like rain. We believe it is a creation of God rather than an evaporation caused by the sun that condenses and becomes rain.
> Like saying the world is a sphere. If it runs contrary to the teachings of Allah, we reject it. We also reject the theory of Darwinism.

Son of Hamas founder blasts student supporters in US: 'Those pro-Palestine need to go to a mental asylum'

The son of one of the founders of Hamas has blasted the terror group's student supporters in the United States, accusing them of participating in Hamas' brutal crimes and declaring they "need to go to a mental asylum."

Mosab Hassan Yousef, the son of Hamas founder Sheikh Hassan Yousef, made the remarks as he appeared on "Dr. Phil Primetime" last week to debate two anti-Israel student activists from the University of Michigan.

"It's very disappointing to see Americans supporting Hamas and thinking that Hamas is a cool thing, while Hamas does not respect any of those followers," Yousef said on the April 2 episode.

Ted Bundy was a serial killer, rapist, and necrophiliac who admitted to killing 30 women in the 1970s, though some experts believe his actual victim count might be over 100. He was arrested for good in February 1978 and received three separate death sentences for the murders of two Chi Omega sorority members at Florida State University and a 12-year-old girl. Bundy's charming appearance helped him become somewhat of a celebrity during his trial, and his case has since inspired many novels and movies about serial killers. The HX-20 was the world's first production laptop computer. Since it was manufactured by Epson, it is not surprising that this machine included a built-in printer, even though that was unusual for a computer of this era, particularly one so small. The machine received much favorable publicity, but did not establish a place for Epson in the global computer market. Over time, Epson concluded that it had little unique ability to bring to this market, and scaled back to producing computers only for specialty markets.

Description:
The HX-20 was the world's first production laptop computer. Since it was manufactured by Epson, it is not surprising that this machine included a built-in printer, even though that was unusual for a computer of this era, particularly one so small. The machine received much favorable publicity, but did not establish a place for Epson in the global computer market. Over time, Epson concluded that it had little unique ability to bring to this market, and scaled back to producing computers only for specialty markets.

Jabir ibn Hayyan (Geber)

c. 721-c. 815

Arab Alchemist and Physician

Jabir ibn Hayyan, often known as Geber, is sometimes confused with a fourteenth-century Spanish mystic who also called himself Geber. In fact the latter deliberately took on the name of his distinguished predecessor, and thus is typically known as "the false Geber." As for the true Jabir, he is widely credited as the Father of Chemistry, the first alchemist to take his studies beyond superstition and into the realm of pure science. Among his many practical discoveries were arsenic, sulphur, and mercury.

Born Abu Musa Jabir ibn Hayyan, Jabir practiced alchemy and medicine professionally

By Ayomide Akinbode · July 27, 2020 · 12 Min Read
Last Updated: September 23, 2023

Most students of Chemistry may be unfamiliar with the name Jabir ibn Hayyan not to talk of knowing him as the father of modern chemistry. However, ibn Hayyan was not just a chemist, he was also an alchemist; a polymath, an engineer and physicist, an astronomer and astrologer, a geographer, a philosopher, a physician, and a pharmacist.

Jabir ibn Hayyan's greatest legacy was the use of experimentation in chemistry. The scientist is credited with using more than 20 types of now currently common chemical laboratory equipment, including the alembic (an apparatus, mostly made of glass, used for distilling in alchemy) and retort stand, as well as explaining other chemical processes, including crystallisation and distillation.

Jabir ibn Hayyan – Biography, Achievements and Discoveries

Jabir ibn Hayyan was an 8th century famous Arab scientists, philosopher, and pharmacist. Due to the immense contribution he had in the fields of alchemy and chemistry, he came to be known as the "Father of modern chemistry". He is often credited with being the author of a variety of books on subjects such as Shi'ite religious philosophy, alchemy, chemistry and astronomy. Generally called the Jabirian corpus, the works of Jabir had a tremendous influence on scholarship in not just the Islamic world but also all across Europe.

Who Is Muhammad Yunus?

Muhammad Yunus is a professor of economics who was awarded the 2006 Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts in developing social and economic improvements through microcredit and microloan operations. Most notably, Yunus founded the Grameen Bank, which is known for loaning billions of dollars to impoverished people all over the world.[1]

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Muhammad Yunus is an economist, microfinancing pioneer, and founder of the grassroots Grameen Bank, known for loaning billions to impoverished people all over the world.
- While teaching economics in his native Bangladesh, Yunus became aware of the extreme poverty in the country and the refusal of banks to offer credit to poor people.

Muhammad Yunus won a Nobel Peace Prize for spreading the concept of microcredit—tiny loans to help poor people start businesses—via his Bangladesh-based Grameen Bank. He resigned as CEO of that organization last year, at age 70, due to pressure from the Bangladeshi government, but he remains active in Grameen ventures elsewhere in the world. Interviewed by Alison Beard

HBR: There was a lot of controversy over your retirement. It was reported that the Bangladeshi government, which owns 3% of Grameen Bank, forced your hand.

Yunus: Look, when I was 60, I submitted my resignation. "Why do you want to retire?" the board asked. "Is the work becoming too heavy on you? Do you want to do something else? If you're enjoying your work and we enjoy you, why don't you continue?" So I said OK. When I turned 70, I did the same thing. I said, "I think I should go." They said, "You cannot." Staff members all over the country were writing me letters saying, "Don't leave. This will bring a panic." So again I couldn't leave. But I wrote a letter by my own hand and took it to the finance minister and said, "I'm trying to retire as CEO, so why doesn't the government appoint

WiLan was founded in 1992 by Hatim Zaghloul and Michel Fattouche to commercialize their Wideband Orthogonal Frequency Division Multiplexing (WOFDM) technology.[2] It was originally based in Calgary, Alberta, and the name was an acronym for "Wireless Local Area Network".[3] In March 1998, WiLAN had its initial public offering on the Alberta Stock Exchange at $2.50 per share (it later listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange).[3] WiLAN enjoyed significant success in the context of the tech bubble at the time, but its fortunes changed when the bubble collapsed. From October 1999 to March 2000, WiLan's share price increased from $10 to $94, but it fell back down to $12 by November 2000.[2] By February 2006, the price had fallen to 66 cents.[4]

In 2005, WiLAN reached a significant patent licensing deal with Cisco Systems.[5] In 2006 WiLAN divested its various technology product lines to refocus its business on licensing intellectual property and patent rights. As part of this change of strategy, it replaced its CEO, Bill Dunbar, with Jim Skippen, who served as President and CEO of WiLAN until July 2018.[6] Founder Hatim Zaghloul resigned from the board.[4] At the same time, the company moved its headquarters from Calgary to Ottawa.[7]

Ana Abulaban and Ray Barron Fell Victim to The Former's Abusive Marriage

Ana Marie Abulaban, born in June 1993 to Ron and Amelia Miller, was originally from the Philippines and grew up in Okinawa, Japan, where she met Ali Abulaban and started dating him in the early 2010s. Shortly after her boyfriend's discharge from the U.S. Air Force and subsequent move back to America, Ana learned she was pregnant. As such, she moved to the States to Virginia, marrying Ali in 2017. Thus, the couple started their new life with their daughter, Amira.

After a few years of residence in Virginia with Ali's parents, the husband's career as an online content creator started taking off, prompting a move to San Diego at Ana's request. In the new city, the couple moved into the Spire San Diego, and Ana found herself surrounded by a number of her friends. Rayburn Cardenas Barron, known as Ray, was among these friends. He was Dalal Warra. By October 2021, things between Ali and Ana had escalated as the former suspected his wife of cheating on him.

Meanwhile, Ana wanted out of her marriage to Ali. On October 21, 2021, she was at The Spire, where she and her daughter were living without her estranged husband. The same day, she had texted Ali, "I want you out of my life, once and for all." Afterward, her friend, Ray, visited the apartment. Eventually, Ali stormed into the apartment — seemingly out of the blue — with a gun and shot Ana and Ray. In total, Ali fired six shots that day and killed two people. Furthermore, he called his mother after the crime to tell her about it and sent her a picture of the crime scene as evidence. He made another phone call shortly after to the 911 emergency hotline and informed authorities that he had found Ana and Ray's dead bodies. Before the cops came, the perpetrator fled the crime scene.

We, the family of Ana Marie Abulaban, are grateful for the outpouring of emotion and the generosity given as we navigate how to bring her mother from the Philippines so she may escort Ana Marie back to her childhood home. As we read from the pain of this senseless tragedy, we are thankful for the kindness from both those that knew her and from compassionate strangers.

The funds raised will not only assist with the financial burden of this brutal chapter in her life but will also assist her daughter in her long journey forward forward healing. Losing a loved one is never easy. Losing a daughter, a sister, a mother in such a violent manner is unfathomable. Please believe us when we say the gestures displayed on this platform go a long way in helping as we continue to deal with

Ana Abulaban a[illegible] to The Former's Abusive Marriag[illegible]

Ana Marie Abulaban, [illegible]lia Miller, was originally from the Pl[illegible]a, Japan, where she met Ali Abulaban and [illegible]010s. Shortly after her boyfriend's discha[illegible]bsequent move back to America, Ana learned she was pregnant. As such, she moved to the States to Virginia, marrying Ali in 2017. Thus, the couple started their new life with their daughter, Amira.

After a few years of residence in Virginia with Ali's parents, the husband's career as an online content creator started taking off, prompting a move to San Diego at Ana's request. In the new city, the couple moved into the Spire San Diego, and Ana found herself surrounded by a number of her friends. Rayburn Cardenas Barron, known as Ray, was among these friends. He was born in Mexico in 1992 and moved to San Diego sometime later in his life. While the two sported a reliable friendship, their friends divulged in the 'TikTok Star Murders' documentary that Ray's crush on Ana was a known fact among their circles.

Meanwhile, Ana wanted out of her marriage to Ali. On October 21, 2021, she was at The Spire, where she and her daughter were living without her estranged husband. The same day, she had texted Ali, "I want you out of my life, once and for all." Afterward, her friend, Ray, visited the apartment. Eventually, Ali stormed into the apartment— seemingly out of the blue— with a gun and shot Ana and Ray. In total, Ali fired six shots that day and killed two people. Furthermore, he called his mother after the crime to tell her about it and sent her a picture of the crime scene as evidence. He made another phone call shortly after to the 911 emergency hotline and informed authorities that he had found Ana and Ray's dead bodies. Before the cops came, the perpetrator fled the crime scene.

Spouse	Kobe Tai (m. 1997; div. 1999)

Early life [edit]

Davis grew up in Essex.[1] In 1981, his family moved to Toronto, Ontario.

Davis in a pornographic shoot in 2011

After graduating from high school, he went to Los Angeles to shoot a Playgirl pictorial at 18 years of age. Soon thereafter, he moved to the US permanently. From 1984 to 1988, he was employed as a stripper for the "Chippendale" dancers. In January 1993, Davis began his career in adult films.[2]

In 2003, Davis was inducted into the AVN Hall of Fame.[3] In February 2006, he was inducted into the XRCO Hall of Fame.[4]

In his last years (2009-2012), he worked primarily for kink.com, serving villainous roles in BDSM scenes. In 2012, Mark Davis announced his retirement from pornography, ending a nearly 20-year career.[2] In 2016, Davis returned to pornography to shoot exclusively for kink.com.[5]

Davis performed in about 2,400 videos in his pornographic career.

Personal life [edit]

Davis was married to Kobe Tai and, later, Kitten. He served as best man for Jenna Jameson and Brad Armstrong's wedding in 1996. He was also a friend of Jon Dough, whose suicide affected him "big time".

Awards [edit]

- 1994 XRCO Award – Best Anal Sex Scene (Buff Banged Bicycle Babes)[6]

A Star Historian Opens a New Chapter: Jewish Slaveowners

By Eric Herschthal

August 17, 2006

More than a decade ago, pioneering historian Natalie Zemon Davis was trudging through German archives, performing research for her book "Women on the Margins: Three Seventeenth-Century Lives." Published in 1995 and universally praised, the book was seen as vintage Davis: scholarly, but not impenetrable; groundbreaking, but not immoderate.

Although she was researching the lives of three 17th-century Europeans, Davis found a curious connection between one of her characters, Maria Sibylla Merian, and a Jewish physician in South America. Fixed on the project at hand, Davis "tucked the [Jewish doctor]" in the back of her mind, but filed away Merian's

Rabbi Jack Luxemburg, Rabbi Emeritus retired after 35 years as Temple Beth Ami's Senior Rabbi, in July 2016. Beginning in July of 1981 as the congregation's first full-time Rabbi, Rabbi Luxemburg has been part of the Temple Beth Ami community for more than half of its history. His contributions to all facets of the congregation's life have enabled the Temple to preserve its special character, while enjoying a period of significant growth in membership and in both the quality and diversity of Temple programs.

Rabbi Luxemburg is active in the community, having served on the Executive Committees of the Jewish Community Council, the Jewish Social Service Agency, the Charles E. Smith Day School, the Mid-Atlantic region of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the National Rabbinic Cabinet of the United Jewish Appeal, and the Washington Board of Rabbis. He was a founder and Vice President of the Suburban Maryland Chapter of the American Jewish Congress, and has served in that organization as President of the National Capital Region and

The 1992 Toshiba T4400SX was the first notebook to offer a choice of screens: a bright page-white LCD screen, or the latest super-fast plasma screen technology. The benefits of the plasma screen are brighter images and a much faster response. The speed of plasma allows you to work in advanced applications and in particular with graphics just as you would on a desktop. With the T4400SX even moving images won't blur on your screen. And the screen is unexpectedly large for a notebook, too. Try a diagonal of 9.5 inches (24 cm) for size.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For the generic term, see Personal watercraft. For other uses, see Jet Ski (disambiguation).

Jet Ski is the brand name of a personal watercraft (PWC)[1] manufactured by Kawasaki,[2] a Japanese company.[3] The term is often used generically to refer to any type of personal watercraft used mainly for recreation, and it is also used as a verb to describe the use of any type of PWC.

A runabout-style PWC typically carries one to three people seated in a configuration like a typical bicycle or motorcycle.

The Original 1973 Kawasaki JS400 Jet Ski.

Kawasaki Jet Ski [edit]

"Jet Ski" is a proper noun and registered trademark of Kawasaki. Released in 1972, the stand-up Kawasaki Jet Ski was the first commercially successful personal watercraft in America (after reaching a license agreement with the inventor of the Sea-Doo, Clayton Jacobson II when his license agreement with Bombardier expired).[3] The Kawasaki Jet Ski was the only commercially successful PWC for almost 16 years, from the introduction of the WSAA in October 1972 through the reintroduction of the sit-down, runabout-style Bombardier Sea-Doo in 1988.[4][5]

The first stand-up prototype

With the introduction of the Jet Ski, Kawasaki helped create the United States Jet Ski Boating Association (USJSBA), in cooperation with aftermarket companies and enthusiasts. In 1982 the name was changed to the International Jet Sports Boating Association (IJSBA). At the start, only JS440 stand-ups were raced. After Kawasaki introduced the runabout-style X2 in 1986, it gained its own class, later to be renamed the "Sport Class".[6]

Elk County podiatrist charged for allegedly overprescribing opioids

By Brianne Fleming bfleming@thecourierexpress.com Jul 22, 2021 Updated May 18, 2023

ST. MARYS — An Elk County podiatrist has been charged with several felonies after he was accused of overprescribing opioid-based medications to patients for over a year.

David Gregory Sanderson, 59, of St. Marys, is charged with 15 felony counts of “Admin Etc Of Cont Subst By Pract” — the administration, dispensing, delivery, gift or prescription of any controlled substance by any practitioner or professional assistant under the practitioner’s direction and supervision, unless done in good faith, within the scope of the patient relationship or in accordance with treatment principals — according to a criminal complaint filed by the Pennsylvania Office of Attorney General at Magisterial District Judge Mark Jacob’s office July 21.

NORTH BROOKFIELD, Mass. — A convicted child rapist from Barre was found working with children at a martial arts studio in North Brookfield and police were never notified.

"We're talking children. We're talking classes that are going on and this is something that is very alarming to me," said Chief Mark Smith with North Brookfield police.

A resident, who's a retired police officer, recognized 60-year-old David Sanderson from the sex offender registry and alerted police.

They were once America's cruelest, richest slave traders. Why does no one know their names?

The two most ruthless domestic slave traders in America had a secret language for their business.

Slave trading was a "game." The men, Isaac Franklin and John Armfield, were daring "pirates" or "one-eyed men," a euphemism for their penises. The women they bought and sold were "fancy maids," a term signifying youth, beauty and potential for sexual exploitation - by buyers or the traders themselves.

September 10, 2023 by Alex First

A Melbourne theatre review by Alex First

Miller's script makes several references to Biff's budding football career.

Direction from Neil Armfield (who worked with Lapaglia on the film Holding the Man) director Theresa Borg is exemplary.

For a play that is all but three hours, there is no letdown. With few props, the action mo pace.

Its emotional resonance endures, all the more so given the current state of the world an it is for many to make ends meet.

The Sewanee Project on Slavery, Race, and Reconciliation recently brought Dr. Joshua Rothman, a professor of history at the University of Alabama and one of the foremost scholars on the domestic slave trade in the United States, to lecture on the life and historical significance of John Armfield. The lecture, titled, "He has been for many years engaged in the traffic of human flesh": John Armfield and America's Domestic Slave Trade" explored Armfield's career and his connections with the University of the South.

Director of the Project and professor of history Woody Register (C'80) opened the event by saying that Rothman "is making history here" at Sewanee, taking special note of the fact that Rothman's lecture was the first public event to acknowledge and consider Armfield's legacy with the University.

"I've been teaching at Sewanee for many years, and for many of those many years, I've been telling my students about John Armfield," Register said. "So to me this history has been one that any student of Sewanee should or even must know. I feel very strongly about that."

Armfield was the operator of the largest slave trading firm in the United States, and he was within just a few weeks, then two more necessary inferences could be added to the six facts above...

- 7. Since Isaac was 37 at his mother's death, he was 37 when Rebekah was born.
- 8. Since Isaac was 40 when he married Rebekah, Rebekah would be 3 when the marriage took place (because 40-37=3)

But these last two inferences are spurious, because they are based not on what the scripture says in Genesis 22 and 23, but rather what is said in non-biblical tradition.

and is in consequence regarded as a thirteenfold commandment, which must under all circumstances be observed. Hence the necessity for the twofold instruction.

MISHNA: One may perform everything necessary for circumcision on the Sabbath, as circumcising, tearing open, sucking out the blood, applying a plaster or caraway seed. If the latter had not been ground before the Sabbath, one may masticate it with the teeth and then apply it. If one had not mixed wine with oil before the Sabbath, he may apply each separately. One must not prepare an actual bandage (on the Sabbath), but may apply an old piece of linen; and if such had not been prepared before the Sabbath, the circumciser may bring it with him tied around his finger and even from another court (yard).

"Sucking out the blood." R. Papa said: "The circumciser who does not suck out the wound places the child in danger, and should be discharged from office." Is this not self-evident?

*The Hebrew word "Vesuvehu" is interpreted by the Talmud to signify "and I will beautify him," while in the translation of the Bible, by I. Leeser, it is translated, "I will sing his praise," and the reference made to the verse by the Talmud accepts the term in its Talmudical sense.

19 וְאֵלֶּה תּוֹלְדֹת יִצְחָק בֶּן־אַבְרָהָם אַבְרָהָם הוֹלִיד אֶת־יִצְחָק׃

This is the story of Isaac, son of Abraham. Abraham begot Isaac.

20 וַיְהִי יִצְחָק בֶּן־אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה בְּקַחְתּוֹ אֶת־רִבְקָה בַּת־בְּתוּאֵל הָאֲרַמִּי מִפַּדַּן אֲרָם אֲחוֹת לָבָן הָאֲרַמִּי לוֹ לְאִשָּׁה׃

Isaac was forty years old when he took to wife Rebekah, daughter of Bethuel the Aramean of Paddan-aram, sister of Laban the Aramean.

21 וַיֶּעְתַּר יִצְחָק לַיהוָה לְנֹכַח אִשְׁתּוֹ כִּי עֲקָרָה הִוא וַיֵּעָתֶר לוֹ יְהוָה וַתַּהַר רִבְקָה אִשְׁתּוֹ׃

Commentary

בן ארבעים שנה FORTY YEARS OLD — For when Abraham came from Mount Moriah he received the news that Rebecca was born (22:20). Isaac was then thirty-seven years old, because at that time Sarah died and from the birth of Isaac until the Binding — when Sarah died — there were 37 years since she was 90 years old when Isaac was born and 127 when she died, as it is said, (23:1) "And the life of Sarah was [one hundred and twenty seven years]" — thus Isaac was then 37 years old. At that period Rebecca was born and he waited until she was fit for marriage — 3 years — and then married her (Seder Olam).

The age at which a person is deemed legally competent to consent to sexual activity varies widely around the world - and even within Europe.

Middle East: Like parts of North Africa, most Middle Eastern countries do not have a set age of consent but require that the couple are married. This includes Afghanistan, Iran, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, the UAE and Yemen. In many countries where sex outside of marriage is illegal, the minimum age of marriage is lower for women than for men. It is common for courts to grant permission for girls to marry below the legal age. In Iran in

What is the Bahrain Age of Consent?

The Age of Consent in Bahrain is 21 years old. The age of consent is the minimum age at which an individual is considered legally old enough to consent to participation in sexual activity. Individuals aged 20 or younger in Bahrain are not legally able to consent to sexual activity, and such activity may result in prosecution for statutory rape or the equivalent local law.

Bahrain statutory rape law is violated when an individual has consensual sexual contact with a person under age 21.

Bahrain does not have a close-in-age exemption. Close in age exemptions, commonly known as "Romeo and Juliet laws" in the United States, are put in place to prevent the prosecution of individuals who engage in consensual sexual activity when both participants are significantly close in age to each other, and one or both partners are below the age of consent.

Because there is no close-in-age exemption in Bahrain, it is possible for two individuals both under the age of 21 who willingly engage in intercourse to both be prosecuted for statutory rape, although this is rare. Similarly, no protections are reserved for sexual relations in which one participant is a 20 year old and the second is a 21 or 22 year old.

The age of consent varies by jurisdiction across Europe. The ages of consent – hereby meaning the age from which one is deemed able to consent to having sex with anyone else of consenting age or above – are between 14 and 18. The vast majority of countries set their ages in the range of 14 to 16; only four countries, Cyprus (17), Ireland (17), Turkey (18), and the Vatican City (18), set an age of consent higher than 16.

The highlighted age is that from which a young person can lawfully engage in a non-commercial sexual act with an older person, regardless of their age difference. If a participant in a sexual act is under 18 but above the age of consent then sexual acts with another person who is at or over the age of consent may still be illegal if the older participant is in a position of authority over the younger person. For example, a teacher and their student or someone in the police. Commercial sex/prostitution requires all those involved to be 18 or older. Sexual acts may not be legal if those engaging are blood relatives, regardless of age, though the legality of incest varies between European countries.

Some countries have close-in-age exceptions, allowing partners close in age of whom one or both may be below the standard unrestricted age of consent to be able to both legally consent to engage in sexual acts with each other. The lowest minimum age of consent for a close-in-age exception to apply in Europe is 12 (in Hungary), providing their older sexual partner is under 18.[1]

The vast majority of countries set their ages in the range of 14 to 16; only four countries, Cyprus (17), Ireland (17), Turkey (18), and the Vatican City (18), set an age of consent higher than 16.

The highlighted age is that from which a young person can lawfully engage in a non-commercial sexual act with an older person, regardless of their age difference. If a participant in a sexual act is under 18 but above the age of consent then sexual acts with another person who is at or over the age of consent may still be illegal if the older participant is in a position of authority over the younger person. For example, a teacher and their student or someone in the police. Commercial sex/prostitution requires all those involved to be 18 or older. Sexual acts may not be legal if those engaging are blood relatives, regardless of age, though the legality of incest varies between European countries.

Some countries have close-in-age exceptions, allowing partners close in age of whom one or both may be below the standard unrestricted age of consent to be able to both legally consent to engage in sexual acts with each other. The lowest minimum age of consent for a close-in-age exception to apply in Europe is 12 (in Hungary), providing their older sexual partner is under 18.[1]

ʿĀʾishah (born 614, Mecca, Arabia [now in Saudi Arabia]—died July 678, Medina) was the third wife of the Prophet Muhammad (the founder of Islam), who played a role of some political importance after the Prophet's death.

All Muhammad's marriages had political motivations, and in this case the intention seems to have been to cement ties with ʿĀʾishah's father, Abū Bakr, who was one of Muhammad's most important supporters. ʿĀʾishah's physical charms, intelligence, and wit, together with the genuine warmth of their relationship, secured her a place in his affections that was not lessened by his subsequent marriages. It is said that in 627 she accompanied the Prophet on an expedition but became separated from the group. When she was later escorted back to Medina by a man who had found her in the desert, Muhammad's enemies claimed that she had been unfaithful. A subsequent Qurʾānic revelation asserted her innocence; the Qurʾān furthermore criticized and stipulated punishment for those who slander virtuous women.

ʿĀʾishah had no important influence on her husband's political or religious policies while he lived, but he is said to have recognized her knowledge of Islam by counseling his Companions to "take half your knowledge from Humayra," Humayra ("Little Red One") being his term of endearment for her.

When Muhammad died in 632, ʿĀʾishah was left a childless widow of about 18, although some sources suggest she was older. She remained politically inactive until the time of ʿUthmān (644–656; the third caliph, or leader of the Islamic community), during whose reign she played an important role in fomenting opposition that led to his murder in 656. She led an army against his successor, ʿAlī, when he refused to bring ʿUthmān's murderers to justice, but she was defeated in the Battle of the Camel. The engagement derived its name from the fierce fighting that centred around the camel upon which ʿĀʾishah was mounted. Afterward she was allowed to return to Medina. Investigation into child exploitation on Meta platforms leads to arrests of three men

By Clare Duffy, CNN

An investigation into safety risks for children on Meta's platforms has led to the arrests of three men accused of attempting to sexually abuse children. Justin Sullivan/Getty Images

New York (CNN) — An investigation by the New Mexico Attorney General into the potential dangers of Meta's platforms has resulted in the arrests of three men charged with attempted sexual abuse of children.

The arrests came after a months-long investigation by the attorney general's office into the risks of sexual exploitation of children on Facebook and Instagram. That investigation also formed the basis of a lawsuit against Meta, filed in December, accusing the tech giant of creating a "breeding ground" for child predators.

More accusations against former Lindbergh coach after cold case gets national broadcast

The coach was secretly recorded confessing to what the family of one woman believes were sex crimes against her when she was a student

ST. LOUIS — They thought his own words would be enough to convict him.

"This kind of stuff, if we were the same age, would have been no problem," Jim Wilder is heard saying on an audio recording.

In 2013, after more than a decade of silence, Emilie Morris worked up the courage to go to the police.

She told them Wilder, her former Lindbergh cross country coach, committed sex crimes against her when she was still a student.

Police asked Morris to wear a wire and Wilder was arrested and charged with multiple sex crimes.

But just before his case was set to go to trial, Morris was found dead in her apartment and her case was dropped. Her cause of death - inconclusive.

When 5 On Your Side first reported her story in 2018, Emilie's family was still hoping her case could be reopened.

Lindbergh coach's sex crime confession caught on recording

As the pair spent more time together after practice, on out-of-town team trips, the rumors spread.

UPDATE: The Missouri Department of Secondary and Elementary Education is responding to a 5 On Your Side Cover Story about a former Lindbergh cross country coach caught on a secret recording confessing to sex crimes against a student.

That confession came nearly twenty years after former coach James Wilder had sexual contact with Emilie Morris who was 16 at the time.

Because of the recording, Wilder was arrested and charged but when Emilie passed away before he went to trial his case was dropped.

Wilder resigned from Lindbergh when the district said police turned over "have evidence" of the incident. But he was able to keep his state teaching license.

A Lindbergh spokesperson said the license is the responsibility of the state, and a state official said because Wilder's license was not revoked because he was never convicted.

However, 5 On Your Side has found a state statute that says a teacher can be disciplined or a certificate "not renewed" if there is "evidence of incompetence, immorality, or neglect of duty by the certificate holder."

Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi Was A Mossad Agent? Israel-ISIS 'Links' Resurface After Moscow Terrorist Attack | Fact Check

The deadly terrorist strike at Moscow's Crocus City Hall in which 143 were killed sparked a massive outrage online. As people were mourning and praying for the victims of the attack claimed by the Islamic State (also known as ISIS), several social media posts claimed that Israel's purported involvement in the creation and further funding of the captured militants. The most visible and amplified claim was that the ISIS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi was a 'Jewish Mossad agent' named 'Elliot Shimon' or 'Simon Elliot', among others.

Now al-Khattab, who was born Joseph Leonard Cohen and was brought up in New Jersey and in Brooklyn in a Jewish home, tells NPR he made a big mistake and describes himself as a "failure." He's scheduled to appear in a federal court in Alexandria, Va., on Friday to be sentenced on terrorism charges.

The case is significant because al-Khattab, now in his mid-40s, is one of the founders of a radical Islamist group called Revolution Muslim, which became a gateway for young jihadists in the U.S. looking to join violent Islamist groups overseas.

Born in Girgi village, in Jakusko, present-day Yobe State, Nigeria, Yusuf received a University education.[2] Later he studied more of Islam and became a Salafi.[3]

Education and beliefs

[edit]

According to scholar Paul Lubeck of the University of California at Santa Cruz, as a young man Yusuf was instructed in Shiasm and associated with Salafism and the teachings of Ibn Taymiyyah.[4] He had the equivalent of a graduate education, according to Nigerian academic Hussain Zakaria. Yusuf was never as proficient in English as was reported. He believed in the strict application of Islamic law, which represented his ideal of justice according to the teachings of the Islamic prophet, Muhammad. Boko Haram hitmen would murder members of other Muslim sects like the Salafist Izala and the Sufi Tidjaniyya and Qadiriya fraternities.[5] In a 2009 BBC interview, Yusuf stated his belief that the concept of a spherical Earth is contrary to Islamic teaching and should be rejected. He also rejected Darwinian evolution, and the concept of the condensation cycle that produces rain.[6] In the interview he said:

> There are prominent Islamic preachers who have seen and understood that the present Western-style education is mixed with issues that run contrary to our beliefs in Islam, he said.

The son of one of the founders of Hamas has blasted the terror group's student supporters in the United States, accusing them of participating in Hamas' brutal crimes and declaring they "need to go to a mental asylum."

Mosab Hassan Yousef, the son of Hamas founder Sheikh Hassan Yousef, made the remarks as he appeared on "Dr. Phil Primetime" last week to debate two anti-Israel student activists from the University of Michigan.

"It's very disappointing to see Americans supporting Hamas and thinking that Hamas is a cool thing, while Hamas does not respect any of those followers," Yousef said on the April 2 episode.

According to scholar Paul Lubeck of the University of California at Santa Cruz, as a young man Yusuf was instructed in Shiism and associated with Salafism and the teachings of Ibn Taymiyyah.[4] He had the equivalent of a graduate education, according to Nigerian academic Hussain Zakaria. Yusuf was never as proficient in English as was reported. He believed in the strict application of Islamic law, which represented his ideal of justice according to the teachings of the Islamic prophet, Muhammad. Boko Haram hitmen would murder members of other Muslim sects like the Salafist Izala and the Sufi Tidjaniyya and Qadiriya fraternities.[5] In a 2009 BBC interview, Yusuf stated his belief that the concept of a spherical Earth is contrary to Islamic teaching and should be rejected. He also rejected Darwinian evolution, and the concept of the condensation cycle that produces rain.[6] In the interview he said:

> There are prominent Islamic preachers who have seen and understood that the present Western-style education is mixed with issues that run contrary to our beliefs in Islam, he said.
> Like rain. We believe it is a creation of God rather than an evaporation caused by the sun that condenses and becomes rain.
> Like saying the world is a sphere. If it runs contrary to the teachings of Allah, we reject it. We also reject the theory of Darwinism.

By Melissa Koenig

Published April 8, 2024, 9:09 a.m. ET

The son of one of the founders of Hamas has blasted the terror group's student supporters in the United States, accusing them of participating in Hamas' brutal crimes and declaring they "need to go to a mental asylum."

Mosab Hassan Yousef, the son of Hamas founder Sheikh Hassan Yousef, made the remarks as he appeared on "Dr. Phil Primetime" last week to debate two anti-Israel student activists from the University of Michigan.

"It's very disappointing to see Americans supporting Hamas and thinking that Hamas is a cool thing, while Hamas does not respect any of those followers," Yousef said on the April 2 episode.

Tel Aviv – It's a tense stakeout, waiting for Jimmy Julius Karow to appear. He is a wanted man and is considered dangerous. Accused of sexually assaulting a 9-year-old girl in Oregon in 2000, he fled to Israel before authorities in the U.S. could apprehend him or figure out where he went. Karow has been running from U.S. law enforcement ever since. Currently INTERPOL, an inter-governmental policing organization that works with 194 countries, has a Red Notice to alert police worldwide that he's a fugitive.

Israeli far-right lawmaker Avi Maoz accused the Justice Ministry of attempting to normalize pedophilia within the country by altering Israel's age of consent laws.

Currently, the age of consent in Israel is 16 for all genders. However, that age of consent can go as low as 14, provided the other sexual partner was no more than three years older and both parties consented.

But according to Maoz, the Justice Ministry is trying to change this to an age gap of five years.

Jabir ibn Hayyan (Geber)

c. 721-c. 815

Arab Alchemist and Physician

Jabir ibn Hayyan, often known as Geber, is sometimes confused with a fourteenth-century Spanish mystic who also called himself Geber. In fact the latter deliberately took on the name of his distinguished predecessor, and thus is typically known as "the false Geber." As for the true Jabir, he is widely credited as the Father of Chemistry, the first alchemist to take his studies beyond superstition and into the realm of pure science. Among his many practical discoveries were arsenic, sulphur, and mercury.

How Jabir Ibn Hayyan Became the Father of Modern Chemistry

By Ayomide Akinbode · July 27, 2020 · 12 Min Read

Last Updated: September 23, 2023

Most students of Chemistry may be unfamiliar with the name Jabir ibn Hayyan not to talk of knowing him as the father of modern chemistry. However, ibn Hayyan was not just a chemist, he was also an alchemist; a polymath, an engineer and physicist, an astronomer and astrologer, a geographer, a philosopher, a physician, and a pharmacist.

Jabir ibn Hayyan's greatest legacy was the use of experimentation in chemistry. The scientist is credited with using more than 20 types of now currently common chemical laboratory equipment, including the alembic (an apparatus, mostly made of glass, used for distilling in alchemy) and retort stand, as well as explaining other chemical processes, including crystallisation and distillation.

Jabir ibn Hayyan – Biography, Achievements and Discoveries

Jabir ibn Hayyan was an 8th century famous Arab scientists, philosopher, and pharmacist. Due to the immense contribution he had in the fields of alchemy and chemistry, he came to be known as the "Father of modern chemistry". He is often credited with being the author of a variety of books on subjects such as Shi'ite religious philosophy, alchemy, chemistry and astronomy. Generally called the Jabirian corpus, the works of Jabir had a tremendous influence on scholarship in not just the Islamic world but also all across Europe.

Muhammad Yunus: History, Accomplishments, Criticism

Fact checked by HANS DANIEL JASPERSON

Who Is Muhammad Yunus?

Muhammad Yunus is a professor of economics who was awarded the 2006 Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts in developing social and economic improvements through microcredit and microloan operations. Most notably, Yunus founded the Grameen Bank, which is known for loaning billions of dollars to impoverished people all over the world.[1]

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Muhammad Yunus is an economist, microfinancing pioneer, and founder of the grassroots Grameen Bank, known for loaning billions to impoverished people all over the world.
- While teaching economics in his native Bangladesh, Yunus became aware of the extreme poverty in the country and the refusal of banks to offer credit to poor people.

Muhammad Yunus won a Nobel Peace Prize for spreading the concept of microcredit—tiny loans to help poor people start businesses—via his Bangladesh-based Grameen Bank. He resigned as CEO of that organization last year, at age 70, due to pressure from the Bangladeshi government, but he remains active in Grameen ventures elsewhere in the world. Interviewed by Alison Beard

HBR: There was a lot of controversy over your retirement. It was reported that the Bangladeshi government, which owns 3% of Grameen Bank, forced your hand.

Yunus: Look, when I was 60, I submitted my resignation. "Why do you want to retire?" the board asked. "Is the work becoming too heavy on you? Do you want to do something else? If you're enjoying your work and we enjoy you, why don't you continue?" So I said OK. When I turned 70, I did the same thing. I said, "I think I should go." They said, "You cannot." Staff members all over the country were writing me letters saying, "Don't leave. This will bring a panic." So again I couldn't leave. But I wrote a letter by my own hand and took it to the finance minister and said, "I'm trying to retire as CEO, so why doesn't the government appoint

Details About Hunter Biden's Dating Site Scandal

By Precious Gibson • June 3, 2024 11:00 am EST

Hunter Biden has had his fair share of drama. From the paternity suit filed by exotic dancer Lunden Roberts to his admitted history of drug abuse, Hunter has found himself in many controversial situations. However, his dating site scandal may have been among the most surprising.

The Ashley Madison data breach of July 2015 exposed the names of millions of people who signed up for the website in hopes of having an extramarital affair. Several famous people were outed in the breach, including Biden. A profile registered to his full name, Robert Hunter Biden, and email address had been a member of Ashley Madison since 2014. The page also stated that he was actively seeking "anything goes," which alluded to him being open to any form of relationship. At the time, Biden was still married to his first wife Kathleen Buhle. While the evidence suggested that he was actively seeking a mistress, Biden maintained that there was a logical explanation for his presence on the platform.

Forget about wireless personal area networks, like Bluetooth, and wireless WANs with their respective network devices. Even without these wireless network topologies, there's enough to keep straight with the topic of WLAN. In particular, let's explore the differences between WLAN vs. Wi-Fi.

What is a WLAN and how does it work?

A WLAN is a local area network that uses radio technology instead of wiring to interconnect networked nodes.

To tackle the generic WLAN construct, we first need to review what local area network means. A LAN is generally a network contained within a building or campus, representing a geographical or functional construct usually connected via cabling of various sorts. Add a W to LAN, and it becomes a wireless LAN. Wireless technology either extends the LAN, replaces parts of it or both.

The terms WLAN and Wi-Fi are often linked and used interchangeably, but problems arise with that habit. A WLAN can be built on various wireless technologies, including Wi-Fi, cellular and Bluetooth, for example.

History [edit]

In 1992, Halim Zaghloul and Michel Fattouche co-founded WiLAN[1] after they developed together the Wideband Orthogonal Frequency Division Multiplexing (WOFDM),[2][non-primary source needed] and Multi-code Direct-sequence Spread Spectrum (MCDSSS).[3][non-primary source needed] Through WiLAN's efforts, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has allowed OFDM technology over the 2.4 GHz unlicensed ISM band for the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE) 802.11 standards. MC-DSSS (MultiCode Direct-sequence Spread Spectrum) is central to high speed CDMA applications, the main technology currently used by many cellphone networks.

In March 1998, WiLAN had its initial public offering.[1]

In November 1999, WiLAN and Philips invited companies to attend a meeting to form an alliance to promote the OFDM technology and its applications.[1] WiLAN was a founding member of the WiMAX Forum together with Ensemble, CopaSpan, Harris, and Nokia.

From its founding in 1992 to 2000, WiLAN had success as interest and investment in the tech industry grew. However, in 2000, when the world's first tech bubble collapsed,

Hatim Zaghloul is the inventor of the well-known daily-used Wi-Fi's WiMAX's and LTE's WOFDM! He is renowned in the field and known among global companies in the field of telecommunications and technology. Hatim decided that he couldn't be stingy with the amount of information he has; so, he contributed to developing the Internet service to increase its speed and using it on mobile phones. In 1989, he joined a Canadian telecom company after he emigrated from Egypt in 1983. There, he established his invention in cooperation with his companion Dr. Micheal Fattoush. What a miraculous career he has.

History [edit]

WiLan was founded in 1992 by Hatim Zaghloul and Michel Fattouche to commercialize their Wideband Orthogonal Frequency Division Multiplexing (WOFDM) technology.[2] It was originally based in Calgary, Alberta, and the name was an acronym for "Wireless Local Area Network".[3] In March 1995, WiLAN had its initial public offering on the Alberta Stock Exchange at $2.50 per share (it later listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange).[4] WiLAN enjoyed significant success in the context of the tech bubble at the time, but its fortunes changed when the bubble collapsed. From October 1999 to March 2000, WiLan's share price increased from $10 to $54, but it fell back down to $12 by November 2000.[5] By February 2008, the price had fallen to 66 cents.[6]

In 2005, WiLAN reached a significant patent licensing deal with Cisco Systems.[7] In 2006 WiLAN divested its various technology product lines to refocus its business on licensing intellectual property and patent rights. As part of this change of strategy, it replaced its CEO, Bill Dunbar, with Jim Skippen, who served as President and CEO of WiLAN until July 2018.[8] Founder Hatim Zaghloul resigned from the board.[9] At the same time, the company moved its headquarters from Calgary to Ottawa.[10]

Ana Abulaban and Ray Barron Fell Victim to The Former's Abusive Marriage

Ana Marie Abulaban, born in June 1993 to Ron and Amelia Miller, was originally from the Philippines and grew up in Okinawa, Japan, where she met Ali Abulaban and started dating him in the early 2010s. Shortly after her boyfriend's discharge from the U.S. Air Force and subsequent move back to America, Ana learned she was pregnant. As such, she moved to the States to Virginia, marrying Ali in 2017. Thus, the couple started their new life with their daughter, Amira.

After a few years of residence in Virginia with Ali's parents, the husband's career as an online content creator started taking off, prompting a move to San Diego at Ana's request. In the new city, the couple moved into the Spire San Diego, and Ana found herself surrounded by a number of her friends. Rayburn Cardenas Barron, known as Ray, was among these friends. He was

We, the family of Ana Marie Abulaban, are grateful for the outpouring of emotion and the generosity given as we navigate how to bring her mother from the Philippines so she may escort Ana Marie back to her childhood home. As we reel from the pain of this senseless tragedy, we are thankful for the kindness from both those that knew her and from compassionate strangers.

The funds raised will not only assist with the financial burden of this brutal chapter in her life but will also assist her daughter in her long journey forward toward healing. Losing a loved one is never easy. Losing a daughter, a sister, a mother in such a violent manner is unfathomable. Meanwhile, Ana wanted out of her marriage to Ali. On October 21, 2021, she was at The Spire, where she and her daughter were living without her estranged husband. The same day, she had texted Ali, "I want you out of my life, once and for all." Afterward, her friend, Ray, visited the apartment. Eventually, Ali stormed into the apartment— seemingly out of the blue— with a gun and shot Ana and Ray. In total, Ali fired six shots that day and killed two people. Furthermore, he called his mother after the crime to tell her about it and sent her a picture of the crime scene as evidence. He made another phone call shortly after to the 911 emergency hotline and informed authorities that he had found Ana and Ray's dead bodies. Before the cops came, the perpetrator fled the crime scene.

We, the family of Ana Marie Abulaban, are grateful for the outpouring of emotion and the generosity given as we navigate how to bring her mother from the Philippines as she may escort Ana Marie back to her childhood home. As we rest from the pain of this senseless tragedy, we are thankful for the kindness from both those that knew her and from compassionate strangers.

The funds raised will not only assist with the financial burden of this brutal chapter in her life but will also assist her daughter in her long journey forward toward healing. Losing a loved one is never easy. Losing a daughter, a sister, a mother in such a violent manner is unfathomable. Please believe us when we say the gestures displayed on this platform go a long way in helping as we continue to deal with Dalal Wanta. By October 2021, things between Ali and Ana had escalated as the former suspected his wife of cheating on him.

Meanwhile, Ana wanted out of her marriage to Ali. On October 21, 2021, she was at The Spire, where she and her daughter were living without her estranged husband. The same day, she had texted Ali, "I want you out of my life, once and for all." Afterward, her friend, Ray, visited the apartment. Eventually, Ali stormed into the apartment – seemingly out of the blue – with a gun and shot Ana and Ray. In total, Ali fired six shots that day and killed two people. Furthermore, he called his mother after the crime to tell her about it and sent her a picture of the crime scene as evidence. He made another phone call shortly after to the 911 emergency hotline and informed authorities that he had found Ana and Ray's dead bodies. Before the cops came, the perpetrator fled the crime scene.

Ali Abulaban Claimed The Killings Were Unintentional

After Ana Abulaban and Rayburn Cardenas Barron's deaths, the cops caught on to their shooter. Ali Abulaban, shortly afterward and arrested him.

By Eric Hirschthal

More than a decade ago, pioneering historian Natalie Zemon Davis was trudging through German archives, performing research for her book "Women on the Margins: Three Seventeenth-Century Lives." Published in 1995 and universally praised, the book was seen as vintage Davis: scholarly, but not impenetrable; groundbreaking, but not inaccessible.

Although she was researching the lives of three 17th-century Europeans, Davis found a curious connection between one of her characters, Maria Sibylla Merian, and a Jewish physician in South America. Hard on the project at hand, Davis "tucked the Jewish doctor [" in the back of her mind, but filed away Merian's

Judah Benjamin was the largest Jewish slave owner in the South and a key member of Confederate President Jefferson Davis' government. 'This is a person who had some very impressive qualities but did sickening, horrible things,' says biographer James Traub

There have never been any calls to topple statues of Confederate politician Judah Benjamin. But that's probably because no statues were erected in the first place.

For other people named Mark Davis, see Mark Davis (disambiguation).

Mark Davis (born 6 August 1965) is an English former pornographic actor, director, and exotic dancer. In 1998, The Independent labeled him "Britain's biggest male porn star in America".[1] In 2012, he announced his retirement from the adult industry.[2] He has been inducted into the AVN and XRCO Halls of Fame.[3][4]

Other names	Steve Scott, Stephen Scott, Steven Scott, Scott James, Marc Davis, Mark
Years active	1993–2012 2016–present
Height	6 ft 2 in (1.88 m)
Spouse	Kobe Tai (m. 1997; div. 1999)

Early life [edit]

Davis grew up in Essex.[1] In 1981, his family moved to Toronto, Ontario.

Career [edit]

Davis in a pornographic shoot in 2011

After graduating from high school, he went to Los Angeles to shoot a Playgirl pictorial at 18 years of age. Soon thereafter, he moved to the US permanently. From 1984 to 1988, he was employed as a stripper for the "Chippendale" dancers. In January 1993, Davis began his career in adult films.[2]

In 2003, Davis was inducted into the AVN Hall of Fame.[3] In February 2006, he was inducted into the XRCO Hall of Fame.[4]

In his last years (2009-2012), he worked primarily for kink.com, serving villainous roles in BDSM scenes. In 2012, Mark Davis announced his retirement from pornography, ending a nearly 20-year career.[2] In 2016, Davis returned to pornography to shoot exclusively for kink.com.[5]

Davis performed in about 2,400 videos in his pornographic career.

Personal life [edit]

Davis was married to Kobe Tai and, later, Kitten. He served as best man for Jenna Jameson and Brad Armstrong's wedding in 1996. He was also a friend of Jon Dough, whose suicide affected him "big time."

Awards [edit]

- 1994 XRCO Award – Best Anal Sex Scene (Butt Banged Bicycle Babes)[6]

CASIO

50 Years of Innovation

The year 2024 marks exactly 50 years since the birth of CASIO wristwatches. Released in 1974 as CASIO's first wristwatch, the CASIOTRON was the world's first digital watch with an automatic calendar function and a precursor to later CASIO brands such as G-SHOCK, OCEANUS, and PROTREK. It was a model positioned as a turning point in CASIO COMPUTER's history.

The 1992 Toshiba T4400SX was the first notebook to offer a choice of screens: a bright page-white LCD screen, or the latest super-fast plasma screen technology. The benefits of the plasma screen are brighter images and a much faster response. The speed of plasma allows you to work in advanced applications and in particular with graphics just as you would on a desktop. With the T4400SX even moving images won't blur on your screen. And the screen is unexpectedly large for a notebook, too. Try a diagonal of 9.5 inches (24 cm) for size.

Processor: Intel 486SX™ upgradable to 486DX™, 25 /12.5 MHz clock speed, 8 KB cache on chip, Reset switch, Numeric data processor included in 486DX Memory: Standard 2 MB RAM, Expandable to 10 MB, LIM EMS 4.0XMS support
Hard Disk: 80 MB, less than 19 ms average access time
Diskette Drive: 3.5" 1.44 MB/720 KB diskette drive, Media-type checking Display: Sidelit Supertwist LCD or high contrast, low power gas plasma, 9.5" (24 cm) diagonal, 640 x 480 dot resolution

For the generic term, see Personal watercraft. For other uses, see Jet Ski (disambiguation).

Jet Ski is the brand name of a personal watercraft (PWC)[1] manufactured by Kawasaki,[2] a Japanese company.[3] The term is often used generically to refer to any type of personal watercraft used mainly for recreation, and it is also used as a verb to describe the use of any type of PWC.

A runabout-style PWC typically carries one to three people seated in a configuration like a typical bicycle or motorcycle.

Kawasaki Jet Ski [edit]

"Jet Ski" is a proper noun and registered trademark of Kawasaki. Released in 1972, the stand-up Kawasaki Jet Ski was the first commercially successful personal watercraft in America (after reaching a license agreement with the inventor of the Sea-Doo, Clayton Jacobson II when his license agreement with Bombardier expired).[2] The Kawasaki Jet Ski was the only commercially successful PWC for almost 16 years, from the introduction of the WSAA in October 1972 through the reintroduction of the sit-down, runabout-style Bombardier Sea-Doo in 1988.[4] [5]

With the introduction of the Jet Ski, Kawasaki helped create the United States Jet Ski Boating Association (USJSBA), in cooperation with aftermarket companies and enthusiasts. In 1982 the name was changed to the International Jet Sports Boating Association (IJSBA). At the start, only JS440 stand-ups were raced. After Kawasaki introduced the runabout-style X2 in 1986, it gained its own class, later to be renamed the "Sport Class".[4]

Elk County podiatrist charged for allegedly overprescribing opioids

By Brianne Fleming bfleming@thecourierexpress.com Jul 22, 2021 Updated May 18, 2023

ST. MARYS — An Elk County podiatrist has been charged with several felonies after he was accused of overprescribing opioid-based medications to patients for over a year.

David Gregory Sanderson, 59, of St. Marys, is charged with 15 felony counts of "Admin Etc Of Cont Subst By Pract" — the administration, dispensing, delivery, gift or prescription of any controlled substance by any practitioner or professional assistant under the practitioner's direction and supervision, unless done in good faith, within the scope of the patient relationship or in accordance with treatment principals — according to a criminal complaint filed by the Pennsylvania Office of Attorney General at Magisterial District Judge Mark Jacob's office July 21.

June 02, 2016 at 8:45 pm EDT

NORTH BROOKFIELD, Mass. — A convicted child rapist from Barre was found working with children at a martial arts studio in North Brookfield and police were never notified.

"We're talking children. We're talking classes that are going on and this is something that is very alarming to me," said Chief Mark Smith with North Brookfield police.

A resident, who's a retired police officer, recognized 60-year-old David Sanderson from the sex offender registry and alerted police.

They were once America's cruelest, richest slave traders. Why does no one know their names?

The two most ruthless domestic slave traders in America had a secret language for their business.

Slave trading was a "game." The men, Isaac Franklin and John Armfield, were daring "pirates" or "one-eyed men," a euphemism for their penises. The women they bought and sold were "fancy maids," a term signifying youth, beauty and potential for sexual exploitation — by buyers or the traders themselves.

within just a few weeks, then two more necessary inferences could be added to the six facts above...

- 7. Since Isaac was 37 at his mother's death, he was 37 when Rebekah was born.
- 8. Since Isaac was 40 when he married Rebekah, Rebekah would be 3 when the marriage took place (because 40-37=3)

But these last two inferences are spurious, because they are based not on what the scripture says in Genesis 22 and 23, but rather what is said in non-biblical tradition.

Why is the age of consent 21?

Discussion

Bahrain has the highest age of consent in the world at 21. I'm curious as to why it is so high. Most countries set it between 16-18. Some are lower 15 in France 14 in Germany 13 in Japan

THE STAR

Bahrain and South Korea have highest minimum ages for consensual sex while Nigeria has lowest

The age at which a person is deemed legally competent to consent to sexual activity varies widely around the world - and even within Europe

Middle East: Like parts of North Africa, most Middle Eastern countries do not have a set age of consent but require that the couple are married. This includes Afghanistan, Iran, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, the UAE and Yemen. In many countries where sex outside of marriage is illegal, the minimum age of marriage is lower for women than for men. It is common for courts to grant permission for girls as young as 15 to marry, below the legal age. In Iran, it

What is the Bahrain Age of Consent?

The Age of Consent in Bahrain is 21 years old. The age of consent is the minimum age at which an individual is considered legally old enough to consent to participation in sexual activity. Individuals aged 20 or younger in Bahrain are not legally able to consent to sexual activity, and such activity may result in prosecution for statutory rape or the equivalent local law.

Bahrain statutory rape law is violated when an individual has consensual sexual contact with a person under age 21.

Bahrain does not have a close-in-age exemption. Close in age exemptions, commonly known as "Romeo and Juliet laws" in the United States, are put in place to prevent the prosecution of individuals who engage in consensual sexual activity when both participants are significantly close in age to each other, and one or both partners are below the age of consent.

Because there is no close-in-age exemption in Bahrain, it is possible for two individuals both under the age of 21 who willingly engage in intercourse to both be prosecuted for statutory rape, although this is rare. Similarly, no protections are reserved for sexual relations in which one participant is a 20 year old and the second is a 21 or 22 year old.

The age of consent varies by jurisdiction across Europe. The ages of consent – hereby meaning the age from which one is deemed able to consent to having sex with anyone older of consenting age or above – are between 14 and 18. The vast majority of countries set their ages in the range of 14 to 16; only four countries, Cyprus (17), Ireland (17), Turkey (18), and the Vatican City (18), set an age of consent higher than 16.

The highest age is that from which a young person can lawfully engage in a non-commercial sexual act with an older person, regardless of their age difference. If a participant in a sexual act is under 18 but above the age of consent then sexual acts with another person who is at or over the age of consent may still be illegal if the older participant is in a position of authority over the younger person. For example, a teacher and their student or someone in the police. Commercial sex/prostitution requires all those involved to be 18 or older. Sexual acts may not be legal if those engaging are blood relatives, regardless of age. Though the legality of incest varies between European countries.

Some countries have close-in-age exceptions, allowing partners close in age of whom one or both may be below the standard unrestricted age of consent to be able to both legally consent to engage in sexual acts with each other. The lowest minimum age of consent for a close-in-age exception to apply in Europe is 12 (in Hungary), providing their older sexual partner is under 18.[1]

ʿĀʾishah (born 614, Mecca, Arabia [now in Saudi Arabia]—died July 678, Medina) was the third wife of the Prophet Muhammad (the founder of Islam), who played a role of some political importance after the Prophet's death.

All Muhammad's marriages had political motivations, and in this case the intention seems to have been to cement ties with ʿĀʾishah's father, Abū Bakr, who was one of Muhammad's most important supporters. ʿĀʾishah's physical charms, intelligence, and wit, together with the genuine warmth of their relationship, secured her a place in his affections that was not lessened by his subsequent marriages. It is said that in 627 she accompanied the Prophet on an expedition but became separated from the group. When she was later escorted back to Medina by a man who had found her in the desert, Muhammad's enemies claimed that she had been unfaithful. A subsequent Qurʾānic revelation asserted her innocence; the Qurʾān furthermore criticized and stipulated punishment for those who slander virtuous women.

ʿĀʾishah had no important influence on her husband's political or religious policies while he lived, but he is said to have recognized her knowledge of Islam by counseling his Companions to "take half your knowledge from Humayra," Humayra ("Little Red One") being his term of endearment for her.

When Muhammad died in 632, ʿĀʾishah was left a childless widow of about 18, although some sources suggest she was older. She remained politically inactive until the time of ʿUthmān (644–656; the third caliph, or leader of the Islamic community), during whose reign she played an important role in fomenting opposition that led to his murder in 656. She led an army against his successor, ʿAlī, when he refused to bring ʿUthmān's murderers to justice, but she was defeated in the Battle of the Camel. The engagement derived its name from the fierce fighting that centred around the camel upon which ʿĀʾishah was mounted. Afterward she was allowed to return to Medina. Investigation into child exploitation on Meta platforms leads to arrests of three men

By Clare Duffy, CNN

An investigation into safety risks for children on Meta's platforms has led to the arrests of three men accused of attempting to sexually abuse children. Justin Sullivan/Getty Images

New York (CNN) — An investigation by the New Mexico Attorney General into the potential dangers of Meta's platforms has resulted in the arrests of three men charged with attempted sexual abuse of children.

The arrests come after a months-long investigation by the attorney general's office into the risks of sexual exploitation of children on Facebook and Instagram. That investigation also formed the basis of a lawsuit against Meta, filed in December, accusing the tech giant of creating a "breeding ground" for child predators.

More accusations against former Lindbergh coach after cold case gets national broadcast

The coach was secretly recorded confessing to what the family of one woman believes were sex crimes against her when she was a student

ST. LOUIS — They thought his own words would be enough to convict him.

"This kind of stuff, if we were the same age, would have been no problem," Jim Wilder is heard saying on an audio recording.

In 2013, after more than a decade of silence, Emilie Morris worked up the courage to go to the police.

She told them Wilder, her former Lindbergh cross country coach, committed sex crimes against her when she was still a student.

Police asked Morris to wear a wire and Wilder was arrested and charged with multiple sex crimes.

But just before his case was set to go to trial, Morris was found dead in her apartment and her case was dropped. Her cause of death - inconclusive.

When 5 On Your Side first reported her story in 2018, Emilie's family was still hoping her case could be reopened.

COVER STORY

Lindbergh coach's sex crime confession caught on recording

As the pair spent more time together after practice, on out-of-town team trips, the rumors spread.

UPDATE: The Missouri Department of Secondary and Elementary Education is responding to a 5 On Your Side Cover Story about a former Lindbergh cross country coach caught on a secret recording confessing to sex crimes against a student.

That confession came nearly twenty years after former coach James Wilder had sexual contact with Emilie Morris who was 16 at the time.

Because of the recording, Wilder was arrested and charged but when Emilie passed away before he went to trial his case was dropped.

Wilder resigned from Lindbergh when the district said police turned over "new evidence" of the incident. But he was able to keep his state teaching license.

A Lindbergh spokesperson said the license is the responsibility of the state, and a state official said because Wilder's license was not revoked because he was never convicted.

However, 5 On Your Side has found a state statute that says a teacher can be disciplined or a certificate "not renewed" if there is "evidence of incompetence, immorality, or neglect of duty by the certificate holder."

The World's First Web Site

On August 6, 1991, without fanfare, British computer scientist Tim Berners-Lee published the first-ever website while working at CERN, the huge particle physics lab in Switzerland.

Screenshot of the recreated page of the first website (Image: CERN)

The first website at CERN – and in the world – was dedicated to the World Wide Web project itself and was hosted on Berners-Lee's NeXT computer. In 2013, CERN launched a project to restore this first ever website: info.cern.ch.

Yousef al-Khattab helped change the way young Muslims were radicalized by spewing extreme Islamist propaganda on a YouTube channel.

Yousef al-Khattab helped found Revolution Muslim, a website that published extreme Islamist propaganda. Al-Khattab, who was born Joseph Cohen and was raised in a Jewish family in New Jersey, faces sentencing Friday after pleading guilty to terrorism charges.

Now al-Khattab, who was born Joseph Leonard Cohen and was brought up in New Jersey and in Brooklyn in a Jewish home, tells NPR he made a big mistake and describes himself as a "failure." He's scheduled to appear in a federal court in Alexandria, Va., on Friday to be sentenced on terrorism charges.

The case is significant because al-Khattab, now in his mid-40s, is one of the founders of a radical Islamist group called Revolution Muslim, which became a gateway for young jihadists in the U.S. looking to join violent Islamist groups overseas.

Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi Was A Mossad Agent? Israel-ISIS 'Links' Resurface After Moscow Terrorist Attack | Fact Check

The deadly terrorist strike at Moscow's Crocus City Hall in which 143 were killed sparked a massive outrage online. As people were mourning and praying for the victims of the attack claimed by the Islamic State (also known as ISIS), several social media posts claimed that Israel's purported involvement in the creation and further funding of the captured militants. The most visible and amplified claim was that the ISIS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi was a 'Jewish Mossad agent' named 'Elliot Shimon' or 'Simon Elliot', among others.

Mohammed Yusuf (29 January 1970 – 30 July 2009), also known as Ustaz Mohammed Yusuf, was a Nigerian terrorist who founded the Islamist militant group Boko Haram in 2002. He was its leader until he was killed during the 2009 Boko Haram uprising.[1]

Born in Girgi village, in Jakusko, present-day Yobe State, Nigeria, Yusuf received a University education.[2] Later he studied more of Islam and became a Salafi.[3]

Education and beliefs

According to scholar Paul Lubeck of the University of California at Santa Cruz, as a young man Yusuf was instructed in Shiasm and associated with Salafism and the teachings of Ibn Taymiyyah.[4] He had the equivalent of a graduate education, according to Nigerian academic Hussain Zakaria. Yusuf was never as proficient in English as was reported. He believed in the strict application of Islamic law, which represented his ideal of justice according to the teachings of the Islamic prophet, Muhammad. Boko Haram hitmen would murder members of other Muslim sects like the Salafist Izala and the Sufi Tidjaniyya and Qadiriya fraternities.[5] In a 2009 BBC interview, Yusuf stated his belief that the concept of a spherical Earth is contrary to Islamic teaching and should be rejected. He also rejected Darwinian evolution, and the concept of the condensation cycle that produces rain.[6] In the interview he said:

> There are prominent Islamic preachers who have seen and understood that the present Western-style education is mixed with issues that run contrary to our beliefs in Islam, he said.
> Like rain. We believe it is a creation of God rather than an evaporation caused by the sun that condenses and becomes rain.
> Like saying the world is a sphere. If it runs contrary to the teachings of Allah, we reject it. We also reject the theory of Darwinism.

Son of Hamas founder blasts student supporters in US: 'Those pro-Palestine need to go to a mental asylum'

The son of one of the founders of Hamas has blasted the terror group's student supporters in the United States, accusing them of participating in Hamas' brutal crimes and declaring they "need to go to a mental asylum."

Mosab Hassan Yousef, the son of Hamas founder Sheikh Hassan Yousef, made the remarks as he appeared on "Dr. Phil Primetime" last week to debate two anti-Israel student activists from the University of Michigan.

"It's very disappointing to see Americans supporting Hamas and thinking that Hamas is a cool thing, while Hamas does not respect any of those followers," Yousef said on the April 2 episode.

Israeli far-right lawmaker Avi Maoz accused the Justice Ministry of attempting to normalize pedophilia within the country by altering Israel's age of consent laws.

Currently, the age of consent in Israel is 16 for all genders. However, that age of consent can go as low as 14, provided the other sexual partner was no more than three years older and both parties consented.

But according to Maoz, the Justice Ministry is trying to change this to an age gap of five years.

Who Was Ted Bundy?

Ted Bundy was a serial killer, rapist, and necrophiliac who admitted to killing 30 women in the 1970s, though some experts believe his actual victim count might be over 100. He was arrested for good in February 1978 and received three separate death sentences for the murders of two Chi Omega sorority members at Florida State University and a 12-year-old girl. Bundy's charming appearance helped him become somewhat of a celebrity during his trial, and his case has since inspired many novels and movies about serial killers. He was executed in January 1989 at age 42.

Description:
The HX-20 was the world's first production laptop computer. Since it was manufactured by Epson, it is not surprising that this machine included a built-in printer, even though that was unusual for a computer of this era, particularly one so small. The machine received much favorable publicity, but did not establish a place for Epson in the global computer market. Over time, Epson concluded that it had little unique ability to bring to this market, and scaled back to producing computers only for specialty markets.

How Jabir Ibn Hayyan Became the Father of Modern Chemistry

By Ayesha Mitchell July 27, 2022 in 18th Century

Last Updated: September 23, 2022

Most students of Chemistry may be unfamiliar with the name Jabir Ibn Hayyan not to talk of knowing him as the Father of modern chemistry. However, Ibn Hayyan was not just a chemist, he was also an alchemist, a polymath, an engineer and physicist, an astronomer and astrologer, a geographer, a philosopher, a physician, and a pharmacist.

Jabir Ibn Hayyan's greatest legacy was the use of experimentation in chemistry. The scientist is credited with using more than 20 types of now currently common chemical laboratory equipment, including the alembic (an apparatus, mostly made of glass, used for distilling in alchemy) and retort stand, as well as explaining other chemical processes, including crystallisation and distillation.

Jabir ibn Hayyan was an 8th century famous Arab scientists, philosopher, and pharmacist. Due to the immense contribution he had in the fields of alchemy and chemistry, he came to be known as the "Father of modern chemistry". He is often credited with being the author of a variety of books on subjects such as Shi'ite religious philosophy, alchemy, chemistry and astronomy. Generally called the Jabirian corpus, the works of Jabir had a tremendous influence on scholarship in not just the Islamic world but also all across Europe.

Jabir ibn Hayyan – Biography, Achievements and Discoveries

Jabir ibn Hayyan was an 8th century famous Arab scientists, philosopher, and pharmacist. Due to the immense contribution he had in the fields of alchemy and chemistry, he came to be known as the "Father of modern chemistry". He is often credited with being the author of a variety of books on subjects such as Shi'ite religious philosophy, alchemy, chemistry and astronomy. Generally called the Jabirian corpus, the works of Jabir had a tremendous influence on scholarship in not just the Islamic world but also all across Europe.

Jabir ibn Hayyan (Geber)

c. 721-c. 815

Arab Alchemist and Physician

Jabir ibn Hayyan, often known as Geber, is sometimes confused with a fourteenth-century Spanish mystic who also called himself Geber. In fact the latter deliberately took on the name of his distinguished predecessor, and thus is typically known as "the false Geber." As for the true Jabir, he is widely credited as the Father of Chemistry, the first alchemist to take his studies beyond superstition and into the realm of pure science. Among his many practical discoveries were arsenic, sulphur, and mercury.

Born Abu Musa Jabir ibn Hayyan, Jabir practiced alchemy and medicine professionally

By Ayomide Akinbode July 27, 2020 12 Min Read
Last Updated: September 23, 2023

Most students of Chemistry may be unfamiliar with the name Jabir ibn Hayyan not to talk of knowing him as the father of modern chemistry. However, ibn Hayyan was not just a chemist, he was also an alchemist; a polymath, an engineer and physicist, an astronomer and astrologer, a geographer, a philosopher, a physician, and a pharmacist.

Jabir ibn Hayyan's greatest legacy was the use of experimentation in chemistry. The scientist is credited with using more than 20 types of now currently common chemical laboratory equipment, including the alembic (an apparatus, mostly made of glass, used for distilling in alchemy) and retort stand, as well as explaining other chemical processes, including crystallisation and distillation.

Muhammad Yunus: History, Accomplishments, Criticism

Who Is Muhammad Yunus?

Muhammad Yunus is a professor of economics who was awarded the 2006 Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts in developing social and economic improvements through microcredit and microloan operations. Most notably, Yunus founded the Grameen Bank, which is known for loaning billions of dollars to impoverished people all over the world.[1]

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Muhammad Yunus is an economist, microfinancing pioneer, and founder of the grassroots Grameen Bank, known for loaning billions to impoverished people all over the world.
- While teaching economics in his native Bangladesh, Yunus became aware of the extreme poverty in the country and the refusal of banks to offer credit to poor people.

Muhammad Yunus won a Nobel Peace Prize for spreading the concept of microcredit—tiny loans to help poor people start businesses—via his Bangladesh-based Grameen Bank. He resigned as CEO of that organization last year, at age 70, due to pressure from the Bangladeshi government, but he remains active in Grameen ventures elsewhere in the world. Interviewed by Alison Beard

HBR: There was a lot of controversy over your retirement. It was reported that the Bangladeshi government, which owns 3% of Grameen Bank, forced your hand.

Yunus: Look, when I was 60, I submitted my resignation. "Why do you want to retire?" the board asked. "Is the work becoming too heavy on you? Do you want to do something else? If you're enjoying your work and we enjoy you, why don't you continue?" So I said OK. When I turned 70, I did the same thing. I said, "I think I should go." They said, "You cannot." Staff members all over the country were writing me letters saying, "Don't leave. This will bring a panic." So again I couldn't leave. But I wrote a letter by my own hand and took it to the finance minister and said, "I'm trying to retire as CEO, so why doesn't the government appoint

By Precious Gibson • June 2, 2024 11:00 am EST

Hunter Biden has had his fair share of drama. From the paternity suit filed by exotic dancer Lunden Roberts to his admitted history of drug abuse, Hunter has found himself in many controversial situations. However, his dating site scandal may have been among the most surprising.

ADVERTISEMENT

The Ashley Madison data breach of July 2015 exposed the names of millions of people who signed up for the website in hopes of having an extramarital affair. Several famous people were outed in the breach, including Biden. A profile registered to his full name, Robert Hunter Biden, and email address had been a member of Ashley Madison since 2014. The page also stated that he was actively seeking "anything goes," which alluded to him being open to any form of relationship. At the time, Biden was still married to his first wife Kathleen Buhle. While the evidence suggested that he was actively seeking a mistress, Biden maintained that there was a logical explanation for his presence on the platform.

Forget about wireless personal area networks, like Bluetooth, and wireless WANs with their respective network devices. Even without these wireless network topologies, there's enough to keep straight with the topic of WLAN. In particular, let's explore the differences between WLAN vs. Wi-Fi.

What is a WLAN and how does it work?

A WLAN is a local area network that uses radio technology instead of wiring to interconnect networked nodes.

To tackle the generic WLAN construct, we first need to review what local area network means. A LAN is generally a network contained within a building or campus, representing a geographical or functional construct usually connected via cabling of various sorts. Add a W to LAN, and it becomes a wireless LAN. Wireless technology either extends the LAN, replaces parts of it or both.

The terms WLAN and Wi-Fi are often linked and used interchangeably, but problems arise with that habit. A WLAN can be built on various wireless technologies, including Wi-Fi, cellular and Bluetooth, for example.

Hatem Zaghloul is the inventor of the well-known daily used 'Wi-Fi's WiMAX's and LTE's WOFDM'. He is renowned in the field and known among global companies in the field of telecommunications and technology. Hatem decided that he couldn't be stingy with the amount of information he has; so, he contributed to developing the internet service to increase its speed and using it on mobile phones. In 1989, he joined a Canadian telecom company after he emigrated from Egypt in 1983. There, he established his invention in cooperation with his companion Dr. Michael Fattouch. What a miraculous career he has.

History [edit]

WiLan was founded in 1992 by Hatim Zaghloul and Michel Fattouche to commercialize their Wideband Orthogonal Frequency Division Multiplexing (WOFDM) technology.[2] It was originally based in Calgary, Alberta, and the name was an acronym for "Wireless Local Area Network".[3] In March 1998, WiLAN had its initial public offering on the Alberta Stock Exchange at $2.50 per share (it later listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange).[3] WiLAN enjoyed significant success in the context of the tech bubble at the time, but its fortunes changed when the bubble collapsed. From October 1999 to March 2000, WiLan's share price increased from $10 to $94, but it fell back down to $12 by November 2000.[2] By February 2006, the price had fallen to 66 cents.[4]

In 2005, WiLAN reached a significant patent licensing deal with Cisco Systems.[5] In 2006 WiLAN divested its various technology product lines to refocus its business on licensing intellectual property and patent rights. As part of this change of strategy, it replaced its CEO, Bill Dunbar, with Jim Skippen, who served as President and CEO of WiLAN until July 2018.[6] Founder Hatim Zaghloul resigned from the board.[4] At the same time, the company moved its headquarters from Calgary to Ottawa.[7]

Ana Abulaban a[illegible] to The Former's Abusive Marriag[illegible]

Ana Marie Abulaban, [illegible]lia Miller, was originally from the Ph[illegible]a, Japan, where she met Ali Abulaban and [illegible]010s. Shortly after her boyfriend's discha[illegible]bsequent move back to America, Ana learned she was pregnant. As such, she moved to the States to Virginia, marrying Ali in 2017. Thus, the couple started their new life with their daughter, Amira.

After a few years of residence in Virginia with Ali's parents, the husband's career as an online content creator started taking off, prompting a move to San Diego at Ana's request. In the new city, the couple moved into the Spire San Diego, and Ana found herself surrounded by a number of her friends. Rayburn Cardenas Barron, known as Ray, was among these friends. He was born in Mexico in 1992 and moved to San Diego sometime later in his life. While the two sported a reliable friendship, their friends divulged in the 'TikTok Star Murders' documentary that Ray's crush on Ana was a known fact among their circles.

We, the family of Ana Marie Abulaban, are grateful for the outpouring of emotion and the generosity given as we navigate how to bring her mother from the Philippines so she may escort Ana Marie back to her childhood home. As we reel from the pain of this senseless tragedy, we are thankful for the kindness from both those that knew her and from compassionate strangers.

The funds raised will not only assist with the financial burden of this brutal chapter in her life but will also assist her daughter in her long journey forward toward healing. Losing a loved one is never easy. Losing a daughter, a sister, a mother in such a violent manner is unfathomable. Please believe us when we say the gestures displayed on this platform go a long way in helping as we continue to deal with

Meanwhile, Ana wanted out of her marriage to Ali. On October 21, 2021, she was at The Spire, where she and her daughter were living without her estranged husband. The same day, she had texted Ali, "I want you out of my life, once and for all." Afterward, her friend, Ray, visited the apartment. Eventually, Ali stormed into the apartment— seemingly out of the blue— with a gun and shot Ana and Ray. In total, Ali fired six shots that day and killed two people. Furthermore, he called his mother after the crime to tell her about it and sent her a picture of the crime scene as evidence. He made another phone call shortly after to the 911 emergency hotline and informed authorities that he had found Ana and Ray's dead bodies. Before the cops came, the perpetrator fled the crime scene.

After Ana Abulaban and Rayburn Cardenas Barron's deaths, the cops caught up to their shooter, Ali Abulaban, shortly afterward and arrested him.

Jewish Terrorists Assassinate U.N. Peacekeeper Count Folke Bernadotte

By Donald Neff

It was 47 years ago, Sept. 17, 1948, when Jewish terrorists assassinated Count Folke Bernadotte of Sweden as he sought to bring peace to the Middle East. His three-car convoy had been stopped at a small improvised roadblock in Jewish-controlled West Jerusalem

Early life [edit]

Davis grew up in Essex.[1] In 1981, his family moved to Toronto, Ontario.

Career [edit]

Davis in a pornographic shoot in 2011

After graduating from high school, he went to Los Angeles to shoot a Playgirl pictorial at 18 years of age. Soon thereafter, he moved to the US permanently. From 1984 to 1988, he was employed as a stripper for the "Chippendale" dancers. In January 1993, Davis began his career in adult films.[2]

In 2003, Davis was inducted into the AVN Hall of Fame.[3] In February 2006, he was inducted into the XRCO Hall of Fame.[4]

In his last years (2009-2012), he worked primarily for kink.com, serving villainous roles in BDSM scenes. In 2012, Mark Davis announced his retirement from pornography, ending a nearly 20-year career.[2] In 2016, Davis returned to pornography to shoot exclusively for kink.com.[5]

Davis performed in about 2,400 videos in his pornographic career.

Personal life [edit]

Davis was married to Kobe Tai and, later, Kitten. He served as best man for Jenna Jameson and Brad Armstrong's wedding in 1996. He was also a friend of Jon Dough, whose suicide affected him "big time."

Awards [edit]

- 1994 XRCO Award – Best Anal Sex Scene (Butt Banged Bicycle Babes)[6]
- 1996 AVN Award – Best Group Sex Scene, Video (World Anal Sex Tour)[7]

Outlaws Motorcycle Club - Wikipedia

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Not to be confused with outlaw motorcycle clubs in general.

The Outlaws Motorcycle Club, incorporated as the American Outlaws Association or its acronym, A.O.A., is an international outlaw motorcycle club. Founded in McCook, Illinois in 1935, the Outlaws MC is the oldest outlaw biker club in the world.[3] With 441 chapters located in 43 countries, and a membership of over 3,000, the club is also the third-largest in the world, behind the Hells Angels and the Bandidos.[5][6][7]

The club is designated an organized crime syndicate by numerous law enforcement and international intelligence agencies, including the United States Department of Justice, the Criminal Intelligence Service Canada, and Europol.[8][9][10]

A Star Historian Opens a New Chapter: Jewish Slaveowners

By Eric Herschthal
August 17, 2006

More than a decade ago, pioneering historian Natalie Zemon Davis was trudging through German archives, performing research for her book "Women on the Margins: Three Seventeenth-Century Lives." Published in 1995 and universally praised, the book was seen as vintage Davis: scholarly, but not impenetrable; groundbreaking, but not immoderate.

Although she was researching the lives of three 17th-century Europeans, Davis found a curious connection between one of her characters, Maria Sibylla Merian, and a Jewish physician in South America. Fixed on the project at hand, Davis "tucked the [Jewish doctor]" in the back of her mind, but filed away Merian's

Rabbi Jack Luxemburg, Rabbi Emeritus retired after 35 years as Temple Beth Ami's Senior Rabbi, in July 2016. Beginning in July of 1981 as the congregation's first full-time Rabbi, Rabbi Luxemburg has been part of the Temple Beth Ami community for more than half of its history. His contributions to all facets of the congregation's life have enabled the Temple to preserve its special character, while enjoying a period of significant growth in membership and in both the quality and diversity of Temple programs.

Rabbi Luxemburg is active in the community, having served on the Executive Committees of the Jewish Community Council, the Jewish Social Service Agency, the Charles E. Smith Day School, the Mid-Atlantic region of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the National Rabbinic Cabinet of the United Jewish Appeal, and the Washington Board of Rabbis. Rabbi Jack Luxemburg, Rabbi Emeritus retired after 35 years as Temple Beth Ami's Senior Rabbi, in July 2010. Beginning in July of 1981 as the congregation's first full-time Rabbi, Rabbi Luxemburg has been part of the Temple Beth Ami community for more than half of its history. His contributions to all facets of the congregation's life have enabled the Temple to preserve its special character, while enjoying a period of significant growth in membership and in both the quality and diversity of Temple programs.

Rabbi Luxemburg is active in the community, having served on the Executive Committees of the Jewish Community Council, the Jewish Social Service Agency, the Charles E. Elk County podiatrist charged for allegedly overprescribing opioids

ST. MARYS — An Elk County podiatrist has been charged with several felonies after he was accused of overprescribing opioid-based medications to patients for over a year.

David Gregory Sanderson, 59, of St. Marys, is charged with 15 felony counts of "Admin Etc Of Cont Subst By Pract" — the administration, dispensing, delivery, gift or prescription of any controlled substance by any practitioner or professional assistant under the practitioner's direction and supervision, unless done in good faith, within the scope of the patient relationship or in accordance with treatment principals — according to a criminal complaint filed by the Pennsylvania Office of Attorney General at Magisterial District Judge Mark Jacob's office July 21.

Police: convicted child rapist found working with kids in North Brookfield

NORTH BROOKFIELD, Mass. — A convicted child rapist from Barre was found working with children at a martial arts studio in North Brookfield and police were never notified.

"We're talking children. We're talking classes that are going on and this is something that is very alarming to me," said Chief Mark Smith with North Brookfield police.

A resident, who's a retired police officer, recognized 60-year-old David Sanderson from the sex offender registry and alerted police.

By Hannah Natanson, The Washington Post

A window in the basement of Isaac Franklin and John Armfield's slaveholding "pen" in Alexandria, Va. The two men, largely forgotten today, were the most successful - and cruelest - domestic slave traders in American history. (Washington Post photo by Ricky Carioti)

The two most ruthless domestic slave traders in America had a secret language for their business.

Slave trading was a "game." The men, Isaac Franklin and John Armfield, were daring "pirates" or "one-eyed men," a euphemism for their penises. The women they bought and sold were "fancy maids," a term signifying youth, beauty and potential for sexual exploitation - by buyers or the traders themselves.

Rapes happened often.

"The payoff for Adelaide audiences will be not only the opera, directed by Neil Armfield and choreographed by Denni Sayers, who is coming to Adelaide from London for the Adelaide Festival centrepiece production, but also a Nussbaum Cohen solo recital at Adelaide Town Hall during the festival's second week... "This young performer has just turned heads, particularly across America," says Armfield, who is also the Adelaide Festival's co-Artistic Director, of Nussbaum Cohen. "He's right on the cusp of a very great career and he will be one of those voices, one of those performers, that you will remember for the rest of your lives."... "I'm very politically interested and engaged because that was my original career path," Aryeh says, pinpointing his first adult vote, for Barack Obama's re-election in 2012, as part of his political awakening... "To me it's just been so sad to see that [Donald] Trump and his enablers have taken advantage of the divisions that existed in the country... whipping up all this anger and resentment and xenophobia and all these horrible forces that as a Jew and a grandson of Holocaust survivors, it's a playbook that I'm very familiar with." "It's been just really sad to see. I'm hopeful that Biden can preside over taking us forward, but there's no question it's going to continue to be a hard time for America.""

Miller's script makes several references to Biff's budding football career.

Direction from Neil Armfield (who worked with Lapaglia on the film Holding the Man) director Theresa Borg is exemplary.

For a play that is all but three hours, there is no letdown. With few props, the action mc pace.

Its emotional resonance endures, all the more so given the current state of the world an it is for many to make ends meet.

ALABAMA PROFESSOR LECTURES ON LEGACY OF SLAVE-TRADER JOHN ARMFIELD

The Sewanee Project on Slavery, Race, and Reconciliation recently brought Dr. Joshua Rothman, a professor of history at the University of Alabama and one of the foremost scholars on the domestic slave trade in the United States, to lecture on the life and historical significance of John Armfield. The lecture, titled, "'He has been for many years engaged in the traffic of human flesh': John Armfield and America's Domestic Slave Trade" explored Armfield's career and his connections with the University of the South.

Director of the Project and professor of history Woody Register (C'80) opened the event by saying that Rothman "is making history here" at Sewanee, taking special note of the fact that Rothman's lecture was the first public event to acknowledge and consider Armfield's legacy with the University.

"I've been teaching at Sewanee for many years, and for many of those many years, I've been telling my students about John Armfield," Register said. "So to me this history has been one that any student of Sewanee should or even must know. I feel very strongly about that."

Armfield was the operator of the largest slave trading firm in the United States, and he was within just a few weeks, then two more necessary inferences could be added to the six facts above...

- 7. Since Isaac was 37 at his mother's death, he was 37 when Rebekah was born.
- 8. Since Isaac was 40 when he married Rebekah, Rebekah would be 3 when the marriage took place (because 40-37=3)

But these last two inferences are spurious, because they are based not on what the scripture says in Genesis 22 and 23, but rather what is said in non-biblical tradition.

and is in consequence regarded as a thirteenfold commandment, which must under all circumstances be observed. Hence the necessity for the twofold instruction.

MISHNA: One may perform everything necessary for circumcision on the Sabbath, as circumcising, tearing open, sucking out the blood, applying a plaster or caraway seed. If the latter had not been ground before the Sabbath, one may masticate it with the teeth and then apply it. If one had not mixed wine with oil before the Sabbath, he may apply each separately. One must not prepare an actual bandage (on the Sabbath), but may apply an old piece of linen; and if such had not been prepared before the Sabbath, the circumciser may bring it with him tied around his finger and even from another court (yard).

The Master said in a baraita: If his children and the members of his household were minors, even though they are unclothed, it is permitted to recite Shema even without a garment separating between them. The Gemara asks: Until what age is one still considered a minor? Rav Ḥisda said: A girl until she is three years and one day old, and a boy until he is nine years and one day old, for these are the ages from which a sexual act in which they participate is considered a sexual act.

to finish the operation before night, but persisted in performing it. If in consequence he left excrescences which make the circumcision invalid, he simply made a wound without performing a commandment, and thus he becomes amenable to Karath."

"Sucking out the blood." R. Papa said: "The circumciser who does not suck out the wound places the child in danger, and should be discharged from office." Is this not self-evident?

* The Hebrew word "Veanvehu" is interpreted by the Talmud to signify "and I will beautify him," while in the translation of the Bible, by I. Leeser, it is translated, "I will sing his praise," and the reference made to the verse by the Talmud accepts the term in its Talmudical sense.

† This will be explained in the Tract Menachoth.

The Contemporary Torah, JPS, 2006

19 וְאֵלֶּה תּוֹלְדֹת יִצְחָק בֶּן־אַבְרָהָם אַבְרָהָם הוֹלִיד אֶת־יִצְחָק׃

This is the story of Isaac, son of Abraham. Abraham begot Isaac.

20 וַיְהִי יִצְחָק בֶּן־אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה בְּקַחְתּוֹ אֶת־רִבְקָה בַּת־בְּתוּאֵל הָאֲרַמִּי מִפַּדַּן אֲרָם אֲחוֹת לָבָן הָאֲרַמִּי לוֹ לְאִשָּׁה׃

Isaac was forty years old when he took to wife Rebekah, daughter of Bethuel the Aramean of Paddan-aram, sister of Laban the Aramean.

21 וַיֶּעְתַּר יִצְחָק לַיהוָה לְנֹכַח אִשְׁתּוֹ כִּי עֲקָרָה הִוא וַיֵּעָתֶר לוֹ יְהוָה וַתַּהַר רִבְקָה אִשְׁתּוֹ׃

Commentary

בן ארבעים שנה FORTY YEARS OLD — For when Abraham came from Mount Moriah he received the news that Rebecca was born (22:20). Isaac was then thirty-seven years old, because at that time Sarah died and from the birth of Isaac until the Binding — when Sarah died — there were 37 years since she was 90 years old when Isaac was born and 127 when she died, as it is said, (23:1) "And the life of Sarah was [one hundred and twenty seven years]" — thus Isaac was then 37 years old. At that period Rebecca was born and he waited until she was fit for marriage — 3 years — and then married her (Seder Olam).

The age at which a person is deemed legally competent to consent to sexual activity varies widely around the world - and even within Europe.

Middle East: Like parts of North Africa, most Middle Eastern countries do not have a set age of consent but require that the couple are married. This includes Afghanistan, Iran, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, the UAE and Yemen. In many countries where sex outside of marriage is illegal, the minimum age of marriage is lower for women than for men. It is common for courts to grant permission for girls to marry below the legal age. In Iran in

What is the Bahrain Age of Consent?

The Age of Consent in Bahrain is 21 years old. The age of consent is the minimum age at which an individual is considered legally old enough to consent to participation in sexual activity. Individuals aged 20 or younger in Bahrain are not legally able to consent to sexual activity, and such activity may result in prosecution for statutory rape or the equivalent local law.

Bahrain statutory rape law is violated when an individual has consensual sexual contact with a person under age 21.

Bahrain does not have a close-in-age exemption. Close in age exemptions, commonly known as "Romeo and Juliet laws" in the United States, are put in place to prevent the prosecution of individuals who engage in consensual sexual activity when both participants are significantly close in age to each other, and one or both partners are below the age of consent.

Because there is no close-in-age exemption in Bahrain, it is possible for two individuals both under the age of 21 who willingly engage in intercourse to both be prosecuted for statutory rape, although this is rare. Similarly, no protections are reserved for sexual relations in which one participant is a 20 year old and the second is a 21 or 22 year old.

Ages of consent in Europe

The age of consent varies by jurisdiction across Europe. The ages of consent – hereby meaning the age from which one is deemed able to consent to having sex with anyone else of consenting age or above – are between 14 and 18. The vast majority of countries set their ages in the range of 14 to 16; only four countries, Cyprus (17), Ireland (17), Turkey (18), and the Vatican City (18), set an age of consent higher than 16.

The highlighted age is that from which a young person can lawfully engage in a non-commercial sexual act with an older person, regardless of their age difference. If a participant in a sexual act is under 18 but above the age of consent then sexual acts with another person who is at or over the age of consent may still be illegal if the older participant is in a position of authority over the younger person. For example, a teacher and their student or someone in the police. Commercial sex/prostitution requires all those involved to be 18 or older. Sexual acts may not be legal if those engaging are blood relatives, regardless of age, though the legality of incest varies between European countries.

Some countries have close-in-age exceptions, allowing partners close in age of whom one or both may be below the standard unrestricted age of consent to be able to both legally consent to engage in sexual acts with each other. The lowest minimum age of consent for a close-in-age exception to apply in Europe is 12 (in Hungary), providing their older sexual partner is under 18.[1]

Ā'ishah (born 614, Mecca, Arabia [now in Saudi Arabia]—died July 678, Medina) was the third wife of the Prophet Muhammad (the founder of Islam), who played a role of some political importance after the Prophet's death.

All Muhammad's marriages had political motivations, and in this case the intention seems to have been to cement ties with Ā'ishah's father, Abū Bakr, who was one of Muhammad's most important supporters. Ā'ishah's physical charms, intelligence, and wit, together with the genuine warmth of their relationship, secured her a place in his affections that was not lessened by his subsequent marriages. It is said that in 627 she accompanied the Prophet on an expedition but became separated from the group. When she was later escorted back to Medina by a man who had found her in the desert, Muhammad's enemies claimed that she had been unfaithful. A subsequent Qur'ānic revelation asserted her innocence; the Qur'ān furthermore criticized and stipulated punishment for those who slander virtuous women.

Ā'ishah had no important influence on her husband's political or religious policies while he lived, but he is said to have recognized her knowledge of Islam by counseling his Companions to "take half your knowledge from Humayra," Humayra ("Little Red One") being his term of endearment for her.

When Muhammad died in 632, Ā'ishah was left a childless widow of about 18, although some sources suggest she was older. She remained politically inactive until the time of 'Uthmān (644–656, the third caliph, or leader of the Islamic community), during whose reign she played an important role in fomenting opposition that led to his murder in 656. She led an army against his successor, 'Alī, when he refused to bring 'Uthmān's murderers to justice, but she was defeated in the Battle of the Camel. The engagement derived its name from the fierce fighting that centred around the camel upon which Ā'ishah was mounted. Afterward she was allowed to return to Medina. Investigation into child exploitation on Meta platforms leads to arrests of three men

By Clare Duffy, CNN

An investigation into safety risks for children on Meta's platforms led to the arrests of three men accused of attempting to sexually abuse children. Justin Sullivan/Getty Images

New York (CNN) — An investigation by the New Mexico Attorney General into the potential dangers of Meta's platforms has resulted in the arrests of three men charged with attempted sexual abuse of children.

The arrests come after a months-long investigation by the attorney general's office into the risks of sexual exploitation of children on Facebook and Instagram. That investigation also formed the basis of a lawsuit against Meta, filed in December, accusing the tech giant of creating a "breeding ground" for child predators.

Lindbergh coach's sex crime confession caught on recording

As the pair spent more time together after practice, on out-of-town team trips, the rumors spread.

UPDATE: The Missouri Department of Secondary and Elementary Education is responding to a 5 On Your Side Cover Story about a former Lindbergh cross country coach caught on a secret recording confessing to sex crimes against a student.

That confession came nearly twenty years after former coach Jonny Wilder had sexual contact with Emilie Morris who was 16 at the time.

Because of the recording, Wilder was arrested and charged but when Emilie passed away before he went to trial the case was dropped.

Wilder resigned from Lindbergh after the district said police turned over "new evidence" at the tribunal. But he was able to keep his state teaching license.

A Lindbergh spokesperson said the decision is the responsibility of the state, and a state official said because Wilder's license was not revoked because he was never convicted.

However, 5 On Your Side has found a state statute that says a teacher can be disciplined or a certificate "not renewed" if there is "evidence of incompetence, immorality, or neglect of duty by the certificate holder."

The Jewish Kid From New Jersey Who Became A Radical Islamist

Yousef al-Khattab helped change the way young Muslims were radicalized by spewing extreme Islamist propaganda on a YouTube channel.

Yousef al-Khattab helped found Revolution Muslim, a website that published extreme Islamist propaganda. Al-Khattab, who was born Joseph Cohen and was raised in a Jewish family in New Jersey, faces sentencing Friday after pleading guilty to terrorism charges.

Now al-Khattab, who was born Joseph Leonard Cohen and was brought up in New Jersey and in Brooklyn in a Jewish home, tells NPR he made a big mistake and describes himself as a "failure." He's scheduled to appear in a federal court in Alexandria, Va., on Friday to be sentenced on terrorism charges.

The case is significant because al-Khattab, now in his mid-40s, is one of the founders of a radical Islamist group called Revolution Muslim, which became a gateway for young jihadists in the U.S. looking to join violent Islamist groups overseas.

Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi Was A Mossad Agent? Israel-ISIS 'Links' Resurface After Moscow Terrorist Attack | Fact Check

The deadly terrorist strike at Moscow's Crocus City Hall in which 143 were killed sparked a massive outrage online. As people were mourning and praying for the victims of the attack claimed by the Islamic State (also known as ISIS), several social media posts claimed that Israel's purported involvement in the creation and further funding of the captured militants. The most visible and amplified claim was that the ISIS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi was a 'Jewish Mossad agent' named 'Elliot Shimon' or 'Simon Elliot', among others.

Mohammed Yusuf (29 January 1970 – 30 July 2009), also known as Ustaz Mohammed Yusuf, was a Nigerian terrorist who founded the Islamist militant group Boko Haram in 2002. He was its leader until he was killed during the 2009 Boko Haram uprising.[1]

Born in Girgi village, in Jakusko, present-day Yobe State, Nigeria, Yusuf received a University education.[2] Later he studied more of Islam and became a Salafi.[3]

Education and beliefs

[edit]

According to scholar Paul Lubeck of the University of California at Santa Cruz, as a young man Yusuf was instructed in Shiasm and associated with Salafism and the teachings of Ibn Taymiyyah.[4] He had the equivalent of a graduate education, according to Nigerian academic Hussain Zakaria. Yusuf was never as proficient in English as was reported. He believed in the strict application of Islamic law, which represented his ideal of justice according to the teachings of the Islamic prophet, Muhammad. Boko Haram hitmen would murder members of other Muslim sects like the Salafist Izala and the Sufi Tidjaniyya and Qadiriya fraternities.[5] In a 2009 BBC interview, Yusuf stated his belief that the concept of a spherical Earth is contrary to Islamic teaching and should be rejected. He also rejected Darwinian evolution, and the concept of the condensation cycle that produces rain.[6] In the interview he said:

> There are prominent Islamic preachers who have seen and understood that the present Western-style education is mixed with issues that run contrary to our beliefs in Islam, he said.
> Like rain. We believe it is a creation of God rather than an evaporation caused by the sun that condenses and becomes rain.
> Like saying the world is a sphere. If it runs contrary to the teachings of Allah, we reject it. We also reject the theory of Darwinism.

Son of Hamas founder blasts student supporters in US: 'Those pro-Palestine need to go to a mental asylum'

The son of one of the founders of Hamas has blasted the terror group's student supporters in the United States, accusing them of participating in Hamas' brutal crimes and declaring they "need to go to a mental asylum."

Mosab Hassan Yousef, the son of Hamas founder Sheikh Hassan Yousef, made the remarks as he appeared on "Dr. Phil Primetime" last week to debate two anti-Israel student activists from the University of Michigan.

"It's very disappointing to see Americans supporting Hamas and thinking that Hamas is a cool thing, while Hamas does not respect any of those followers," Yousef said on the April 2 episode.

Description:
The HX-20 was the world's first production laptop computer. Since it was manufactured by Epson, it is not surprising that this machine included a built-in printer, even though that was unusual for a computer of this era, particularly one so small. The machine received much favorable publicity, but did not establish a place for Epson in the global computer market. Over time, Epson concluded that it had little unique ability to bring to this market, and scaled back to producing computers only for specialty markets.

Arab Alchemist and Physician

Jabir ibn Hayyan, often known as Geber, is sometimes confused with a fourteenth-century Spanish mystic who also called himself Geber. In fact the latter deliberately took on the name of his distinguished predecessor, and thus is typically known as "the false Geber." As for the true Jabir, he is widely credited as the Father of Chemistry, the first alchemist to take his studies beyond superstition and into the realm of pure science. Among his many practical discoveries were arsenic, sulphur, and mercury.

Born Abu Musa Jabir ibn Hayyan, Jabir practiced alchemy and medicine professionally in the town of Kufa, now in Iraq, beginning

By Ayomide Akinbode | July 27, 2020 | 12 Min Read
Last Updated: September 23, 2023

Most students of Chemistry may be unfamiliar with the name Jabir ibn Hayyan not to talk of knowing him as the father of modern chemistry. However, ibn Hayyan was not just a chemist, he was also an alchemist; a polymath, an engineer and physicist, an astronomer and astrologer, a geographer, a philosopher, a physician, and a pharmacist.

Jabir ibn Hayyan's greatest legacy was the use of experimentation in chemistry. The scientist is credited with using more than 20 types of now currently common chemical laboratory equipment, including the alembic (an apparatus, mostly made of glass, used for distilling in alchemy) and retort stand, as well as explaining other chemical processes, including crystallisation and distillation.

Jabir ibn Hayyan – Biography, Achievements and Discoveries

Jabir ibn Hayyan was an 8th century famous Arab scientists, philosopher, and pharmacist. Due to the immense contribution he had in the fields of alchemy and chemistry, he came to be known as the "Father of modern chemistry". He is often credited with being the author of a variety of books on subjects such as Shi'ite religious philosophy, alchemy, chemistry and astronomy. Generally called the Jabirian corpus, the works of Jabir had a tremendous influence on scholarship in not just the Islamic world but also all across Europe.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Muhammad Yunus is an economist, microfinancing pioneer, and founder of the grassroots Grameen Bank, known for loaning millions to impoverished people all over the world.
- While teaching economics in his native Bangladesh, Yunus became aware of the extreme poverty in the country and the refusal of banks to offer credit to poor people.

KBR: There was a lot of controversy over your retirement. It was reported that the Bangladeshi government, which owns 3% of Grameen Bank, forced your hand.

Yunus: Look, when I was 60, I submitted my resignation. "Why do you want to retire?" the board asked. "Is the work becoming too heavy on you? Do you want to do something else? If you're swinging your work and we enjoy you, why don't you continue?" So I said OK. When it neared 70, I did the same thing. I said, "I think I should go." They said, "You cannot." Staff members all over the country were working and crying saying, "Don't leave. They will bring a pirate." So again I couldn't leave. But I wrote a letter to my wife friend and took it to the Finance Minister and said, "I'm trying to retire as CEO, or what name? The government appointed

By Precious Gibson June 5, 2024 11:08 am EDT

Hunter Biden has had his fair share of drama. From the paternity suit filed by music dancer Lunden Roberts to his admitted history of drug abuse, Hunter has found himself in many controversial situations. However, his dating site scandal may have been among the more surprising.

The Ashley Madison data breach of July 2015 exposed the names of millions of people who signed up for the website in hopes of having an extramarital affair. Several famous people were outed in the breach, including Biden. A profile registered to his full name, Robert Hunter Biden, and email address had been a member of Ashley Madison since 2014. The page also stated that he was actively seeking "anything goes," which alluded to him being open to any form of relationship. At the time, Biden was still married to his first wife Kathleen Buhle. While the evidence suggested that he was actively seeking a mistress, Biden maintained that there was a logical explanation for his presence on the platform.

Details About Hunter Biden's Dating Site Scandal

By Precious Gibson • June 2, 2024 11:00 am EST

Hunter Biden has had his fair share of drama. From the paternity suit filed by exotic dancer Lunden Roberts to his admitted history of drug abuse, Hunter has found himself in many controversial situations. However, his dating site scandal may have been among the most surprising.

The Ashley Madison data breach of July 2015 exposed the names of millions of people who signed up for the website in hopes of having an extramarital affair. Several famous people were outed in the breach, including Biden. A profile registered to his full name, Robert Hunter Biden, and email address had been a member of Ashley Madison since 2014. The page also stated that he was actively seeking "anything goes," which alluded to him being open to any form of relationship. At the time, Biden was still married to his first wife Kathleen Buhle. While the evidence suggested that he was actively seeking a mistress, Biden maintained that there was a logical explanation for his presence on the platform.

In summer 2015 a hacking team released the details of the 35 million members of adulterous dating site Ashley Madison in one of the biggest data breaches ever seen.

The result was, what divorce lawyers were calling 'Christmas in September', after the leak saw hundreds of relationships torn apart.

Egyptian Scientist Hatem Zaghloul Invented Technology Behind Wi-Fi

Egyptian-Canadian scientist Hatem Zaghloul claims to have co-invented the fundamental technology for what we now cannot live without, the Wi-Fi.

Forget about wireless personal area networks, like Bluetooth, and wireless WANs with their respective network devices. Even without these wireless network topologies, there's enough to keep straight with the topic of WLAN. In particular, let's explore the differences between WLAN vs. Wi-Fi.

What is a WLAN and how does it work?

A WLAN is a local area network that uses radio technology instead of wiring to interconnect networked nodes.

To tackle the generic WLAN construct, we first need to review what local area network means. A LAN is generally a network contained within a building or campus, representing a geographical or functional construct usually connected via cabling of various sorts. Add a W to LAN, and it becomes a wireless LAN. Wireless technology either extends the LAN, replaces parts of it or both.

The terms WLAN and Wi-Fi are often linked and used interchangeably, but problems arise with that habit. A WLAN can be built on various wireless technologies, including Wi-Fi, cellular and Bluetooth, for example.

History [edit]

In 1992, Hatim Zaghloul and Michel Fattouche co-founded WiLAN[2] after they developed together the Wideband Orthogonal Frequency Division Multiplexing (WOFDM),[3][non-primary source needed] and Multi-code Direct-sequence Spread Spectrum (MCDSSS).[4][non-primary source needed] Through WiLAN's efforts, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has allowed OFDM technology over the 2.4 GHz unlicensed ISM band for the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE) 802.11 standards. MC-DSSS (MultiCode-Direct-sequence Spread Spectrum) is central to high speed CDMA applications, the main technology currently used by many cellphone networks.

In March 1998, WiLAN had its initial public offering.[5]

In November 1999, WiLAN and Philips invited companies to attend a meeting to form an alliance to promote the OFDM technology and its applications.[6] WiLAN was a founding member of the WiMAX Forum together with Ensemble, CossSpan, Harris, and Nokia.

From its founding in 1992 to 2000, WiLAN had success as interest and investment in the tech industry grew. However, in 2000, when the world's first tech bubble collapsed,

Hatim Zaghloul is the inventor of the well-known daily-used Wi-FI's WiMAX's and LTE's WOFDM! He is renowned in the field and known among global companies in the field of telecommunications and technology. Hatim decided that he couldn't be stingy with the amount of information he has; so, he contributed to developing the Internet service to increase its speed and using it on mobile phones. In 1989, he joined a Canadian telecom company after he emigrated from Egypt in 1983. There, he established his invention in cooperation with his companion Dr. Micheal Fattoush. What a miraculous career he has.

Ana Abulaban and Ray Barron Fell Victim to The Former's Abusive Marriage

Ana Marie Abulaban, born in June 1993 to Ron and Amelia Miller, was originally from the Philippines and grew up in Okinawa, Japan, where she met Ali Abulaban and started dating him in the early 2000s. Shortly after her boyfriend's discharge from the U.S. Air Force and subsequent move back to America, Ana learned she was pregnant. As such, she moved to the States to Virginia, marrying Ali in 2017. Thus, the couple started their new life with their daughter, Amira.

After a few years of residence in Virginia with Ali's parents, the husband's career as an online content creator started taking off, prompting a move to San Diego at Ana's request. In the new city, the couple moved into the Spire San Diego, and Ana found herself surrounded by a number of her friends. Raeburn Cardenas Barron, known as Ray, was among these friends. He was

We, the family of Ana Marie Abulaban, are grateful for the outpouring of emotion and the generosity given as we navigate how to bring her mother from the Philippines so she may escort Ana Marie back to her childhood home. As we mourn from the pain of this senseless tragedy, we are thankful for the kindness from both those that knew her and from compassionate strangers.

The funds raised will not only assist with the financial burden of this brutal chapter in her life but will also assist her daughter in her long journey forward toward healing. Losing a loved one is never easy. Losing a daughter, a sister, a mother in such a violent manner is unfathomable. Meanwhile, Ana wanted out of her marriage to Ali. On October 10, 2021, she was at The Spire, where she and her daughter were living without her estranged husband. The same day, she had texted Ali, "I want you out of my life, once and for all." Afterward, her friend, Ray, visited the apartment. Eventually, Ali stormed into the apartment — seemingly out of the blue — with a gun and shot Ana and Ray. In total, Ali fired six shots that day and killed two people. Furthermore, he called his mother after the crime to tell her about it and sent her a picture of the crime scene as evidence. He made another phone call shortly after to the 911 emergency hotline and informed authorities that he had found Ana and Ray's dead bodies. Before the cops came, the perpetrator fled the crime scene.

So Are the Neanderthals Still Jews?

And other revelations culled from history's big secrets.

BY CHARLES PAUL FREUND
AUG 02, 1997 • 3:30 AM

You read the press reports in July about the DNA of Neanderthals, and you quickly grasped how the new findings suggest that this branch of humanoids is much more distantly related to modern Homo sapiens than you may have believed–they are not even direct human ancestors. Now you must apply these findings, and examine their implications for the world around you. Specifically, you must weigh their effect on certain theories in circulation, among them that Neanderthals still walk–or lumber–among us, and indeed that they have maintained their cohesion through the ages and still constitute a group apart. And, most importantly, that this group of living, lumbering Neanderthals is the Jews.

Jewish genetic diseases are a group of rare autosomal recessive disorders that are far more prevalent among people with Jewish ancestry than in the general population. Autosomal recessive diseases are transmitted genetically by carrier parents who themselves do not suffer from the disorder but carry the genes that can cause the disease. When two carriers of a genetic mutation associated with a particular disorder have children together, each of their offspring has a one in four chance of developing the disease and a 50 percent chance of becoming carriers themselves.

As many as one in three Ashkenazi Jews are estimated to be carriers for one of about 19 genetic diseases. In all, Jews have higher carrier rates for more than 40 genetic diseases. These include better-known disorders such as Scientists examining the evolutionary history recorded within our DNA are uncovering the global human story in greater detail. Watch the film to discover what DNA analyses taught six well-known figures, Maggie Aderin-Pocock, Clive Anderson, Bill Bailey, Kevin Fong, Alice Roberts and Sian Williams about their genetic ancestry.

So Are the Neanderthals Still Jews?

And other revelations culled from history's big secrets.

BY CHARLES PAUL FREUND

You read the press reports in July about the DNA of Neanderthals, and you quickly grasped how the new findings suggest that this branch of humanoids is much more distantly related to modern Homo sapiens than you may have believed—they are not even direct human ancestors. Now you must apply these findings, and examine their implications for the world around you. Specifically, you must weigh their effect on certain theories in circulation, among them that Neanderthals still walk—or lumber—among us, and indeed that they have maintained their cohesion through the ages and still constitute a group apart. And, most importantly, that this group of living, lumbering Neanderthals is the Jews.

Guide to Jewish Genetic Diseases

What Are Jewish Genetic Diseases?

As many as 1 in 3 Ashkenazi Jews are estimated to be carriers for one of about 19 genetic diseases.

Jewish genetic diseases are a group of rare autosomal recessive disorders that are far more prevalent among people with Jewish ancestry than in the general population. Autosomal recessive diseases are transmitted genetically by carrier parents who themselves do not suffer from the disorder but carry the genes that can cause the disease. When two carriers of a genetic mutation associated with a particular disorder have children together, each of their offspring has a one in four chance of developing the disease and a 50 percent chance of becoming carriers themselves.

As many as one in three Ashkenazi Jews are estimated to be carriers for one of about 19 genetic diseases. In all, Jews have higher carrier rates for more than 40 genetic diseases. These include better-known disorders such as

ISTANBUL, Nov 2 (Reuters) - Turkey said on Thursday it had captured Hakan Ayik, a top fugitive wanted in Australia for drug smuggling, and 36 others involved in an international organised crime ring that has also been pursued by U.S. and New Zealand authorities.

Interior Minister Ali Yerlikaya said the detentions in Istanbul targeted the armed motorcycle gang Comanchero that he said was allegedly involved in drug trafficking, manslaughter, looting and money laundering globally.

Joseph Hakan Ayik, also known as Hakan Reis (born 31 January 1979) is a Turkish-Australian[1] drug trafficker. He has an estimated net worth of 1.2 billion dollars, and was described in June 2021 as "Australia's most wanted man".[2][3]

Early life [edit]

Ayik was born in Australia to parents from Turkey.[4] His father died when he was young, with many family members being drug users.[5] His cousin and brother later ended up in prison.[5] He studied at James Cook Boys Technology High School in Kogarah, New South Wales.[5] A classmate of Ayik was Duax Ngakuru, the future boss of the Comanchero gang.[6]

Criminal career [edit]

In the 2000s, Ayik was running a large criminal empire. He held ownership of karaoke bars and brothels in Sydney and Canberra. He reportedly travelled to Dubai, India and Hong Kong in luxury.[5] His activities were involved with the Comanchero Motorcycle Club.[5] He is also said to have worked with corrupt customs officials and jail officers in Australia and Tonga.[5] The drug importations he engaged in were estimated to be valued in the hundreds of millions of dollars.[5] This business was organised in co-

William George "Jock" Ross (born 5 August 1943) is a Scottish-born Australian outlaw biker, best known as the founder and the "Supreme Commander" of the Comanchero Motorcycle Club and for his involvement in the Milperra massacre of 1984. Ross was sentenced to life imprisonment with Judge Roden childing him as one of the men most responsible for the shoot-out at the Viking Tavern.

Jock Ross
Born	William George Ross 5 August 1943 (age 80) Glasgow, Scotland
Occupation(s)	Outlaw biker, soldier, fireman
Years active	1968-2002
Known for	Founder of the Comancheros
Successor	Mick Hawi
Allegiance	Comanchero MC
Conviction(s)	Murder (1986), reduced to manslaughter upon appeal (1992)
Criminal penalty	Life imprisonment; paroled in 1989

Youth [edit]

Ross was born in Glasgow, Scotland into a working-class family.[1] Ross grew up in the Gorbals neighbourhood of Glasgow, where his father worked as a lorry (truck) driver.[2] Ross stated of his youth: "In the old Glasgow days you never backed off, that's how you survived. The Gorbals was tough and you had to be tough too."[2] He served in the British Army in the Royal Engineers.[1] Ross joined the British Army at the age of 17 and served for 7 years.[3] As an engineer, he was involved in clearing minefields left over from the Second World War in Libya as well as laying minefields in the Aden Protectorate (modern Yemen) and Hong Kong.[1] After his honourable discharge, he settled in Australia, making his home in New South Wales.[1] In 1966, he settled in a coastal flat and then moved to Point Clare.[4] Ross-who was known to his friends as "Jock" instead of William-worked variously as a lorry driver and as an apprentice blacksmith.[4]

The Comancheros [edit]

The "Supreme Commander" [edit]

Ross befriended a number of Australian veterans of the Vietnam War, saying in a 2019 interview: "I came out of the army, came here. People come out of the army, especially soldiers coming back from Vietnam back in the '70s, the late '70s … they came, and they were treated like lepers … not real good. Me, as an ex-soldier, I empathised with them".[1] Ross founded Comanchero Motorcycle Club in 1968 with the name being taken from a 1961 John Wayne Western film The Comancheros that Ross adored.[5][6] The Australian journalists Lindsay Simpson and Sandra Harvey described Ross as a natural "leader of men", an extremely charismatic man whose machismo and toughness inspired much devotion from other men.[7] In 1971, Ross purchased a property along the then rural Mangrove Mountain Road for $800 that became his home.[7] Settling with Ross in his caravan were his first wife Sandy and their infant daughter Deidre.[7] Ross found the sunny New South Wales countryside to be a refreshing change from the decaying industrial neighbourhoods of the

A Mexican druglord, described as El Chapo's successor, has taken violence in the country to the next level.

Cartel boss Nemesio Cervantes has allegedly ordered the murder of pregnant women and babies as part of the ongoing drug wars in Mexico.

Cervantes, also known as 'El Mencho', is now top of the US's 'most wanted' list and has a bounty of £7.9million on his head.

As gang violence spirals out of control in Mexico, the country's politicians have warned that attacks against women are at 'pandemic levels'.

Angelo Pandeli.

An exclusive story by The Age, The Sydney Morning Herald and 60 Minutes aired last night, revealing how some of Australia's most dangerous crime bosses have organised themselves into a cartel earning an estimated $1.5 billion a year by smuggling drugs past the nation's border with the help of corrupt government officials and border insiders.

This intel comes from the Australian Criminal Intelligence Commission which says nine Australian men, drawn mostly from Australian bikie gangs and Middle Eastern crime syndicates, make up what the agency has named the "Aussie cartel."

The CEO of the Commission, Michael Phelan, told the media outlets that the cartel's members are "the baddest of the bad" and estimated they were responsible for "about one-third of the drug importations into our country."

Ayik-becher is a method of alphabetic transformation wherein the 27 letters of the full alef-bet (including the five letters with a final form (mem, nun, tzadik, pei, and chaf [refered to as mantzepach, for short]) are initially divided into three equal groups of nine letters, which are then tripled together in "direct order".

The first letter in each group–alef, yud, and kuf (whose numerical values are 1, 10 and 100); the second in each group–bet, kaf, and reish (whose numerical values are 2, 20 and 200); etc.

The transformation pattern is one of "revolution" within each triplet, i.e. alef transforms into yud which transforms into kuf which transforms into alef (which can now be considered as equaling 1000), etc. The name ayik-becher is a

History Of The Mongols Biker Gang

The Mongols Biker Gang was formed in the late 1960s in East Los Angeles by David Santillan. The Mongols are mostly known to frequently commit violent crimes including assault, intimidation, and murder in defense of their territory, and to uphold the reputation of the club. They were also engaged in racially motivated violence against African-American gang members, and even black civilians not affiliated with any type of gang.

And because of their crimes, The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms named the Mongols the single "most violent and dangerous OMG in America". A majority of the Mongols biker gang members are Hispanic males who live in the Los Angeles area, and many are former street gang members with a long history of using violence to settle grievances.

Four U.S. suspects were arrested in a smuggling scheme to export machine guns, assault rifles and hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition to a Mexican drug cartel that authorities have called the country's bloodiest, officials said Monday.

The U.S. Attorney's Office in California's Central District named two more suspects in the alleged scheme to move "military-grade firepower" to the Cártel Jalisco Nueva Generación, a group that law enforcement officials in the U.S. and Mexico have said is filling a vacuum left by the capture of kingpin Joaquín "El Chapo" Guzmán in 2016.

One of the suspects is believed to be at large in Mexico. Another is in state custody in North Carolina on unrelated charges, the prosecutor's office said in a news release.

Most of the suspects were charged with smuggling and violating export regulations. The suspected ringleader and his son were also charged with money laundering, and two others were accused of illegal possession of ammunition.

"The defendants in this case smuggled sophisticated weaponry out of the United States to one of the most violent cartels in Mexico whose members target not only rival gangs, but innocent Mexican citizens and Mexican law enforcement," Kristi Johnson, an FBI official in Los Angeles, said in a statement.

Marco Antonio Santillan Valencia, 51, was identified as the U.S. group's leader. According to the prosecutor's office, he and the others obtained the guns from two

A Florida man was trying to run on the water to travel from St. Augustine to New York to raise money for charity.

FLAGLER COUNTY, Fla. - The Flagler County Sheriff's Office said a strange vessel washed ashore on Saturday morning. It turned out to be a Central Florida man who was 'walking on water' for charity.

"I will show people anything you want to do, do it. Don't listen to anyone. Chase your dreams."

The Flagler County Sheriff's Office shared bodycam video of a strange vessel that washed ashore on Saturday morning. It turned out to be a Central Florida man who was 'walking on water' for charity.

In an exclusive interview with FOX 35 News, Reza Baluchi says he is no stranger to the water. He calls his floating contraption his bubble. But his bubble washed ashore in Flagler County early Saturday morning.

"My goal is to not only raise money for homeless people, raise money for the Coast Guard, raise money for the police department, raise money for the fire department. They are in public service, they do it for safety and they help other people."

A man from Florida who was trying to cross the Atlantic in a "human-powered hamster wheel" was arrested by the Coast Guard, according to court documents.

Reza Baluchi was 70 miles off Georgia when officers found him during a "manifestly unsafe voyage" while Hurricane Franklin was headed toward the area, the Coast Guard said Wednesday in a statement on Facebook.

Reza Baluchi in his water craft in 2016, with members of the US Coast Guard

Reza Ray Baluchi (born 1972)[1] is an Iranian athlete and activist living in the United States. He has several times attempted to travel long distances off the East Coast of the United States in a self-propelled water craft resembling a hamster ball, which he calls a "hydro pod" or bubble.

Background [edit]

Baluchi was born in Rasht,[2] and in Iran was tortured and served 18 months of a two-year sentence for offenses against Islam;[3] [4] After cycling for the Iranian national team, in 1992 he defected to Germany, where he was a member of a professional cycling team[1] and cycled through 55 countries promoting world peace.[3] He arrived in the United States in 2002 from Mexico and was granted political asylum[4] after five months in detention.[2][5] He has set records as a runner and a cyclist, with the aim of promoting world peace.[6] He ran from Los Angeles to Ground Zero in New York in 2003 to dispel misconceptions about Middle Easterners and as a stand against terrorism;[7] ran 11,720 miles (18,860 km) around the perimeter of the United States as a fundraiser for Children's Hospital of Denver; ran again from Los Angeles to New York in 2009, acquiring an American flag from the White House;[3][4][8] and in 2010 moved to Death Valley, where he ran and trained in the desert heat for two years.[3]

Bubble expeditions [edit]

Baluchi built and equipped his first "hydro pod" using $4,500 in savings from working as a mechanic and a dishwasher,[4] at a hookah bar and a supermarket in Newport Beach, California.[3] The craft is a cylinder of 3-millimeter thick plastic in an aluminum frame with paddles and is propelled by his running inside it, like a hamster ball.[3][6] He estimated in 2014 that he could reach 4–5 knots (7.4–9.3 km/h) at sea,[6] and in 2021, 6 knots (11 km/h) in the 10 by 6 feet (3.0 m × 1.8 m) pod he has registered in Florida as a water craft.[7] He has said that he undertakes his ocean journeys to inspire others and to raise money for public services, including the US Coast Guard, which has repeatedly stopped him for his own safety.[9]

2014 attempt to reach Bermuda and Puerto Rico [edit]

In 2014, after two years of training[6] including a 30-mile (48 km) journey from Newport Beach to Catalina Island,[8][10] Baluchi set off from Pompano Beach, Florida, intending to trace the Bermuda Triangle by traveling approximately 3,000 miles (4,800 km) to Bermuda, to Puerto Rico, and back to Miami.[6] The Coast Guard had warned him that the expedition was too dangerous,[10] and stopped him approximately 185 miles (298 km)

ISTANBUL, Nov 2 (Reuters) – Turkey said on Thursday it had captured Hakan Ayik, a top fugitive wanted in Australia for drug smuggling, and 36 others involved in an international organised crime ring that has also been pursued by U.S. and New Zealand authorities.

Interior Minister Ali Yerlikaya said the detentions in Istanbul targeted the armed motorcycle gang Comanchero. But he said was allegedly involved in drug trafficking, manslaughter, looting and money laundering activity.

Hakan Ayik

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Joseph Hakan Ayik, also known as Hakan Reis (born 31 January 1976) is a Turkish-Australian drug trafficker. He has an estimated net worth of 1.2 billion dollars, and was described in June 2021 as "Australia's most wanted man".

Early life

Ayik was born in Australia to parents from Turkey. His father died when he was young, with many family members being drug users. His cousin and brother later ended up in prison. He studied at James Cook Boys Technology High School in Kogarah, New South Wales. A classmate of Ayik was Duan Ryakers, the future boss of the Comanchero gang.

Criminal career

In the 2000s, Ayik was running a large criminal empire. He held ownership of karaoke bars and brothels in Sydney and Cairns. He reportedly travelled to Dubai, India and Hong Kong in luxury. His activities were involved with the Comanchero Motorcycle Club. He is also said to have worked with corrupt customs officials and jail officers in Australia and Tonga. The drug importations he engaged in were estimated to be valued in the hundreds of millions of dollars. This business was organised in co-

William George "Jock" Ross (born 5 August 1943) is a Scottish-born Australian outlaw biker, best known as the founder and the "Supreme Commander" of the Comancheros Motorcycle Club and for his involvement in the Milperra massacre of 1984. Ross was sentenced to life imprisonment with Judge Roden chiding him as one of the men most responsible for the shoot-out at the Viking Tavern.

Youth

Ross was born in Glasgow, Scotland into a working-class family. Ross grew up in the Gorbals neighbourhood of Glasgow, where his father worked as a lorry (truck) driver. Ross stated of his youth: "In the old Glasgow days you never backed off, that's how you survived. The Gorbals was tough and you had to be tough too." He served in the British Army in the Royal Engineers. Ross joined the British Army at the age of 17 and served for 9 years. As an engineer, he was involved in clearing minefields left over from the Second World War in Libya as well as laying minefields in the Aden Protectorate (modern Yemen) and Hong Kong. After his honourable discharge, he settled in Australia, making his home in New South Wales. In 1968, he settled in a coastal flat and then moved to Point Clare. Ross (who was known to his friends as "Jock" instead of William) worked variously as a lorry driver and as an apprentice blacksmith.

The "Supreme Commander"

Ross befriended a number of Australian veterans of the Vietnam War, saying in a 2010 interview: "I came out of the army, came here. People came out of the army, especially soldiers coming back from Vietnam back in the '70s, the late '70s ... they came, and they were treated like lepers ... not real good. Me, as an ex-soldier, I empathised with them." Ross founded Comancheros Motorcycle Club in 1969 with the name being taken from a 1961 John Wayne western film (The Comancheros) that Ross adored. The Australian journalists Lindsay Simpson and Sandra Harvey described Ross as a natural "leader of men", an extremely charismatic man whose maelstrome and toughness inspired much devotion from other men. In 1971, Ross purchased a property along the then rural Mangrove Mountain Road for 1500 that became his home. Settling with Ross in his caravan were his first wife Sandy and their infant daughter Debbie. Youth

Ross was born in Glasgow, Scotland into a working-class family. Ross grew up in the Gorbals neighbourhood of Glasgow, where his father worked as a lorry (truck) driver. Ross stated of his youth: "In the old Glasgow days you never backed off, that's how you survived. The Gorbals was tough and you had to be tough too." He served in the British Army in the Royal Engineers. Ross joined the British Army at the age of 17 and served for 9 years. As an engineer, he was involved in clearing minefields left over from the Second World War in Libya as well as laying minefields in the Aden Protectorate (modern Yemen) and Hong Kong. After his honourable discharge, he settled in Australia, making his home in New South Wales. In 1968, he settled in a coastal flat and then moved to Point Clare. Ross (who was known to his friends as "Jock" instead of William) worked variously as a lorry driver and as an apprentice blacksmith.

The Comancheros

The "Supreme Commander"

Ross befriended a number of Australian veterans of the Vietnam War, saying in a 2010 interview: "I came out of the army, came here. People came out of the army, especially soldiers coming back from Vietnam back in the '70s, the late '70s ... they came, and they were treated like lepers ... not real good. Me, as an ex-soldier, I empathised with them." Ross founded Comancheros Motorcycle Club in 1969 with the name being taken from a 1961 John Wayne western film (The Comancheros) that Ross adored. The Australian journalists Lindsay Simpson and Sandra Harvey described Ross as a natural "leader of men", an extremely charismatic man whose maelstrome and toughness inspired much devotion from other men. In 1971, Ross purchased a property along the then rural Mangrove Mountain Road for 1500 that became his home. Settling with Ross in his caravan were his first wife Sandy and their infant daughter Debbie. Joseph Hakan Ayik, also known as Hakan Reis (born 31 January 1979) is a Turkish-Australian[1] drug trafficker. He has an estimated net worth of 1.2 billion dollars, and was described in June 2021 as "Australia's most wanted man".[2][3]

Early life [edit]

Ayik was born in Australia to parents from Turkey.[4] His father died when he was young, with many family members being drug users.[5] His cousin and brother later ended up in prison.[5] He studied at James Cook Boys Technology High School in Kogarah, New South Wales.[5] A classmate of Ayik was Duax Ngakuru, the future boss of the Comanchero gang.[6]

Criminal career [edit]

In the 2000s, Ayik was running a large criminal empire. He held ownership of karaoke bars and brothels in Sydney and Canberra. He reportedly travelled to Dubai, India and Hong Kong in luxury.[5] His activities were involved with the Comanchero Motorcycle Club.[5] He is also said to have worked with corrupt customs officials and jail officers in Australia and Tonga.[5] The drug importations he engaged in were estimated to be valued in the hundreds of millions of dollars.[5] This business was organised in co-

Four U.S. suspects were arrested in a smuggling scheme to export machine guns, assault rifles and hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition to a Mexican drug cartel that authorities have called the country's bloodiest, officials said Monday.

The U.S. Attorney's Office in California's Central District named two more suspects in the alleged scheme to move "military-grade firepower" to the Cártel Jalisco Nueva Generación, a group that law enforcement officials in the U.S. and Mexico have said is filling a vacuum left by the capture of kingpin Joaquín "El Chapo" Guzmán in 2016.

One of the suspects is believed to be at large in Mexico. Another is in state custody in North Carolina on unrelated charges, the prosecutor's office said in a news release.

Most of the suspects were charged with smuggling and violating export regulations. The suspected ringleader and his son were also charged with money laundering, and two others were accused of illegal possession of ammunition.

"The defendants in this case smuggled sophisticated weaponry out of the United States to one of the most violent cartels in Mexico whose members target not only rival gangs, but innocent Mexican citizens and Mexican law enforcement," Kristi Johnson, an FBI official in Los Angeles, said in a statement.

Marco Antonio Santillan Valencia, 51, was identified as the U.S. group's leader. According to the prosecutor's office, he and the others obtained the guns from two America's first major organized crime boss was a Jewish woman whose name almost no one knows today. She was Fredericka Mandelbaum, the subject of a new historical nonfiction book by Margalit Fox.

"The Talented Mrs. Mandelbaum: The Rise and Fall of an American Organized-Crime Boss" tells the fascinating story of an immigrant who traveled in steerage to the Lower East Side of Manhattan in 1850. After a decade of peddling lace and struggling to support her family, she transformed herself into a successful fence, someone who knowingly buys stolen property and sells it for a profit.

Between 1859 and 1884, Mandelbaum ran and grew her fencing operation from an unassuming storefront. It was the Gilded Age, a time when the emergent middle and professional classes were willing to turn a blind eye to the origins of coveted luxury items.

"They quickly became consumers who were educated by the mass media of the day — catalogs, newspapers, magazines, and manuals of domestic advice aimed at women in particular, who were under real social pressure to have all of the best. They wanted fancy furniture, chintz, silk, doilies, and knickknacks in their home," Fox told The Times of Israel.

Bodhidharma

This biography is a copy of a Wikipedia article, with minor modifications. See the latest Wikipedia version here. EOB

Bodhidharma was a Buddhist monk who lived during the 5th or 6th century. He is traditionally credited as the transmitter of Chan Buddhism to China, and regarded as its first Chinese patriarch. According to Chinese legend, he also began the physical training of the monks of Shaolin Monastery that led to the creation of Shaolin kungfu. In Japan, he is known as Daruma.

Little contemporary biographical information on Bodhidharma is extant, and subsequent accounts became layered with legend.[1] [note 1]

According to the principal Chinese sources, Bodhidharma came from the Western Regions,[4][5] which refers to Central Asia but may also include the Indian subcontinent, and was either a "Persian Central Asian"[4] or a "South Indian [...] the third son of a great Indian king."[5][note 2] Throughout Buddhist art, Bodhidharma is depicted as an ill-tempered, profusely-bearded, wide-eyed non-Chinese person. He is referred as "The Blue-Eyed Barbarian" (Chinese: 碧眼胡; pinyin: Bìyǎnhú) in Chan texts.[10]

Aside from the Chinese accounts, several popular traditions also exist regarding Bodhidharma's origins.[note 3]

The Shaolin Temple in Henan province, China.

Shaolin Temple, Buddhist monastery in Henan province, China, that was founded in 495.

In 464 an Indian monk named Bada, the 28th successor in a line of religious leaders that could be traced back to Buddha, arrived in China to spread Buddhist teachings. The Shaolin Temple, the construction of which began in 495 under the orders of the Wei emperor Xiaowendi, bears testimony to his success. It was from here that Indian scriptures were translated into Chinese and the precepts of Zen Buddhism formed. Bada (often referred to as Bodhidharma) is also reputed to have introduced martial arts as a complementary practice to meditation—a practice that developed into the highly skilled Shaolin kung fu.

The Shaolin Temple sits on the slopes of Mount Song, one of the five sacred mountains of China. The original temple structure was simple, but with each succeeding dynasty it became increasingly extensive—many of the current structures date from the Ming and Qing dynasties. Great care was taken to preserve symmetry in the temple's design, with all crucial buildings being constructed along the site's central axis. These include the Gate of the Temple, the Bell and Drum towers, the Heavenly King Hall, the Dharma Hall, the Abbot's Room, the Mahavira Hall, and the Sutra-Keeping Pavilion. The Bodhidharma was a Buddhist monk who lived during the 5th or 6th century. He is traditionally credited as the transmitter of Chan Buddhism to China, and regarded as its first Chinese patriarch. According to Chinese legend, he also began the physical training of the monks of Shaolin Monastery that led to the creation of Shaolin kungfu. In Japan, he is known as Daruma.

Little contemporary biographical information on Bodhidharma is extant, and subsequent accounts became layered with legend.[1] [note 1]

According to the principal Chinese sources, Bodhidharma came from the Western Regions,[2][3] which refers to Central Asia but may also include the Indian subcontinent, and was either a "Persian Central Asian"[4] or a "South Indian [...] the third son of a great Indian king."[5][note 2] Throughout Buddhist art, Bodhidharma is depicted as an ill-tempered, profusely-bearded, wide-eyed non-Chinese person. He is referred as "The Blue-Eyed Barbarian" (Chinese: 碧眼胡, pinyin: Bìyǎnhú) in Chan texts.[7][8]

Aside from the Chinese accounts, several popular traditions also exist regarding Bodhidharma's origins.[note 3]

Shaolin Temple

The Shaolin Temple in Henan province, China.

In 464 an Indian monk named Bada, the 28th successor in a line of religious leaders that could be traced back to Buddha, arrived in China to spread Buddhist teachings. The Shaolin Temple, the construction of which began in 495 under the orders of the Wei emperor Xiaowendi, bears testimony to his success. It was from here that Indian scriptures were translated into Chinese and the precepts of Zen Buddhism formed. Bada (often referred to as Bodhidharma) is also reputed to have introduced martial arts as a complementary practice to meditation—a practice that developed into the highly skilled Shaolin kung fu.

The Shaolin Temple sits on the slopes of Mount Song, one of the five sacred mountains of China. The original temple structure was simple, but with each succeeding dynasty it became increasingly extensive—many of the current structures date from the Ming and Qing dynasties. Great care was taken to preserve symmetry in the temple's design, with all crucial buildings being constructed along the site's central axis. These include the Gate of the Temple, the Bell and Drum towers, the Heavenly King Hall, the Dharma Hall, the Abbot's Room, the Mahavira Hall, and the Sutra-Keeping Pavilion. The Bodhidharma was a Buddhist monk who lived during the 5th or 6th century. He is traditionally credited as the transmitter of Chan Buddhism to China, and regarded as its first Chinese patriarch. According to Chinese legend, he also began the physical training of the monks of Shaolin Monastery that led to the creation of Shaolin kungfu. In Japan, he is known as Daruma.

Little contemporary biographical information on Bodhidharma is extant, and subsequent accounts became layered with legend.[1] [note 1]

According to the principal Chinese sources, Bodhidharma came from the Western Regions,[4][5] which refers to Central Asia but may also include the Indian subcontinent, and was either a "Persian Central Asian"[4] or a "South Indian [...] the third son of a great Indian king."[5][note 2] Throughout Buddhist art, Bodhidharma is depicted as an ill-tempered, profusely-bearded, wide-eyed non-Chinese person. He is referred as "The Blue-Eyed Barbarian" (Chinese: 碧眼胡; pinyin: Bìyǎnhú) in Chan texts.[10]

Aside from the Chinese accounts, several popular traditions also exist regarding Bodhidharma's origins.[note 3]

Thomas Matthew Crooks (September 20, 2003 – July 13, 2024) was an American man who attempted to assassinate Donald Trump, the former president of the United States and at that time presumptive Republican Party nominee for the 2024 presidential election.[1][2]

On July 13, 2024, at a rally near Butler, Pennsylvania, Crooks shot at Trump with an AR-15–style rifle from a nearby rooftop while Trump was giving a speech, injuring Trump and two attendees, and killing another. Crooks was immediately killed by the Secret Service Counter Assault Team. An investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) is underway, and his motivation remains unknown.

Early life and education

Thomas Matthew Crooks was born on September 20, 2003,[1] and was raised in Bethel Park, Pennsylvania.[3] The neighborhood he lived in was described as "middle-class, maybe upper-middle class".[4] Both of his parents worked as licensed professional counselors.[5] Recollections about Crooks, including biographical information about his life and personality, vary considerably.[6]

He attended Bethel Park High School, where he was known as an above-average student, and graduated in 2022.[7][8] Classmates and school officials characterized him as quiet, with classmates claiming he was often bullied,[2][7][9] including for his quiet demeanor, and for wearing camouflage hunting outfits and masks to school.[9][10] Crooks enjoyed playing chess and video games, and was learning how to code.[11] He received a $500 "star award" the same year from the National Math and Science Initiative.[7][12] Current and former Bethel Park High School students have alleged that Crooks tried out for his school's rifle team, but did not make the team due to poor aim during tryouts; the Bethel Park School District

THE BIRTH OF THE PERSONAL COMPUTER

A new history of the Apple II charts how computers became unavoidable fixtures of our daily lives.

In 1979, two M.I.T. computer-science alumni and a Harvard Business School graduate launched a new piece of computer software for the Apple II machine, an early home computer. Called VisiCalc, short for "visible calculator," it was a spreadsheet, with an unassuming interface of monochrome numerals and characters. But it was a dramatic upgrade from the paper-based charts traditionally used to project business revenue or manage a budget. VisiCalc could perform calculations and update figures across columns and rows in real time, based on formulas that the user programmed in. No more writing out numbers painstakingly by hand.

VisiCalc sold more than seven hundred thousand copies in its first six years, and almost single-handedly demonstrated the utility of the Apple II, which retailed

Ice-Cream Cone

One of the most popular American snacks, it is generally believed the ice-cream cone was initially popularized at the 1904 St. Louis Exposition. At that time, Ernest Hamwi, a Syrian waffle vendor, created the "World's Fair Cornucopia" by taking portions of ice cream being dispensed by a fellow vendor who had run out of dishes and serving them up inside waffles that were folded into a cone-like shape. However, other sources, including the Library of Congress, claim that the ice-cream cone was invented on July 23, 1904, by Charles E. Menches of St. Louis and that it did not make its debut as a "walk-away" treat until later that year, at the St. Louis Exposition. A year earlier, a patent for a cone maker had been granted to Italo Marchiony (1868–1954), a New York pushcart vendor, who claimed to have been

While Americans born in or with ancestral ties to Arab countries have made countless significant scientific, medical and engineering contributions, most have never made it into record books. From cryptography, to the artificial heart, to the iPod, here are a few examples of some of the major advancements by Arab Americans.

Born in Nabatieh, Lebanon in 1895, Hassan Kamel Al-Sabbah studied and then taught mathematics at the American University of Beirut before immigrating to the United States in 1921. After a brief stint studying at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Al-Sabbah earned a master's degree in engineering sciences from the University of Illinois, says Lujine Nasralla, communications specialist at the Arab American National Museum in Dearborn, Michigan.

"In 1923, General Electric (GE) hired him to work in its Engineering Laboratory under a contract that awarded him a dollar for each of his patents," Nasralla explains, noting that between 1927 and 1935, he applied for patents for 52 of his

Jewish genetic diseases are a group of rare autosomal recessive disorders that are far more prevalent among people with Jewish ancestry than in the general population. Autosomal recessive diseases are transmitted genetically by carrier parents who themselves do not suffer from the disorder but carry the genes that can cause the disease. When two carriers of a genetic mutation associated with a particular disorder have children together, each of their offspring has a one in four chance of developing the disease and a 50 percent chance of becoming carriers themselves.

So Are the Neanderthals Still Jews?

And other revelations culled from history's big secrets.

BY CHARLES PAUL FREUND

You read the press reports in July about the DNA of Neanderthals, and you quickly grasped how the new findings suggest that this branch of humanoids is much more distantly related to modern Homo sapiens than you may have believed–they are not even direct human ancestors. Now you must apply these findings, and examine their implications for the world around you. Specifically, you must weigh their effect on certain theories in circulation, among them that Neanderthals still walk–or lumber–among us, and indeed that they have maintained their cohesion through the ages and still constitute a group apart. And, most importantly, that this group of living, lumbering Neanderthals is the Jews.

Below are the 19 Ashkenazic Jewish genetic diseases for which people are most commonly screened. It is estimated that 1 in 5 Ashkenazic Jews is a carrier of a mutation in at least one of these disease genes:

- Bloom Syndrome
- Canavan Disease
- Cystic Fibrosis
- Familial Dysautonomia
- Fanconi Anemia Type C
- Gaucher Disease
- Glycogen Storage Disease, Type 1a
- Maple Syrup Urine Disease
- Mucolipidosis IV (ML-IV)
- Niemann-Pick Disease Type A
- Tay-Sachs Disease
- Walker-Warburg Syndrome

Screening is also available for the following diseases on a more limited basis:

- Dihydrolipoamide Dehydrogenase Deficiency (DLD Deficiency)
- Familial Hyperinsulinism
- Joubert Syndrome

Joseph Hakan Ayik, also known as Hakan Reis (born 31 January 1979) is a Turkish-Australian[1] drug trafficker. He has an estimated net worth of 1.2 billion dollars, and was described in June 2021 as "Australia's most wanted man".[2][3]

Early life [edit]

Ayik was born in Australia to parents from Turkey.[4] His father died when he was young, with many family members being drug users.[5] His cousin and brother later ended up in prison.[5] He studied at James Cook Boys Technology High School in Kogarah, New South Wales.[5] A classmate of Ayik was Duax Ngakuru, the future boss of the Comanchero gang.[6]

Criminal career [edit]

In the 2000s, Ayik was running a large criminal empire. He held ownership of karaoke bars and brothels in Sydney and Canberra. He reportedly travelled to Dubai, India and Hong Kong in luxury.[5] His activities were involved with the Comanchero Motorcycle Club.[5] He is also said to have worked with corrupt customs officials and jail officers in Australia and Tonga.[5] The drug importations he engaged in were estimated to be valued in the hundreds of millions of dollars.[5] This business was organised in co-

William George "Jock" Ross (born 5 August 1943) is a Scottish-born Australian outlaw biker, best known as the founder and the "Supreme Commander" of the Comanchero Motorcycle Club and for his involvement in the Milperra massacre of 1984. Ross was sentenced to life imprisonment with Judge Roden childing him as one of the men most responsible for the shoot-out at the Viking Tavern.

Successor	Mick Hawi
Allegiance	Comanchero MC
Conviction(s)	Murder (1986), reduced to manslaughter upon appeal (1992)
Criminal penalty	Life imprisonment; paroled in 1989

Youth [edit]

Ross was born in Glasgow, Scotland into a working-class family.[1] Ross grew up in the Gorbals neighbourhood of Glasgow, where his father worked as a lorry (truck) driver.[2] Ross stated of his youth: "In the old Glasgow days you never backed off, that's how you survived. The Gorbals was tough and you had to be tough too."[2] He served in the British Army in the Royal Engineers.[1] Ross joined the British Army at the age of 17 and served for 7 years.[3] As an engineer, he was involved in clearing minefields left over from the Second World War in Libya as well as laying minefields in the Aden Protectorate (modern Yemen) and Hong Kong.[1] After his honourable discharge, he settled in Australia, making his home in New South Wales.[1] In 1966, he settled in a coastal flat and then moved to Point Clare.[4] Ross-who was known to his friends as "Jock" instead of William-worked variously as a lorry driver and as an apprentice blacksmith.[4]

The Comancheros [edit]

The "Supreme Commander" [edit]

Ross befriended a number of Australian veterans of the Vietnam War, saying in a 2019 interview: "I came out of the army, came here. People come out of the army, especially soldiers coming back from Vietnam back in the '70s, the late '70s … they came, and they were treated like lepers … not real good. Me, as an ex-soldier, I empathised with them".[1] Ross founded Comanchero Motorcycle Club in 1968 with the name being taken from a 1961 John Wayne Western film The Comancheros that Ross adored.[5][6] The Australian journalists Lindsay Simpson and Sandra Harvey described Ross as a natural "leader of men", an extremely charismatic man whose machismo and toughness inspired much devotion from other men.[7] In 1971, Ross purchased a property along the then rural Mangrove Mountain Road for $800 that became his home.[7] Settling with Ross in his caravan were his first wife Sandy and their infant daughter Deidre.[7] Ross found the sunny New South Wales countryside to be a refreshing change from the decaying industrial neighbourhoods of the William George "Jock" Ross (born 5 August 1943) is a Scottish-born Australian outlaw biker, best known as the founder and the "Supreme Commander" of the Comanchero Motorcycle Club and for his involvement in the Milperra massacre of 1984. Ross was sentenced to life imprisonment with Judge Roden childing him as one of the men most responsible for the shoot-out at the Viking Tavern.

Born	William George Ross 5 August 1943 (age 80) Glasgow, Scotland
Occupation(s)	Outlaw biker, soldier, fireman
Years active	1968-2002
Known for	Founder of the Comancheros
Successor	Mick Hawi
Allegiance	Comanchero MC
Conviction(s)	Murder (1986), reduced to manslaughter upon appeal (1992)
Criminal penalty	Life imprisonment; paroled in 1989

Youth [edit]

Ross was born in Glasgow, Scotland into a working-class family.[1] Ross grew up in the Gorbals neighbourhood of Glasgow, where his father worked as a lorry (truck) driver.[2] Ross stated of his youth: "In the old Glasgow days you never backed off, that's how you survived. The Gorbals was tough and you had to be tough too."[2] He served in the British Army in the Royal Engineers.[1] Ross joined the British Army at the age of 17 and served for 7 years.[3] As an engineer, he was involved in clearing minefields left over from the Second World War in Libya as well as laying minefields in the Aden Protectorate (modern Yemen) and Hong Kong.[1] After his honourable discharge, he settled in Australia, making his home in New South Wales.[1] In 1966, he settled in a coastal flat and then moved to Point Clare.[4] Ross-who was known to his friends as "Jock" instead of William-worked variously as a lorry driver and as an apprentice blacksmith.[4]

The Comancheros [edit]

The "Supreme Commander" [edit]

Ross befriended a number of Australian veterans of the Vietnam War, saying in a 2019 interview: "I came out of the army, came here. People come out of the army, especially soldiers coming back from Vietnam back in the '70s, the late '70s … they came, and they were treated like lepers … not real good. Me, as an ex-soldier, I empathised with them".[1] Ross founded Comanchero Motorcycle Club in 1968 with the name being taken from a 1961 John Wayne Western film The Comancheros that Ross adored.[5][6] The Australian journalists Lindsay Simpson and Sandra Harvey described Ross as a natural "leader of men", an extremely charismatic man whose machismo and toughness inspired much devotion from other men.[7] In 1971, Ross purchased a property along the then rural Mangrove Mountain Road for $800 that became his home.[7] Settling with Ross in his caravan were his first wife Sandy and their infant daughter Deidre.[7] Ross found the sunny New South Wales countryside to be a refreshing change from the decaying industrial neighbourhoods of the

A Mexican druglord, described as El Chapo's successor, has taken violence in the country to the next level.

Cartel boss Nemesio Cervantes has allegedly ordered the murder of pregnant women and babies as part of the ongoing drug wars in Mexico.

Cervantes, also known as 'El Mencho', is now top of the US's 'most wanted' list and has a bounty of £7.9million on his head.

As gang violence spirals out of control in Mexico, the country's politicians have warned that attacks against women are at 'pandemic levels'.

Angelo Pandeli named in Australian cartel responsible for $1.5 billion drug imports

Angelo Pandeli.

An exclusive story by The Age, The Sydney Morning Herald and 60 Minutes aired last night, revealing how some of Australia's most dangerous crime bosses have organised themselves into a cartel earning an estimated $1.5 billion a year by smuggling drugs past the nation's border with the help of corrupt government officials and border insiders.

This intel comes from the Australian Criminal Intelligence Commission which says nine Australian men, drawn mostly from Australian bikie gangs and Middle Eastern crime syndicates, make up what the agency has named the "Aussie cartel."

The CEO of the Commission, Michael Phelan, told the media outlets that the cartel's members are "the baddest of the bad" and estimated they were responsible for "about one-third of the drug importations into our country."

Four U.S. suspects were arrested in a smuggling scheme to export machine guns, assault rifles and hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition to a Mexican drug cartel that authorities have called the country's bloodiest, officials said Monday.

The U.S. Attorney's Office in California's Central District named two more suspects in the alleged scheme to move "military-grade firepower" to the Cártel Jalisco Nueva Generación, a group that law enforcement officials in the U.S. and Mexico have said is filling a vacuum left by the capture of kingpin Joaquín "El Chapo" Guzmán in 2016.

One of the suspects is believed to be at large in Mexico. Another is in state custody in North Carolina on unrelated charges, the prosecutor's office said in a news release.

Most of the suspects were charged with smuggling and violating export regulations. The suspected ringleader and his son were also charged with money laundering, and two others were accused of illegal possession of ammunition.

"The defendants in this case smuggled sophisticated weaponry out of the United States to one of the most violent cartels in Mexico whose members target not only rival gangs, but innocent Mexican citizens and Mexican law enforcement," Kristi Johnson, an FBI official in Los Angeles, said in a statement.

Marco Antonio Santillan Valencia, 51, was identified as the U.S. group's leader. According to the prosecutor's office, he and the others obtained the guns from two

The Story Of Frank Costello, The Legendary Mob Boss Who Inspired 'The Godfather'

By Katie Serena | Edited By John Kuroski
Published April 22, 2024 | Updated May 14, 2024

Luciano family boss Frank Costello survived gang wars, police scrutiny, and an assassination attempt while becoming one of history's wealthiest mobsters.

As far as mob bosses go, there were three things that set Frank Costello apart: he never carried a gun, he testified at a Senate hearing on organized crime without the protection of the Fifth Amendment, and despite his multiple arrests and assassination attempt, he died a free man at age 82.

Frank Costello was arguably one of the most successful gangsters of all time. What's more, the "Prime Minister" of the mob was the man who inspired The Godfather himself, Don Vito Corleone.

Marlon Brando even watched footage of Frank Costello's appearance at the widely-publicized Kefauver Senate hearings and based both his character's calm demeanor and raspy voice on Costello.

This is FRESH AIR. I'm David Bianculli, editor of TV Worth Watching, sitting in for Terry Gross. The movie "Steve Jobs," with a screenplay by Aaron Sorkin based on the best-selling biography by Walter Isaacson, opens today in New York and LA. Today on FRESH AIR, we'll listen back to Terry's 2011 interview with Isaacson and hear what our film critic, David Edelstein, thinks of the film. But let's start with an excerpt of an interview Terry recorded with Steve Jobs himself. They spoke in 1996.

The Flagler County Sheriff's Office shared bodycam video of a strange vessel that washed ashore on Saturday morning. It turned out to be a Central Florida man who was 'walking on water' for charity.

In an exclusive interview with FOX 35 News, Reza Baluchi says he is no stranger to the water. He calls his floating contraption his bubble. But his bubble washed ashore in Flagler County early Saturday morning.

"My goal is to not only raise money for homeless people, raise money for the Coast Guard, raise money for the police department, raise money for the fire department. They are in public service, they do it for safety and they help other people."

Reza Baluchi in his water craft in 2016, with members of the US Coast Guard

Reza Ray Baluchi (born 1972)[1] is an Iranian athlete and activist living in the United States. He has several times attempted to travel long distances off the East Coast of the United States in a self-propelled water craft resembling a hamster ball, which he calls a "hydro pod" or bubble.

Background [edit]

Baluchi was born in Rasht,[2] and in Iran was tortured and served 18 months of a two-year sentence for offenses against Islam;[3] [4] After cycling for the Iranian national team, in 1992 he defected to Germany, where he was a member of a professional cycling team[1] and cycled through 55 countries promoting world peace.[3] He arrived in the United States in 2002 from Mexico and was granted political asylum[4] after five months in detention.[2][5] He has set records as a runner and a cyclist, with the aim of promoting world peace.[6] He ran from Los Angeles to Ground Zero in New York in 2003 to dispel misconceptions about Middle Easterners and as a stand against terrorism;[7] ran 11,720 miles (18,860 km) around the perimeter of the United States as a fundraiser for Children's Hospital of Denver; ran again from Los Angeles to New York in 2009, acquiring an American flag from the White House;[3][4][8] and in 2010 moved to Death Valley, where he ran and trained in the desert heat for two years.[3]

Bubble expeditions [edit]

Baluchi built and equipped his first "hydro pod" using $4,500 in savings from working as a mechanic and a dishwasher,[4] at a hookah bar and a supermarket in Newport Beach, California.[3] The craft is a cylinder of 3-millimeter thick plastic in an aluminum frame with paddles and is propelled by his running inside it, like a hamster ball.[3][6] He estimated in 2014 that he could reach 4–5 knots (7.4–9.3 km/h) at sea,[6] and in 2021, 6 knots (11 km/h) in the 10 by 6 feet (3.0 m × 1.8 m) pod he has registered in Florida as a water craft.[7] He has said that he undertakes his ocean journeys to inspire others and to raise money for public services, including the US Coast Guard, which has repeatedly stopped him for his own safety.[9]

2014 attempt to reach Bermuda and Puerto Rico [edit]

In 2014, after two years of training[6] including a 30-mile (48 km) journey from Newport Beach to Catalina Island,[8][10] Baluchi set off from Pompano Beach, Florida, intending to trace the Bermuda Triangle by traveling approximately 3,000 miles (4,800 km) to Bermuda, to Puerto Rico, and back to Miami.[6] The Coast Guard had warned him that the expedition was too dangerous,[10] and stopped him approximately 185 miles (298 km)

ISTANBUL, Nov 2 (Reuters) - Turkey said on Thursday it had captured Hakan Ayik, a top fugitive wanted in Australia for drug smuggling, and 36 others involved in an international organised crime ring that has also been pursued by U.S. and New Zealand authorities.

Interior Minister Ali Yerlikaya said the detentions in Istanbul targeted the armed motorcycle gang Comanchero that he said was allegedly involved in drug trafficking, manslaughter, looting and money laundering globally.

Joseph Hakan Ayik, also known as Hakan Reis (born 31 January 1979) is a Turkish-Australian[1] drug trafficker. He has an estimated net worth of 1.2 billion dollars, and was described in June 2021 as "Australia's most wanted man".[2][3]

Early life [edit]

Ayik was born in Australia to parents from Turkey.[4] His father died when he was young, with many family members being drug users.[5] His cousin and brother later ended up in prison.[5] He studied at James Cook Boys Technology High School in Kogarah, New South Wales.[5] A classmate of Ayik was Duax Ngakuru, the future boss of the Comanchero gang.[6]

Criminal career [edit]

In the 2000s, Ayik was running a large criminal empire. He held ownership of karaoke bars and brothels in Sydney and Canberra. He reportedly travelled to Dubai, India and Hong Kong in luxury.[5] His activities were involved with the Comanchero Motorcycle Club.[5] He is also said to have worked with corrupt customs officials and jail officers in Australia and Tonga.[5] The drug importations he engaged in were estimated to be valued in the hundreds of millions of dollars.[5] This business was organised in co-

Police have described Melbourne motorcycle gang members who allegedly murdered two men by mistake as "panicked, incompetent" and "cowardly".

Authorities are appealing for information about the 2017 deaths of 22-year-old Muhamad Yucel and 26-year-old Zabi Ezedyar whose murders have been linked to the Comanchero outlaw motorcycle gang.

William George "Jock" Ross (born 5 August 1943) is a Scottish-born Australian outlaw biker, best known as the founder and the "Supreme Commander" of the Comanchero Motorcycle Club and for his involvement in the Milperra massacre of 1984. Ross was sentenced to life imprisonment with Judge Roden childing him as one of the men most responsible for the shoot-out at the Viking Tavern.

Born	William George Ross 5 August 1943 (age 80) Glasgow, Scotland
Occupation(s)	Outlaw biker, soldier, fireman
Years active	1968-2002
Successor	Mick Hawi
Allegiance	Comanchero MC
Conviction(s)	Murder (1986), reduced to manslaughter upon appeal (1992)
Criminal penalty	Life imprisonment; paroled in 1989

Youth [edit]

Ross was born in Glasgow, Scotland into a working-class family.[1] Ross grew up in the Gorbals neighbourhood of Glasgow, where his father worked as a lorry (truck) driver.[2] Ross stated of his youth: "In the old Glasgow days you never backed off, that's how you survived. The Gorbals was tough and you had to be tough too."[2] He served in the British Army in the Royal Engineers.[1] Ross joined the British Army at the age of 17 and served for 7 years.[3] As an engineer, he was involved in clearing minefields left over from the Second World War in Libya as well as laying minefields in the Aden Protectorate (modern Yemen) and Hong Kong.[1] After his honourable discharge, he settled in Australia, making his home in New South Wales.[1] In 1966, he settled in a coastal flat and then moved to Point Clare.[4] Ross-who was known to his friends as "Jock" instead of William-worked variously as a lorry driver and as an apprentice blacksmith.[4]

The Comancheros [edit]

The "Supreme Commander" [edit]

Ross befriended a number of Australian veterans of the Vietnam War, saying in a 2019 interview: "I came out of the army, came here. People come out of the army, especially soldiers coming back from Vietnam back in the '70s, the late '70s … they came, and they were treated like lepers … not real good. Me, as an ex-soldier, I empathised with them".[1] Ross founded Comanchero Motorcycle Club in 1968 with the name being taken from a 1961 John Wayne Western film The Comancheros that Ross adored.[5][6] The Australian journalists Lindsay Simpson and Sandra Harvey described Ross as a natural "leader of men", an extremely charismatic man whose machismo and toughness inspired much devotion from other men.[7] In 1971, Ross purchased a property along the then rural Mangrove Mountain Road for $800 that became his home.[7] Settling with Ross in his caravan were his first wife Sandy and their infant daughter Deidre.[7] Ross found the sunny New South Wales countryside to be a refreshing change from the decaying industrial neighbourhoods of the
